"For some must watch, while some must sleep,
So runs the world away."

We are informed that shorter skirts have reduced the yardage in a woman's dress well over two feet, and from present indications the textile industry is going completely out of business.

Prostrate Alabama rises to her feet once more and pulls the sheet from her invisible oppressor.

Charles Evans Hughes may have changed but how about his mind?

If the Democrats do decide to hold their convention in Indianapolis the kleagle delegates ought to feel perfectly at home.

Uncle Sam now wants France to help him enforce his prohibition law, in addition to his tariff law.

Australian missionaries are horrified as two tribes of aborigines fight a battle with spears. What did they want them to use, poison gas?

The young Duke of Norfolk, Earl Marshal of England, fails to pass his entrance examinations at Oxford. How at home he must feel in the Lords.

That Alabama grand jury demonstrates that it knows how to apply the lash pretty well itself.

Dr. Abbot says that the indispensable ultraviolet rays miss being cut off from the sun rays by a slender trace of ozone, and "on so delicate a chance," he adds, "depends human health." What d'ye mean, "chance?" As Pope said:

"All nature is but art, unknown to thee;
All chance, direction, which thou canst not see."

The Democrats are reported to be looking for a neutral place in which to hold their convention. Why not try Vermont?

Maybe Uncle Sam, in return for this favor, will help France keep out American automobiles and spare parts.

In the Gettysburg address Gen. Meade will have a monument when bronze and stone shall have long since succumbed to the ravages of time.

John Barleycorn appears to have been the most conspicuous figure among the spectators at Baltimore's big football classic—he was all over the place. The generation that "doesn't know what a saloon looked like" seems to have invented its own substitute.

Gen. Gomez's presidential boom is in pretty nearly as bad a state of collapse as Lowden's.

But isn't being financial adviser to Poland a good deal like being treasurer of the Democratic national committee?

"Hope for a season bade the world farewell,
And Freedom shrieked as Kosciusko fell."

The heart of the great patriot is returned to Poland—but it won't do as much good as that new American loan.

Hyattsville kid is going to have all he can do thirteen or fourteen years hence living down the fact that he won that first prize at a baby show.

It seems hardly necessary to remind the national committee that since the Democrats are going to nominate Al the logical convention city is Atlanta, Ga.

The least that can be said of the gallant "American Girl" Ruth Elder is that she is the Lindbergh of her sex. There's a million dollars in the kind of lipstick she uses!

That $60,000 "drive" we trust will enable the Y. W. C. A. to finish buying the rest of the blinds and get some more green paint for the white ones.

Not only did she make the trip quick,
But Mrs. Elder saved her lip stick;
The instrument for making Ruth blush
Goes down to fame with Lindy's tooth brush.

Moundsville, intended to accommodate 900, now has 1,400 guests and 400 have been turned away. You can pass a new law faster than you can erect a new jail.

Hail! Mussolini, let the ages scan
Your most wise gesture to the Vatican!
Canst thou not save United Italy
Whilst doing justice to the Holy See?
Who does, wins immortality.

RUTH ELDER LANDS; INSISTED HER PILOT BE RESCUED FIRST

REACHING DECK, SHE APPLIES LIPSTICK

Horta, Island of Fayal, Azores, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—A story of the heroism of Ruth Elder, relating how she pleaded with her rescuers to save her companion, George Haldeman, from the icy waters of the ocean before rescuing her, was told today by members of the crew of the Dutch tanker Barendrecht, which brought the crew of the American Girl to land safely.

When the American Girl descended onto the tumultuous seas beside the Barendrecht Thursday morning, 360 miles from land, Miss Elder and Haldeman clambered onto the wings of the land plane. The crew of the Barendrecht, under orders of Capt. Goos, launched a ship's boat. High rolling waves tossed the boat about and it was impossible to get near the plane.

Miss Elder, the crew related, was clinging to a wing of the plane dressed in a nonsinkable suit. Haldeman, on the other wing, was dressed for flying, but not for swimming. The crew shouted to the fliers asking if they could swim. The fliers shouted back that they could not. The men in the boat then decided to throw lines to the fliers. As they prepared to throw the line to Miss Elder they heard her shouting for them to save Haldeman first.

Could Keep Afloat.

Shouting her explanations, Miss Elder said that she could keep afloat in her suit, but that Haldeman would surely sink because he did not have his on.

The sailors threw out lines to both the fliers, and with orders to make them fast around their bodies, and both were pulled into the ship's boat.

Miss Elder's first words after putting foot on the deck of the Barendrecht were, "We will do it over again." She then thanked her rescuers, they recounted. Then she produced her lipstick, apparently oblivious to the fact that she had just stepped from the very jaws of death to safety. So deep an impression did her sang froid in the face of the great danger that she had just escaped make on the crew of the Dutch tanker that the lipstick episode was duly noted in an official summary of the rescue as given out by the Barendrecht's radio operator.

Describing the events leading to the rescue, members of the crew said that

La Guardia Escapes In Wreck of Plane

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 15 (A.P.)—Representative Fiorello H. La Guardia, of New York, and Pilot L. M. Elliott had a close escape from death or injury today when their airplane struck a rut while landing on the municipal airport field, and turned up on its nose. Both were shaken up, but not even bruised. The front of their plane and the propellor were wrecked.

Because of the accident, Representative La Guardia, noted wet leader in the House, was forced to cancel his dinner engagement with Representative William Carss, Minnesota, at Duluth tonight.

Bride Finds Husband Begging on Streets

Special to The Washington Post.

Chicago, Oct. 15.—Mrs. Frances Johnston, 18, was shopping on State street, buying pretty things for her home. She had been married three weeks and was happy. Her husband, Clarence, was generous, with a fairly prosperous income which, he said, he received as a salesman.

The bride's heart was touched by the sight of a cripple crouching on the sidewalk, with his back against a wall. She opened her purse and found a dime to drop into the extended tin cup. She glanced at the beggar's face. It was her husband.

Mrs. Johnston related the incident today to Superior Judge Joseph Sabath. The court said the divorce will be granted.

Canoe Trip Exposure Kills College Girl

Quebec, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Miss Enoy Lester, student at Columbia University, New York, and a resident of Bonduran te, Iowa, has died in a hospital here of pneumonia due to exposure.

Hungarian Banks Are Hit by Failure

Budapest, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—The largest lumber company in Hungary, that of Dr. Edmund Stern & Co., failed today for a million dollars, due to overspeculation.

The Hungarian Commercial and the Hungarian General Credit Banks were heavily hit by the failure.

HER SWIM FAKED

DR. DOROTHY C. LOGAN, English woman who has admitted faking her channel swim, in which she was credited with bettering the time made by Gertrude Ederle, and for which she was given a £1,000 prize.

CHANNEL SWIM FAKED, PRIZE WINNER ADMITS

IN BOAT MOST OF WAY

London, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—The News of the World will say tomorrow that Dorothy Cochrane Logan, London physician, in a confession to the paper declared she did not swim the English Channel. The woman physician, whose record-breaking performance was announced last Tuesday, in the "confession" to the paper declared that she had perpetrated the hoax to show how it was easy to deceive the public and in order to show the desirability of establishing an international commission to supervise and certify all channel swims.

"It was a fake to end fakes," the physician, whose swims under the name of Miss Mona McClellan and was widely hailed as the woman whose time of 13 hours and 10 minutes bettered the record of 14 hours and 31 minutes held by Gertrude Ederle, of New York, is quoted as saying.

Her revelation is supported by her trainer, Horace T. Carey, and her good faith protected by a letter she wrote explaining her purpose before leaving Hythe, England, for Cape Gris Nez, France, from which point she was said to have started her swim.

Dr. Logan in making the disclosure returned to the News of the World a check for £1,000, which the paper had offered to the English woman who should improve upon Miss Ederle's time.

After entering the sea at Cape Gris Nez Monday afternoon, Miss Logan relates, she swam until she was beyond the sight of land or of any possible observation. Then she was taken into the boat which was convoying her. This was manned by her trainer and two other men acquainted with the whole plan.

She says she remained on the boat for several hours, during which she

New York, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—American capitalists who may develop natural resources and transportation facilities in Abyssinia will be offered human slaves at cut rates by Ras Tafari, prince regent and emperor, James E. Baum, of the Field Museum of Natural History, of Chicago, said here today.

Baum, who recently returned from a year's sojourn in Africa, said the emperor hopes to stimulate American interests in the development of Abyssinia's natural resources by guaranteeing unlimited quantities of slave labor at nominal prices.

$1,805,869 Judgment Awarded to Denby

Detroit, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—A judgment of $1,805,869.90 has been awarded in circuit court here to Edwin Denby, former Secretary of the Navy, in a suit growing out of a land contract entered into between Mr. Denby and Warren E. Ellis, of Detroit.

Under the decree Ellis is given until next January 5 to make payment. In the event payment is not made the land, eight parcels in two suburban townships, will be sold at public auction.

Ellis, according to Denby's petition, paid $30,000 of the purchase price when the contract was executed in November, 1926, but defaulted in subsequent payments.

Marie Prevost, Star, Sues for a Divorce

Los Angeles, Oct 15 (A.P.).—Marie Prevost, film star, today filed suit for divorce against Kenneth Harlan, featured player of moviedom. The charge was extreme mental cruelty.

Miss Prevost, who entered pictures as a Mack Sennett bathing beauty, rapidly attained stardom, set forth in her complaint that Harlan furnished her no amusement, stayed out late at night, and was unreasonably jealousfl The actress complained that she became ill as a result of Harlan's alleged treatment.

Harlan recently returned from a Hawaiian trip.

KLANSMEN ACCUSED OF MOB FLOGGINGS IN 102 INDICTMENTS

Score of Lashings Laid to Members by an Alabama Jury.

BARBARIC TERRORISM ALLEGED IN REPORT

Leaders Held Responsible; Messages From Evans, Wizard, Demanded.

Luverne, Ala., Oct. 15 (A.P.)—Inquiry into masked violence and the workings of the Ku Klux Klan by a special grand jury ended late today with 102 indictments against men charged with complicity in 20 or more lashings in Crenshaw County. The grand jury also made sweeping charges that men high in the councils of the "invisible empire" were "unworthy of trust."

All indictments, except one, were against members of the Ku Klux Klan, and the jury, which pent a week in the inquiry, reported that, with a single exception, all the masked lashings were committed by members of the klan, wearing hoods and robes of the order.

Likening conditions in Crenshaw County to those which existed during the Spanish inquisition, the grand jury pointed an accusing finger at James Esdale, grand dragon of the klan in Alabama; Cecil Davis, former grand titan of the Southern province of the order; the Rev. F. A. Nalls, former head of the Georgiana Klavern of the klan, and Ira B. Thompson, said to be cyclops of the Luverne unit of the organization.

"Derelict in Duty," They Say.

In its report to Circuit Judge A. E. Gamble, who presided at the hearing, the grand jury said they "were derelict to their duty as citizens in their conduct of Klan affairs; if they had afforded the leadership in the Ku Klux Klan which should have been given by them, these outrages never would have occurred."

"This barbaric terrorism of the rule of the mask and the lash," the report continued, "can be attributed directly to evil leadership in the Ku Klux Klan, at war with all constituted authorities."

The grand jury emphatically stressed the position of Esdale and Nalls in directing the policies of the Klan, and said:

"If the Rev. L. A. Nalls had been as continuously engaged in serving his congregation as in serving brutal floggings to defenseless men and women and attempting to regulate morality behind a Ku Klux mask, many of these crimes would not have been committed."

"If he had been less of a lash wielder and more of a preacher of peace, con-

Marine Colonel Made Nicaraguan General

Managua, Nicaragua, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Col. Louis M. Gulick, U. S. M. C., commanding the Second brigade, in command of the Marines in Nicaragua in the absence of Brig. Gen. Logan Feland, was made a division general in the Nicaraguan army today.

Man Falls 12 Floors; Misses Pedestrians

Chicago, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Walter E. Miller, an official of Fred S. James & Co., insurance brokers, was killed today when he fell from the twelfth floor of the Insurance Exchange Building, in Jackson boulevard. The body landed in the street, narrowly missing pedestrians and automobiles. According to employes, Miller's death was accidental.

"BIG TRAIN" QUITS.

WALTER JOHNSON, veteran speedball pitcher of the Washington Club, who has announced his voluntary retirement from the big leagues after 21 years of continuous service with the Nationals.

WALTER JOHNSON ENDS LONG BASEBALL CAREER

"Big Train" Granted Release After 21 Years' Service With Capital Team.

THINKS BEST DAYS OVER

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

Walter Johnson, called the greatest pitcher baseball has ever known and a hero with the Washington team ever since he pitched his first major league game here on August 2, 1907, has "crossed" the diamond experts by singing his own swan song. At Johnson's request, President Clark Griffith, Nat owner, will give the "Old Master" his unconditional release, provided waivers are granted by the other major league clubs which doubtless will be done.

Johnson, while declaring that he still thinks he could win a few games each season for the next two or three realizes that he may no longer rate as a star and, as he explains it, "simply does not want to be in the way next season," and so requested his release.

"I hate like everything to think of not being with the Washington team next season," said Johnson last night, "and hate to think of the possibility that I may, for business reasons, have to leave Washington, where I have been treated royally by the fans. I have no definite plans. I have saved up a little money and am looking around for a good investment."

Johnson would like to continue in the national game, he declares, and is looking around for an investment into some minor league club. "I have already had one or two baseball propositions made me," he stated, "and am considering them, while I also am considering one or two opportunities in the business world. As I have already said, my plans are indifinte and I really don't know what my final decision will be." Johnson intimated that, in case he bought into a minor league club, he "might" pitch an occasional game.

Australian Natives Battle With Spears

London, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Dispatches from Perth, West Australia, state that two native tribes in the far north, their bodies decorated with war paint, have fought a battle with spears.

Hundreds of the spears were sent hurtling through the air, killing and wounding many of the Aborigines. Efforts of missionaries to intervene were without success, the dispatches say.

Mother Dies Viewing Son, Left Guard, Play

Taken out of the game because of injuries near the end of the contest, Capt. Baier learned of his mother's death.

DEMOCRATS' EYES ON INDIANA AS STATE FOR 1928 MEETING

Success Hoped For There Through Bad Repute of Republicans.

GOV. SMITH IS ONLY BLUR TO PROSPECT

Ku Klux Has Been Influential in Swaying Elections in Hoosierdom.

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

Democrats are looking so longingly at Indiana that there is a strong possibility their national convention will go there next year. Clem L. Shaver, chairman of the national committee, yesterday announced that the meeting of the committee to decide upon a meeting place would be held here January 12. As to whether a Jackson day dinner will accompany it remains to be determined. Indianapolis is one of the contenders for the meeting place and in so far as those who conferred yesterday and Friday are concerned there is considerable favor for it.

The Republicans quietly admit that they are in bad odor in the Hoosier State. Some leaders are so stirred up in fact by the recent scandals that they are insistant that President Coolidge run again and pull them out of the hole.

In so far as this one State is concerned the Democrats are fearful that despite the advantage which they have over the Republicans, they can not carry it with the party's present outstanding man. The Ku Klux Klan found a prolific field in Indiana and although it is in ill repute there now, the feeling of Democratic leaders here is that the spirit which made possible the Klan's growth still remains. For that reason they are afraid that Gov. Smith of N York, who at this time seems the most promising candidate, would be the last one in the world to carry Indiana.

Smith Can Carry New York.

On the other hand, Smith is the only man who can carry New York and New York has far more electoral votes than Indiana The venerable Tom Taggart has brought forward Evans B. Woollen, Indiana banker, and he is convinced he can at least place a State ticket in office and has hopes the banker will carry the country. This is the opposition the New York governor must contend with.

The Democratic chairman who was the personal appointee of John W. Davis, the Democrats' presidential candidate in 1924, began upon both sides of the Smith question here in his two days' conferences.

BARONESS' SUICIDE A MYSTERY TO GIGLI

Tenor Had Strong Friendship for Woman Who Ended Life in Naples.

Winnipeg, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Informed of the suicide of Baroness Apollonia Markwiart, at Naples, and of her last request that his photograph be buried with her, Beniamino Gigli, opera tenor, who is in Winnipeg to keep a concert engagement, declared he could in no way account for the action of the titled Russian woman.

"I met the baroness while in Berlin last summer, and our acquaintance developed into strong friendship. Her death comes as a great shock to me," Mr. Gigli said.

Naples, Italy, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—A beautiful Russian woman who committed suicide by poison here last night with the request in a note that many photographs of the noted tenor, Beniamino Gigli, in her room be buried with her, was identified as the Baroness Apollonia Alessandra Markwiart.

The baroness was a Russian by birth, but had long lived in Berlin and had been visiting Rome and other Italian cities for the past few weeks.

Speech 7 Days Long Is Begun by Kemal

Angora, Turkey, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—President Mustapha Kemal Pasha today started a record oratorical flight when he began his seven-day speech at the opening of the first general congress of the Turkish Peoples party. The section of the speech delivered today was of historical character and pictured what he described as the tragic situation of Turkey in 1919, four years before his ascendancy to power.

His program is the creation of an entirely new Turkish state on the basis of absolute independence, especially in foreign relations, Kemal declared.

Chicago Stork Arrives On Elevated Station

Chicago, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—A son was born yesterday to Mrs. Nina Hughes, 27, on the platform of a loop elevated station, where she awaited a train to go to a hospital.

Title Hopes Dashed In Football Contests

A nation gripped in the tenseness of major football games yesterday saw the dashing of not a few championship hopes and the corresponding rise to fame of many contending teams.

Chief among the developments of the day were Notre Dame's defeat of Navy, 19-6; Penn State's triumph over Penn, 20-0; Georgetown's defeat at the hands of Syracuse, 19-6; Georgia Tech's victory over Alabama, 13-0; Maryland's conquest of Virginia Polytech, 13-7.

Other scores were:

Catholic University, 13; St. John's, 0.
George Washington, 6; Rutgers, 0.
Virginia, 13; V. M. I., 8.
Northwestern, 19; Ohio State, 13.
Chicago U., 19; Purdue, 0.

5 ARE KILLED IN CRASH OF EXPERIMENTAL AERO

Pilot, Reporter and Three of One Family Die at Field Near San Antonio.

PLANE FALLS 200 FEET

San Antonio, Tex., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Five persons were killed here early tonight when a local experimental airplane crashed near Stinson Field, the municipal airport.

L. L. Clark, 32, of Houston, who was piloting the plane, was killed when the plane plunged to the ground, as were Mrs. Ed Cavanaugh, of San Antonio, her 8-month-old daughter, Nancy Katherine, and William Winburn, a reporter for the San Antonio Light. Ed Cavanaugh, husband of Mrs. Cavanaugh, died shortly after the accident in a hospital.

Observers said the plane was flying at an altitude of about 200 feet when the motor apparently went dead and the plane crashed into the field.

Cavanaugh had planned to make the flight noteworthy by having three generations of his own family in the air at once. He had planned to have his mother, Mrs. A. T. Cavanaugh, accompany him, but circumstances made this impossible and his wife took the vacant seat in the plane.

Winburn was to have written a "feature story" for his newspaper. A photographer for the Light took several pictures as the party boarded the plane as a part of the "feature."

There was no room for a sixth passenger, and the photographer was disappointment that he could not make the "hop." A few moments later he took pictures of the wreck.

L. L. Baker, of San Antonio, owner of the plane, is a storekeeper at Duncan Field, the Army's air intermediate depot here. He was unable to assign a cause for the crash.

The plane was one of the first monoplanes turned out by a standard manufacturer who has been making biplanes. The plane was equipped with a radial water-cooled motor. Cavanaugh was formerly an Army flier. Baker said the plane had performed satisfactorily when in the air early in the day. In the pockets of the reporter were found shattered plates of the pictures taken by the photographer before the party ascended.

55,000 Watch Rockne's Stars, Flanagan and Niemic, Run Wild.

"SHOCK TROOPS" FAIL TO HOLD MIDSHIPMEN

By SHIRLEY L. POVICH
(Sports Editor of The Post.)

Baltimore Stadium, Baltimore, Oct. 15.—On the sward of Baltimore Stadium the Naval Academy's Football Team, unbeaten for two seasons, came to grief today as a Notre Dame eleven again came out of the West to leave destruction in its path on another farflung Eastern field.

Fifty-five thousand persons witnessed the team coached by Knute Rockne lay low and trample the Navy Team which last year was recognized as champion of all the football teams. Their silky brown pants gleaming in a kindly October sun, the players of Notre Dame—human projectiles as they hurtled, ball in hand, over and through the Navy line—galloped to victory by a score of 19 to 6 in the game that was the choicest attraction in the land on a day when football presented a score of classic contests.

Navy was humbled in true Rockne style. The team coached by the Norwegain wizard of the gridiron spotted the Midshipmen to a 6-point lead, raised Navy hopes high as the contest wore into the second half, and then, with a suddenness that was startling, unveiled a diversified but deadly attack that scored three touchdowns and erased all doubt that the better team would win.

Vast Gathering Thrilled.

Among the Notre Dame squad were two players whose presence on the field of play found the vast gathering thrilled to the marrow at the sight of football played as Rockne coaches it. These players threw utter consternation and dismay into a Navy team, which in two seasons of playing could point to a tie game as the only blot upon an otherwise unsullied record.

Knute Rockne's star starred today. Chris Flanagan, left half back, possesses the ability for which he is famed. And a substitute, Jack Niemic, rose to new heights. In the story of how Notre Dame beat Navy by a margin of two touchdowns, the names of Chris Flanagan and Jack Niemic are written in bold letters. And another player, an end, known as Walsh, found today the occasion to attain football immortality.

Notre Dame employed three distinct and effective methods to score the touchdowns that defeated Navy. The men of Rockne capitalized a "break" in the game—a blocked punt—to register the touchdown that tied the score and later in the game, they scored on a trick play, a fake line buck which culminated in an end run, and the most deadly of all football weapons—the forward pass, in which they excelled.

Flanagan is Star.

Chris Flanagan placed Notre Dame in position to score two of its touchdowns. The running, twisting, sidestepping Irish son of the Midwest was a treat to watch. There were fears that Rockne's team was to founder upon the reefs of a Navy line as many another team had foundered in two seasons until Flanagan was injected into the line-up.

Flanagan blazed the way. He showed Notre Dame that the Navy line could be pierced. Two of his long runs were sensational and his dashes for intermediate distances were of the same order. He was a continual threat and the concentration of the Navy defense that Flanagan commanded allowed his teammates in the back field to make gains upon their own account.

Flanagan's understudy, Niemic, was also proficient. This player next to Flanagan was Notre Dame's chief ground gainer, and he scored one of Notre Dame's touchdowns on a 9-yard run, flinging off three prospective tacklers who sought vainly to avert the score.

Walsh Shows Alertness.

To Walsh, left end of the Notre Dame Team, was presented the first opportunity to score for Notre Dame. It was in the second half with Navy leading, 6 to 0, and Walsh's alertness tied the score. Lloyd attempted to kick on his own 20-yard line, and Fredericks broke through and blocked the attempt.

The ball bounded off Frederick's chest to the sidelines, but Walsh pounced upon it in fair territory, just 10 yards from a goal. He literally scrambled the remaining distance to a touchdown to tie the score. Dahman's kick for the extra point was wide, and Notre Dame missed a chance to take the lead.

Navy had taken the lead before the end of the first quarter, completely victimizing the "shock troops" which Rockne sent in to start the game. A fumbled punt by Niemic placed Navy in scoring position, and Navy, with passes interspersing a running attack advanced to within 25 yards of

Hesse Is Investigating Abernethy-Police Raids

Major Wants to Know if Fruitless Demonstration Was Made Just to Gratify Pastor's Desire to See How Volstead Law Is Enforced.

Maj. Edwin B. Hesse, superintendent of police, last night announced he is making a personal investigation of reports that police of the Second Precinct took the Rev. Dr. William S. Abernethy, pastor of the Calvary Paptist Church, on a series of fruitless liquor raids Friday night for the purpose of quenching the pastor's curiosity to "see how it is done." The Rev. Dr. Abernethy is president of the Citizens Service Association for Law and Order.

The major's ire was aroused when he received reports that five homes were broken into by police of the Second Precinct during the series of raids and no liquor found and the police chief announced he was going to find out whether the raids were based on good police judgment or whether the forays were staged merely as a show for Dr. Abernethy.

Accompanying Dr. Abernethy on the raids was Harry N. Douthitt, field secretary for the Citizens' Service Association for Law and Order, who has been furnishing evidence of alleged liquor law violations upon which the police department has acted.

Maj. Hesse said last night he was "surprised" when he learned of Friday night's raids. The police chief said he had no information as to whether Dr. Abernethy had asked to accompany the police on the raids or whether he had been invited by officials of the Second Precinct, but that he was going to "find out today."

When informed last night of Maj. Hesse's plans to investigate his trip with the police Friday night, Dr. Abernethy declared he had no comment to make and would not announce his "future plans."

20,000 FROM CAPITAL SEE NAVY DEFEATED BY NOTRE DAME MEN

Many Arrive Late, Forgetting About Crowds at Laurel and Iron Horse Fair.

RIDE TO BALTIMORE TAKES THREE HOURS

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

Baltimore, Oct. 15.—Twenty thousand Washington football fans journeyed here today to see Notre Dame thrash Navy, and fully half of them arrived late. One reason was that so many of them motored over the Baltimore pike, and the two other reasons were the horse races at Laurel and the Fair of the Iron Horse, just outside of this city.

In the stretch between Washington and Laurel the automobiles were running fender to fender At Laurel a good many machines turned off, but this did not relieve the congestion entirely. Not until Halethorpe—the scene of the fair—was reached, were there any open spaces for the motorists bound for the game.

The average Washingtonian, traveling by automobile, estimated that the trip would take about one hour and a half. As a matter of fact, it required almost three hours.

The Washington fans—evidently divided in their sympathies between Notre Dame and Navy—were part of a crowd of 55,000 that spread over the big stadium on the outskirts of Baltimore. They came here to see a game that might very well have been played in Washington—if Washington had a stadium to accommodate it.

John Barleycorn in Evidence.

John Barleycorn, who used to have "late and lamented" tacked on to his name, was much in evidence at today's game. Hundreds of "dead soldiers" could be seen in and under the stadium after the contest was over. The police removed several men from the stadium, but nobody was arrested. Toward the end of the game a red-colored ambulance drove up and carried away a man who had fallen over his seat.

The game had all the color and pageantry that goes with a Navy football game. A half-hour before game time the cadets from Annapolis swung on to the field, while the crowd cheered. Shortly thereafter the Navy Team trotted on to the field and their cohorts roared out "Anchors Aweigh." A minute or so later the green jersies of the Notre Dame squad flitted across the gridiron. From then until the game started the air was filled with music and song.

The "Fighting Irish" the Notre Dame warriors are called, but a glance at the line-up made this sobriquet seem paradoxical. Mingled among such names as Flanagan, Hogan and McCarthy were the name of Voedisch, Duncolovic and Polisky.

Celebrities Attend Game.

Among the celebrities at the game were Secretary of the Navy Curtis D. Wilbur, Assistant Secretary Edward P. Warner, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland and Mayor Fred Broenig of Baltimore. Virtually all of the officials of the Baltimore government were present.

Other box holders included Maj. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commander of the Third Corps Area; Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune, commandant of the Marine Corps; Representative Martin B. Madden, of Illinois; Rear Admiral Edward W. Eberle, chief of naval operations; Rear Admiral J. D. Beuret, chief of the Bureau of Construction and Repair; Rear Admiral Thomas P. Magruder, commander of the League Island Navy Yard; Rear Admiral C. F. Billard, commandant of the Coast Guard; Rear Admiral Charles Morris, chief of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts.

Rear Admiral Thomas J. Senn, assistant chief of Naval Operations; Rear Admiral C. C. Bloch, chief of the Bureau of Ordnance; Rear Admiral John Halligan, jr., chief of the Bureau of Engineering; Rear Admiral E. H. Campbell, judge advocate general of the Navy; Capt. O. G. Marsin, assistant chief of the Bureau of Navigation; Capt. Sinclair Gannon, commandant of the midshipmen, and Col. Robert M. Thompson.

Praying in Vestry Brings on Arrest

The desire of Frank E. Haggerty, of Clarendon, Va., to worship in privacy landed him in a police station yesterday when Sexton John Scott, of St. Mary's Catholic Church, called a patrolman because the worshipper insisted upon praying in a private vestry. The sexton told Patrolman R. E. Turner, who was sent in response to his call, that Haggerty had been around the church for about two hours and refused to leave the vestry.

Turner arrested the man as he left the church and took him to headquarters where Detective O'Den questioned him. The prisoner convinced the detective that he was actuated only by religious motives and was released without charges being placed against him.

Arrested Twice, Fined Thrice in 30 Minutes

Battisto Giannini, of 232 G street northeast, just couldn't get along with the law last night. Twice within a half hour he ran afoul of policemen, and three times within the same period Judge Isaac R. Hitt, in night Traffic Court, spoke to him. The first time the judge said "Eight dollars," the second time "Ten dollars," and the third time "Two dollars."

Giannini first was brought to the court by Policeman C. O. Rouse, of the Fifth Precinct, who told the judge his prisoner had been driving 30 miles an hour on K street south. Judge Hitt made his first pronouncement and Giannini left. Shortly after he returned in company with Policeman E. Williams, of the Traffic Bureau, who said the man cut a corner at Sixth and D streets northwest and that there was no tail light on his car. The judge spoke twice then.

GRENADE IS FOUND IN COMFORT STATION

Consternation reigned among the 40 men employed by the District for the prevention and detection of crime when Policeman C. C. Shelton, of the Traffic Bureau, walked into police headquarters about 7 o'clock last night and handed Capt. Walter Emerson a hand grenade which he had found in the public comfort station at Seventh street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Shelton explained that he thought the grenade was loaded, warned against "pulling the pin," and walked hurriedly away. So did most of the detectives. Capt. Emerson, holding the machine, was the "goat." He placed it gingerly on his desk and started to follow the others. The grenade started to roll off the desk, and Emerson grabbed it again, choosing the lesser of two evils.

Air Beacon Planned At Edgewood Arsenal

An airway direction beacon is to be erected on the Washington-New York air route at Edgewood Arsenal, Md., the War Department announced yesterday. The airways section of the Department of Commerce requested the Army to place the beacon at the Maryland military reservation.

It will be a 50-foot tower, with a 24-inch revolving searchlight. A concrete arrow 55 feet long by 12 feet wide, flush with the ground, will indicate the north and south direction. The installation and maintenance of the equipment will be handled by the Department of Commerce.

Clark Griffith's Son Is Critically Ill

Bruce Griffith, 11-year-old adopted son of Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Baseball Club, is critically ill with a heart malady, the result of a form of blood poisoning from which the lad has suffered for years. Early this morning doctors told his foster father that though he is holding his own, there is little hope he will recover.

Griffith said that Bruce had been ill a number of times before the poisoning affected his heart and that it has been known for some time that sooner or later it would result fatally. Four physicians are attending the youth. It is probable that the boy's condition will deter the baseball magnate from attending the annual meeting of the American League officials in Chicago tomorrow.

Dry Force to Use Captured Craft to Patrol Potomac

Speedboat to Be Christened, Without Anything Intoxicating, "Charles C. Rouse" by Widow of Slain Prohibition Agent.

The dry force of Maryland and the District is preparing to launch its navy, to patrol the waters around Baltimore and Washington, though principally the Maryland city.

The prohibition officers have rum-runners of Florida to thank for the 45 foot speedboat which will comprise the navy, and which will be launched within a few days from a dock at Fort McHenry, where it is being reconditioned. During the strenuous campaign in the Southern State last winter, the agents captured the boat, and, instead of selling it, have set it aside as a patrol boat for use in this vicinity.

John F. J. Herbert, prohibition administrator for Maryland and the District, will be the "admiral" of the one-ship navy, and he is confident it will prove a potent force in cutting the alcoholic flow, particularly into the biggest city of "Maryland free state."

The boat has been named the Charles C. Rouse, in honor of a former dry agent who met his death while in action. His widow will christen the craft when it takes to the water. But she won't christen it with champagne or any alcoholic stimulant, according to "Admiral" Herbert.

Although there are plenty of varieties of spirits in the storehouses of the prohibition force, even including the "juice of the grape," the dry navy will slide down the ways without the encouragement of "old bubbly." The dry officials apparently think that their now perfectly law-abiding vessel received more than an adequate acquaintance with the forbidden beverages when it was voyaging about the Florida keys.

GROCERY MANAGER ROBBED IN HOLDUP

Thief Overlooks $500 in Safe in His Eagerness to Flee With $35 in Bag.

A shabbily dressed white man held up Walter Dove, manager of the Sanitary Grocery Co. store at 2415 Bladensburg road northeast last night as he was closing the store, forced him to surrender a cash bag containing $35 in small change and bills, and fled, overlooking more than $500 in the store safe, and $35 in Dove's pockets.

Dove told police that he had sent his clerks home at 9 o'clock and locked the store door while he balanced his books for the week. He placed more than $500 in the safe, he said, and unlocked the door to go home.

Shortly after 10 o'clock, when he opened the door the bandit stepped in and leveled a pistol at his head, Dove said.

"Give me that bag" he ordered pointing to the cash bag near the cash register. After placing that bag under his coat the robber backed from the store warning Dove not to make an outcry. Dove telephoned for police as soon as the man left the store.

SIX HURT WHEN AUTO HURTLES FROM ROAD

Passengers Are Injured When Driver Is Blinded by Approaching Car's Lights.

Six persons were injured early this morning when an automobile ran off Benning road near Anacostia road northeast, and struck a telephone pole.

The injured are Francis Rollins, 19 years old, of 1518 E street southeast, driver of the machine, who suffered a fractured arm; Lillian Mow, 15 years old, 755 Tenth street southeast, cuts on the head and bruises; Lawrence Swan, 20 years old, 643 East Capitol street, cut on the face; James Wald, 32 years old, 3225 Ely place southeast, cuts on the head; Mildred Miller, 12 years old, 733 Tenth street southeast, cuts on the legs and shock, and Joseph Rabbitt, 18 years old, 1524 E street southeast, cuts on the left leg.

The seventh member of the party, Carl Thomas, 18 years old, of 111 N street southeast, was uninjured. Rollins said he lost control of the machine when he was blinded by the headlights on an approaching car. The injured were taken to Casualty Hospital and treated by Dr. Leon S. Gordon.

Vegetarian Club Planned.

More than 50 persons, interested in the organization of a vegetarian club, gathered at the home of Dr. T. M. Schippell, 1329 Sixteenth street northwest, last night to discuss organization plans. A constitution and by-laws were read, but action on their adoption was deferred until Wednesday night at 8 o'clock, when another meeting will be held at Dr. Schippell's home.

Thieves Get $600 Loot.

Discovering the front door of the home of Mrs. Carroll J. Schaeffer, 801 Quackenbos street northwest, unlocked yesterday afternoon, thieves walked into the house and collected several pieces of jewelry and silverware, valued at more than $600. No members of the Schaeffer family were at home when the robbery occurred.

THIEVES CRACK WRONG SAFE, MISSING $2,000

With two men held for investigation, Ninth Percinct police are seeking in the Northeast section of the city suspects in connection with a safe "ripping" in the warehouse of the Carpel Co., at 1361 H street northeast, early yesterday morning. The yeggmen opened a small safe, which contained no money, and were unable to get at $2,000 in cash which Harry C. Carpel, manager of the concern, said was in a larger safe.

Arthur Herbert, 19 years old, and Arthur Chamberlain, 23 years old, are being held at the Ninth Precinct station for investigation, following the police "round up."

Entrance to the building was gained by "jimmying" an outside door. The marauders strewed the floor with valuable papers when the first safe yielded no money. A drill was then applied to the door of the larger safe and its hinges knocked off. The door held fast, however, and the safecrackers departed, first sampling pickles, orange juice and relish from some jars on shelves nearby.

Auto Driver Cleared In Killing of Boy

The death of William Carrick, 6 years old, 34 K street northeast, who was fatally injured by an automobile which struck him Friday, was held to be accidental by a coroner's jury yesterday The boy died at Casualty Hospital soon after the accident.

He is said to have run from the sidewalk into the path of a machine driven by Eugene William Martin, 23 years old, of 105 I street northwest. A test of the car's brakes showed them to be in good order.

MASONS TODAY HOLD CEREMONY IN HONOR OF PIKE'S MEMORY

Dignitaries of Order From All Sections to Attend Scottish Rite Service.

MEREDITH TO DELIVER ADDRESS AT TEMPLE

Supreme Council, Southern Jurisdiction, to Meet This Week.

Masonic dignitaries from virtually every part of this country will be in Washington this week for the biennial session of the Supreme Council of Scottish Rite of Freemasonry, Southern jurisdiction.

At 3 o'clock today in the House of the Temple, 1733 Sixteenth street northwest, the session will be opened with the Albert Pike memorial service. E. T. Meredith, former Secretary of Agriculture, will give the principal address. Grand Commander John H. Cowles will preside.

Visitors Expected.

Visitors from foreign jurisdictions will include Leo M. Abbott, grand commander of the supreme council, northern Masonic jurisdiction; Alfred F. Webster, grand commander, and Sir John Gibson and J. Alex Cameron, past grand commanders, of the Supreme Council of Canada, and Thomas E. Ramos, grand commander of the Supreme Council of Mexico.

The service today will commemorate the memory of Albert Pike, one time commissioner of Indian affairs in Oklahoma and a general in the Confederate Army. He was grand commander of the Supreme Council of the Southern jurisdiction from 1859 to 1891. Pike, a philosopher and writer, devoted a greater portion of his life to Scottish Rite Masonry and by intensive research work was able to penetrate to some extent the wall of mystery, which surrounds the origin of the Scottish Rite.

Favors Federal University.

At the last meeting here in 1925, the council adopted a resolution favoring the creation of a department of education with a secretary in the President's Cabinet. The council also favors a national university at Washington, supported by the Government; compulsory use of English as the instruction language in grammar school grades; adequate provision for the education of aliens; entire separation of church and State and opposition to every attempt to appropriate public money for support of sectarian institutions; the American public school nonpartisan, nonsectarian, efficient, democratic for all children of all people and equal educational opportunities for all; and the inculcation of patriotism, love for the flag and respect for law and order.

Three Men Sentenced For Thefts of Autos

James E. Butler, colored, charged with stealing two automobiles, was sentenced to serve two years yesterday by Chief Justice McCoy in Criminal Court. He stole one car on June 19 and stripped it of tires and accessories, and on June 24 stole another and changed the tags, the record shows.

Clarence G. Engle was also sentenced to serve two years for stealing two cars. He stole one June 6 and while out on bail on this offense stole another, it was charged. Paul Thomas, colored, was also sentenced to serve two years for stealing cars.

Samuel Balsam's Body Recovered From River

Rivermen yesterday recovered the body of Samuel Balsam, 19 years old, 713 Fourteenth street southeast, from the channel of the Potomac, near the mouth of Popes Creek. Balsam was drowned last Sunday when he fell from a launch opposite the naval proving grounds at Dahlgren, Va.

Funeral services will be held at the Zurhorst funeral chapel, 301 East Capitol street, tomorrow at 2 o'clock. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery. The youth his survived by his parents, John and Carrie Balsam, with whom he made his home.

Society Woman's Car Looted of Jewelry

Jewelry and silverware valued at more than $80[illegible] were stolen from the automobile of Mrs. Montgomery Blair, society woman, of 1155 Sixteenth street northwest, while the machine was parked nea[illegible] Eighteenth street and Connecticut avenue northwest yesterday morning.

The loot consising of an amethyst brooch with a pearl border set in platinum, two thimble-shaped ornaments set with diamonds, and a quantity of assorted silverware, was in a basket in the tonneau of the car.

'Dad' Rounds Out 50 Years In Car Company Employ

Starter of Mount Pleasant Line to Continue Seeing That Washington Gets to Work on Time as He Has Done for Decades.

When Samuel Fowler, known to the street railway men as "Dad," starts out Tuesday on his daily task as starter of the Mount Pleasant line of the Washington Railway & Electric Co., he will round out 50 years of service in the great task of seeing that Washington gets to work on time.

Upon his left sleeve Tuesday morning he will wear ten new golden stars—a testimony to 50 years continuous service with the Washington Railway & Electric Co. And more than that, they will mean that he has the longest record of continuous service with the company of any living employe.

On October 18, 1877, he made adieu to a blacksmith's shop and was given custody of a one-horse street car by the old Metropolitan Railway. His first run was on Ninth street, but later he was placed in charge of a two-horse vehicle that traveled on F street to Capitol Hill.

In describing the many bitter winter nights he had driven his horses along F street, he said that often his nose was frozen. "They don't have winters like they use to," he declared. "Last winter the snow plow was used only once or twice, while during the winters of my earlier years with the company the plows were used constantly."

He believes the Biblical prophecy, "We shall only know the seasons by the budding of the trees," is being fulfilled.

"Dad" has been at his present post at the end of the Mount Pleasant line for 23 years. He has seen Mount Pleasant spring from a wilderness, and in his 72 years has watched Washington grow from a village to a metropolis.

"Dad" Fowler, or "Uncle Sam," as many of the railway employes speak of him, neither drinks, smokes nor chews, and he possesses a great antipathy to the cigarette. "The men will stop to light a cigarette even when their cars are running late," he snorted.

"Dad" wouldn't say anything against feminine apparel. He dismissed the subject by saying the girls' skirts perhaps were a little short sometimes, but the girls were all good and it was their business if they chose to wear their skirts short.

"Dad" is eligible to retire any time now, it was stated at the company's headquarters, but he has no idea of retiring. He asserted he might be a "little disfigured, but he was still in the ring." Then, too, he has made so many friends in the neighborhood whom he would miss should he surrender his post. The happy laughter of the neighborhood children, the smiles of acquaintances—all mean so much to him.

POLICEMAN WOUNDED BY BROTHER OFFICER

Shot in Leg When Mistaken for Burglar, Fleeing From Grocery Store.

A burglar dashed to liberty as one policeman shot another during a chase near 2477 M street northwest early yesterday morning. Policeman Joseph M. Maynard, colored, 32 years old, of the Third Precinct, the wounded man, received a bullet in the leg when he was mistaken for a robber, reported to be ransacking Smith Bros. Grocery at the M street address by Policeman Walter A. Walker. It was found that the bullet had grazed Maynard's leg.

The two policemen were among four who were sent to answer a burglar call. Maynard saw a man jump out of a window, he says, and gave chase down an alley. Walker called to him to halt, and when Maynard continued to run, drew his gun and fired. Walker, attached to the Seventh Precinct, had been temporarily transferred to the Third for reserve duty.

MAJ. ALLEN G. THURMAN KILLS SELF AT FORT BLISS

INJURED IN POLO GAME

El Paso, Tex., Oct 15 (A.P.).—Facing retirement from the Army as the result of an injury received in a polo game about a year ago, Maj. Allen G. Thurman, 39, shot and killed himself today at Fort Bliss.

His wife is the former Dorothy Fitch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Fitch, prominent in Boston society. Mrs. Fitch and her three daughters have been visiting in Boston.

Maj. Allen G. Thurman was well known in Washington, and served here with the operations division, general staff, during a part of 1919 and 1920. He was born in Georgia, May 12, 1888, and was appointed to the United States Military Academy from that state in 1909. He was graduated as a second lieutenant of cavalry in 1913.

He was promoted to first lieutenant of cavalry in 1916, and captain of cavalry in 1917. In June, 1918, he was made a major of cavalry in the National Army. He served in France with the Tank Corps, and was stationed for a time in Paris. He was honorably discharged as major in March, 1920, reverting to his old status as captain of cavalry in the Regular Army. On July 1, 1920, he was promoted to major. In June, 1926, he was transferred to the adjutant general's department.

REMUS TO CHARGE PLOT AGAINST LIFE AS DEFENSE BASIS

TRIAL DATE IS FIXED BY JUDGE FOR NOV. 14

Gunmen Waiting to Slay Him Day He Shot Wife, He Tells the Court.

Special to The Washington Post.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Oct. 15.—Filing of an application to take depositions in various cities from 75 witnesses, including those of high Government officials, disclosed in Judge Chester B. Shook's criminal court today that when George Remus goes on trial for first degree murder on November 14 he will ask acquittal on a defense based on alleged conspiracy entered into by his wife, Mrs. Imogene Remus, and Franklin Dodge, jr., to defraud him of his property while he was in prison and finally to take his life. He will seek to show that it was knowledge of this conspiracy, carried on for a number of years, and of recent plots to take his life, that caused Remus to shoot and kill his wife on October 6 in Eden Park.

The filing of the application by Remus and Charles Elston, his associate counsel, came after he had been arraigned and entered a plea of not guilty and Judge Shook set the trial for November 14.

An immediate objection was raised by Prosecutor Charles P. Taft to the granting of authority to take the depositions. He contended that the testimony which would be brought in through depositions would be irrelevant.

Among the persons whose depositions are sought are John H. Sargent, Attorney General; Roy Haynes, former prohibition commissioner; Representative Fiorella La Guardia, of New York, and a long list of Federal officials, bankers, hotel managers, attorneys and others.

Application Is Dismissed.

After hearing arguments, Judge Shook dismissed the application without prejudice, instructing Remus and Elston to bring in on Monday affidavits setting out what they expect to show through the deposition of each person on the list.

When Judge Shook asked, assuming the allegations to be true, if the evidence could be considered competent, the attorney replied, "It is competent evidence, if your honor pleases, upon this theory: The State has charged the defendant with the offense of murder in the first degree. The elements of that offense are deliberation, premeditation and malice, and in this case in which those elements center, the State of mind of the accused at the time he is alleged to have committed the act is of the most vital importance. We have alleged in our application that all of these things were known to the defendant at the time he fired the shot as alleged in the indictment."

Remus then spoke in his own behalf, asserting that he expected to show that Dodge was waiting at Hamilton, Ohio, on the day of the murder and that three gunmen were waiting to kill him (Remus) at the door of the Sinton Hotel here that morning, and that the night before Dodge was in Mrs. Remus' room.

Remus spoke rapidly and excitedly as he described the details of the alleged conspiracy against him which would be testified to in the depositions and many of his sentences were incoherent and unfinished. His reference to Thomas Wilcox was presumed to relate to his claim that the attorney general appointed a special investigator to go into charges against Dodge.

Law Books Are Provided.

At the time that Judge Shook set the trial date for November 14 Remus asked if it would not be possible to grant an earlier date. The court announced that because of other cases on the calendar an earlier setting could not be arranged.

When Judge Shook adjourned court, following the hearing on the application, Remus asked if arrangements could be made so that the difficulties which he faces in preparing his case while in the county jail might be mitigated.

"I don't want any special privileges," he said, "but I am working on my case until midnight or until 1 o'clock in the morning, and I have only candle light after 10 o'clock.

He asked if he might be granted the privilege of using the law library in his work. Judge Shook announced that books might be taken to Remus from the library to be studied by him in the jail, but that no other privileges would be granted.

LAUGH OF GUNWOMAN BETRAYS HER TO POLICE

3 AWE 75; GET $25,000

Chicago, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—An epidemic of robberies, three of them carefully planned and executed by several men each, and the other involving a woman who fired at an elevated station agent when he foiled her and a man companion, gave the police some busy moments today.

Three robbers terrorized the proprietor and four employes of Julius Trock, Inc., and got away with three trunks full of furs valued at $25,000.

The most spectacular robbery was that of two officials of the Electrical Construction Co., who were waylaid by at least five men in an automobile and robbed of $5,000 while 75 of the men they were about to pay were held at bay by a part of the robber group. Dozens of pedestrians were endangered by a subsequent chase at 70 miles an hour in which a motorcycle policeman was distanced by the robbers' automobile.

Scores of persons on the West side saw Michael Kissane, 61-year-old restaurateur, shot down when he tried to resist three men who leaped upon him from an automobile in front of his restaurant. His assailants hurriedly searched him but got only $100 of $800 he carried.

Her ironical laughter when a police squad warned her and her male companion against holdup men led to the arrest early today of Mrs. Margaret Bayne, 24, and Herbert Smith, 25, and their confession that they actually were the robbers against whom they had been warned.

They confessed that they had been foiled in an attempt to rob Francis Prile, an elevated station agent, when he turned off the lights and rang police alarms as Mrs. Bayne poked a pistol at him. Balked in the robbery, Mrs. Bayne fired once at Prile as he dropped to the floor.

Mrs. Bayne said she was born in Houston, Tex. Her husband is a county policeman, but they had been separated five months, she said.

She confessed, the police said, that she and Smith had robbed another elevated station from which they obtained $5 and 11 tickets.

"I don't think those cops would have any idea who we were if I hadn't laughed out of turn," she said ruefully.

SLAYING OF WOMAN LAID TO RUM WAR

Man Killed After Giving Her Name to Foes on Promise of Safety, Is View.

Chicago, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Women are now being made the target of rival liquor gangs, the county highway police decided today, in announcing they had solved the slaying last Wednesday of Mrs. Catherine Jones, 39, of Chicago Heights.

Mrs. Jones, mother of a 3-year-old child, was shot to death when she answered a knock at her door. The police today said she had been friendly with Frank Passenni, an alcohol distiller, who was "taken for a ride" and killed this week.

The police said that Mrs. Jones, through her friendship with the distiller, had obtained information which had resulted in several raids in Chicago Heights. The authorities believe Passemi was "taken for a ride" and, under promise that his life would be spared, revealed Mrs. Jones' name. Then he was killed and the slayers sought out the woman and killed her.

AIR RAIDERS BOMB NEAR PEKING; CHANG TRIES MARTIAL LAW

Shansi Planes Destroy Railway Bridges 18 Miles South of Capital.

SOUNDS OF GUNFIRE HEARD CLOSE TO CITY

Battles Going On Along Three Fronts; Attack in North Grows Menacing.

Tokyo, Sunday, Oct. 16 (A.P.).—Martial law has been proclaimed in Peking, says the Rengo Nrws Agency. Airplanes of the Shansi forces are reported to have destroyed railway bridges 18 miles south of the Chinese capital.

Chang Claims Successes.

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

Peking, Oct. 15.—The Shansi armies, attacking Peking, reached Liuliho, 31 miles South of Peking, last night, but were driven back 9 miles today. Marshal Chang Tso-lin's headquarters announced tonight that Chochow was recaptured. It also reported the capture of Shihchiachwang, a railway junction, 172 miles south of Peking, and Kalgan, 116 miles northwest of Peking. Details are lacking. Again today the firing was heard at the Peking races.

Despite the hopeful announcement, Mukden's difficulties are not ended, however, because the Shansi and other Kuomintang elements have penetrated passes north of Peking at two points. These were supposedly bandits and at first were disregarded, but their increasing numbers require detachments of larger forces to be dispatched northward.

The attackers journeyed far north on the railway, entering Kupeikow and other regions 100 miles north of Peking. Other raiding elements are being pursued northward of the Ming tombs.

Artillery Brought Up.

The war office also learns that mountain artillery has been brought through the passes of the great wall southwest of Peking, together with increasing infantry columns, all indicating an elaborately planned campaign.

The fighting continues heavy, often at close range. Many wounded are reaching Peking, despite the interrupted communications. The fighting area includes 170 miles south of Peking, 100 miles west, and 120 miles north, with numerous guerrilla encounters between. Strategy attacks by small forces prevent the Mukden commanders from making concentrations, although having a larger number of troops.

Chihli and Shantung troops heavily engaged the "Christen" Gen. Feng Yu-Hsiang's army near Kweitch, eastern Honan. Other troops under Gen. Feng are reported north of the Yellow River for an engagement with the forces at Shihchiachwang.

Albany Census Quiz Causes 2 Dismissals

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—The State civil service commission today suspended Miss Julia M. Ryan, chief clerk, and William Maher, assistant secretary, on charges resulting from testimony given at the Moreland act investigation of the administration of the 1925 State census by Mrs. Florence E. S. Knapp, then secretary of state.

Miss Ryan was charged with having certified false census pay rolls containing the name of Rose Ryan, her sister. Maher is charged with having had knowledge of the fact that the name of his wife, Veronica Maher, was on census pay rolls passed through the civil service commission, although she is alleged to have rendered no service.

Diplomats of Soviet Warned of Night Life

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

Berlin, Oct. 15.—Soviet authorities have admonished their diplomatic agencies abroad, advising the members to keep away from capitalistic night life.

The Soviet charge d'affaires at Warsaw got mixed up in a brawl in one of that city's most expensive cabarets and similar experiences of Soviet representatives in haunts of luxury have been reported to Moscow, with the result that the Soviet headquarters has sent out an order to the diplomats to keep on the narrow path.

PASTOR SENTENCED IN DEATH OF A GIRL

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—A sentence of from 5 to 10 years in State prison was imposed today upon Charles Flaherty, 67-year-old former Mount Morris, N. Y., pastor, convicted by a Supreme Court jury two weeks ago of mansluaghter.

He was charged with having caused the death in January, 1926, of Clara Hagen, of Piffard, through an illegal operation.

Conviction of the clergyman came after his third trial. In April, 1926, he was convicted but the conviction was reversed by the appellate division. A second trial ended in disagreement.

Flaherty, at the time of his pastorate in the little Livingston County village, was extremely popular and was regarded as well versed in many lines, including law and medicine, both of which he had studied in his spare time. Although he no longer has a parish he never has been excommunicated by the Catholic Church.

ILEANA'S ELOPEMENT IS DENIED BY MARIE

Princess Has Not Left Her Mother Since Death of King, She Says.

Bucharest, Roumania, Oct. 15 (A.P.). Deeply stirred by published reports that Princess Ileana had eloped with a young naval lieutenant, Queen Marie tonight issued this statement:

"I am pained and indignant that it is possible for any one to spread such idiotic and calumnious tales. Since King Ferdinand's death, Ileana has never left my side. We are constant companions and can not do without each other. Ileana's earnest sense of duty and love for me is a guarantee that she will always be the pride of her country and the royal family."

Ever since the sensational report of Ileana's elopement appeared in American and European newspapers the queen and palace officials have been flooded with inquiries about the truth of the report. The queen, however, was silent until tonight.

France Is to Ignore Soviet Note on Envoy

Paris, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—The most recent letter of Georges Tchitcherin, Soviet foreign minister, to Jean Herbette, French Ambassador to Russia, will not get a reply from the French government, it was learned today. The French government, it was said, considers the note the product of a moment of bad humor, and decided to leave it unanswered.

The note, which related to the French demand for the withdrawal of Christian Rakovsky as Soviet Ambassador to France, pointed out that the Soviet government considered the demand ill-founded and declared that the inferences therein did not meet with agreement in Russia.

Tiny Crack in Plane Blamed for 6 Deaths

Berlin, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Experts who examined the wreckage of the Lufthasa plane, in which Baron Ago Von Maltzan, former Ambassador to the United States, and five others were killed September 28 en route from Berlin to Munich, have decided that a tiny crack of the steel fitment of one of the stays of the plane caused the accident.

The crack, invisible even microscopically while the machine was at rest and only theoretically visible under a microscope while the motors were running, is believed to have caused the collapse of the wing of the plane as described by eyewitnesses. It was concluded that this infinitesimal flaw must have taken months to develop, at last yielding under a fibratory strain.

HARRY HILL IS INDICTED AS SLAYER OF MOTHER

MONEY WILL AID FIGHT

Ottawa, Ill., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Harry Hill, the "beloved son" of Mrs. Eliza Hill, whose body was found last August buried in a shallow grave in the basement of her home at Streator, Ill., today was indicted by a LaSalle County grand jury for his mother's murder.

The youth who fled after the slaying and who finally was captured in Seattle, also was indicted on four charges of forgery in connection with the signing of his mother's name to checks and on one charge of confidence game in obtaining $400 from the Streator National Bank.

Hill is in jail here held without bail on the murder charge. He probably will be arraigned next week. Bonds on the other charges were fixed at $2,000 each. The grand jury heard more than 30 witnesses testify regarding the Hill case. Both the State and defense have professed eagerness for an early trial.

Hill was not in court today when the grand jury reported. His mother's body was found last August buried in the basement of her home, her divorced husband, a Streator physician, starting an investigation that resulted in the discovery. The youth vanished and it was not until several weeks later that he was captured. He disclaimed any knowledge of how his mother came to her death.

The State professes to have evidence to show that the mother had threatened to disinherit the boy because of gambling.

Some time after her death, Mrs. Hill's will was brought to light and in it she left virtually her entire estate, valued at $45,000 to young Hill to whom she referred repeatedly as her "beloved son." The instrument was drawn several years before her death. It was admitted to probate here this week and it is expected the youth will try to use some of his mother's estate to provide funds for his fight for acquittal.

COL. SWEENEY DENIED NEW U. S. PASSPORT

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

Paris, Oct. 15.—Col. Charles Sweeney, of Spokane, Wash., is a man without a country for the second time in his life. Col. Sweeney left Constantinople today, traveling on a French passport. The United States consulate refused to grant him a new passport when his old one expired because he organized an escadrille of aviators to fight with the French army in Morocco against the Riffians, two years ago.

Col. Sweeney was outlawed in 1914 when he volunteered in the foreign legion of the French army, where he rose to the rank of captain, commanding a battery of tanks. He joined the A. E. F. when the United States joined the war.

Col. Sweeney started at West Point, but left the academy in his second year, proceeding to Mexico to fight with the Madero army, and has been a soldier of fortune ever since. His father is a millionaire lumberman in the Northwest.

40 Women on Panel In Lilliendahl Trial

Hammonton, N. J., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Forty women are among the 150 persons impaneled for the October term of Atlantic County Criminal Court, which will hear the trial of Mrs. Margaret Thompson Lilliendahl and Willis J. Beach, charged with the murder of Dr. A. William Lilliendahl, the woman's husband.

Sheriff Cimino, in anouncing the personnel of the panel from which jurors will be selected for the Lilliendahl trial, said it includes many prominent persons. More than half the members of the panel are residents of Atlantic City.

Duke Fails to Pass Tests for Oxford

London, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—The young Duke of Norfolk, premier duke and hereditary Earl Marshal of England, has failed to pass the qualifying entrance examination for Oxford University.

The duke, who is 19, has never been to school, having been instructed by a private tutor since early boyhood. He succeeded his father as the sixteenth Duke of Norfolk in 1917, inheriting an estate of about 49,900 acres.

The dukedome was created in 1483.

Woman Has 13 Spades In a Bridge Game

St. Paul, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Mrs. Roy J Dunlap held a perfect bridge hand of thirteen spades in a game in which she and her husband played at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Phil R. Bronson. Mr Bronson was her partner when she was dealt the perfect hand.

CONSTANCE TALMADGE IS AWARDED DIVORCE

WED IN FEBRUARY, 1926

Edinburgh, Scotland, Oct. 15 (A.P.). Constance Talmadge was granted a divorce today by the Court of Sessions in her undefended action against Capt. Alastair William MacKintosh.

Lord Fleming, who presided, said that the evidence presented the appearance of misconduct having been committed, but that he had to be satisfied that it really took place. Capt. MacKintosh was obviously just as anxious to get a divorce as the plaintiff and he furnished the evidence, but the justice thought that he was bound to draw the inference of misconduct and consequently he granted the decree with costs.

Constance Talmadge, one of the three Talmadge sisters, famous in the motion picture world, was married to Capt. Alastair William Mackintosh, former officer in the Seaforth Highlanders and the British Royal Flying Corps, in California in February, 1926. Three years previously Miss Talmadge had obtained a divorce from her first husband, John T. Pialoglou, a Greek tobacco merchant, with whom she eloped in December, 1920.

Soon after her marriage to Capt. Mackintosh Miss Talmadge returned to Hollywood to work on a picture, and her husband went to Florida. In June, 1926, they went to Europ on what they called their honeymoon trip, when Miss Talmadge was introduced to her husband's relatives and friends. Their return, in August, was followed by rumors that they would separate, but these were denied.

It was learned in October, 1926, that Miss Talmadge and Capt. Mackintosh were about to separate, and finally Miss Talmadge filed suit in Edinburgh against Capt. Mackintosh. The actress took the stand on September 28 to testify concerning allegations in her petition, alleging misconduct by her husband at Brighton, England, last June.

Anna Case to Sing In Movie Theater

New York, Oct. 15 (A.P.). — If the moving picture public will not go to the opera, the opera, after the manner of Mohammed and the mountain, will go to the movies.

Anna Case, opera star, will appear in a moving picture house concert tomorrow.

"I am positively thrilled," said Miss Case, "at being one of the first stars to participate in the performance of operatic music for the motion picture public."

Lindbergh Backer Divorced by Heiress

Reno, Nev., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Mrs. Laura J. Knight obtained a divorce here yesterday from Harry French Knight, of St. Louis, one of the backers of the transatlantic flight of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. She charged extreme cruelty.

A property settlement was made out of court. Mrs. Knight before her marriage in 1922 was the widow of James Hobart Moore, Chicago, who died in 1916. She inherited the greater part of Moore's $10,000,000 estate.

BANK ROBBERS, CAUGHT, GET ONE YEAR TO LIFE

ALL OVER IN TWO DAYS

Murphysboro, Ill., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Three men, who robbed the First National Bank of Grandtower yesterday of $1,500 and were captured near Ullin late today, pleaded guilty and were sentenced to one year to life imprisonment when arraigned before Circuit Judge A. L. Spiller here tonight. Indictments, charging the trio with the bank robbery, were returned by a hastily summoned special grand jury from their captors.

The men gave their names as Joe Drumm, 22, of West Frankfort, and Frank Smiddy, 25, and his brother Sherman Smiddy, 27. In sentencing the men to the Chester prison, Judge Spiller declared that they had been arrested before and that they "need never call on me for any recommendation in the event you appear for clemency." Of the $1,500 stolen $633 was found on the men following their capture.

Ullin, Ill., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Three robbers who held up the First National Bank of Grand Tower yesterday and escaped with $1,500, were captured near here late today after one of the greatest man hunts in the history of Southern Illinois. Several hundred shots were fired and one of the robbers, Frank Smiddy, was wounded in the leg in a fierce running gun fight with a sheriff's posse, extending more than eight miles. The hunt covered an area more than twenty miles wide in four counties.

The fugitives, after an all-night search in which nearly every able-bodied man in the countryside was impressed into service as a member of the posse, broke from cover in Rex Beech Hollow on the Elco-Ullin road, about four miles west of here. They held up Cranley Sanders and with a leveled rifle forced him to leave his small sedan.

The robbers sped away in the stolen car, running a gantlet of fire from both sides of the road and nearly ran down Sheriff Leslie B. Roche, of Alexander County, who commanded them to halt.

Sheriff Roche pursued, firing through the windshield of his car as soon as he came within rifle range. Four miles north of Ullin, the bandit trio stopped and held up Harry Jordan, of Mounds, who with his wife and two small children was driving south. Just as the men were forcing Jordan to abandon his car, Sheriff Roche and a posse drew close and opened fire on the robbers who fled into the brush alongside the road after returning the fire.

The men then were surrounded. They ignored a demand to surrender and fired on the officers. The fire was returned by Sheriff Roche. After they had exhausted their ammunition the men surrendered.

Levine to Be Met At Liner Tomorrow

New York, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Charles A. Levine, who flew to Germany with Clarence D. Chamberlin last June, sent a wireless message from the Leviathan today accepting the city's invitation to a public reception in City Hall after the vessel docks on Monday.

Levine will be taken from the Leviathan aboard the city tug Macom at quarantine and landed at the battery, after which there will be an automobile parade to City Hall

MEADE MEMORIAL WILL BE UNVEILED IN CITY WEDNESDAY

President to Accept Tribute of Pennsylvania to Civil War General.

DAUGHTER TO UNVEIL $400,000 MONUMENT

Elaborate Arrangements for Accommodating Crowd in Botanic Gardens.

The memorial to Maj. Gen. George Gordon Meade, commander of the victorious Union Army at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1 to 3, 1863, decisive conflict of the Civil War, will be unveiled in the Botanic Garden, the Mall and Third street, Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Presentation of the monument will be made by Gov. John S. Fisher of Pennsylvania, Gen. Meade's native State, and will be accepted on behalf of the United States Government by President Coolidge.

Music by the Army Band will open the exercises, which will be called to order by Senator Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio, chairman of the Senate committee on the library and acting chairman of the Meade Memorial National Commissin.

Following an invocation by the Rev. Hugh K. Fulton, a chaplain in the Reserve Corps, Gov. Fisher, in behalf of the Meade Memorial Commission of Pennsylvania, will make the address of presentation and Miss Henrietta Meade, Philadelphia, daughter of Gen. Meade, will unveil the monument.

Reminiscences to Be Told.

After a salute of thirteen guns is fired by the United States artillerymen, President Coolidge will accept the memorial for the Nation, and, after music by the band, H. H. Spayd, Minersville, Pa., past commander of the department of Pennsylvania, Grand Army of the Republic, will narrate reminiscences of the great commander.

Following another band selection, Charles Grafly, the sculptor; Edward P. and Grant M. Simon, the architects, all of Philadelphia, will be presented to the assembly. Services will close with a dedicatory prayer by the Rev. J. H. Pershing, chaplain of the Pennsylvania Department of the Grand Army of the Republic, the blowing of "taps" by an Army bugler and music by the Army Band.

Arrangements for the thousands of persons expected to attend the ceremony from this city, Pennsylvania, and the Nation at large, have been perfected by Frederick D. Owen, of the office of Public Buildings and Public Parks of the National Capital, who has supervised services of similar importance over a long period of years.

Eighteen sections of seats have been arranged about the memorial which will be banked with battle flags of the Civil War, national emblems and banners of the Grand Army of the Republic, and plans whereby the standing crowds may obtain a good view of the ceremony also have been laid.

The boxes for speakers and distinguished guests are in a pavilion fronting the monument from the south and sections for seated spectators, standing spectators, guards and bandsmen, will be arranged east and west, northwest and northeast and southeast of it, respectively.

Keystone Motif Used.

Green and white is the color scheme for the decorations and sections will be marked by colored signs in the shape of keystone emblematic of the Keystone State of Pennsylvania and symbolic of the battle of Gettysburg, keystone of the arch of the Union."

On June 14, 1911, an act of the Pennsylvania legislature, established a State commission to procure a suitable statue of Gen. Meade, and a site for it in this city. Public resolution, No. 63, of the sixty-third Congress, approved January 21, 1915, established a national commission for the memorial and designated a site for it in Botanic Garden grounds.

The Pennsylvania legislature passed various appropriation acts for its cost, and a second deficiency bill of the Sixty-ninth Congress' second session contained a provision for paying half the costs of the dedication exercises. As this bill did not pass, all expenses are being borne by the State of Pennsylvania.

The entire cost of the memorial, about $400,000, was appropriated by Pennsylvania, and the monument will be the most expensive memorial to any individual in Washington, with the exceptions of the Washington Monument and Lincoln Memorial.

Progress of work was delayed by decisions of the auditor general of Pennsylvania preventing use of appropriations until favorable interpretation of statutes had been secured by the courts, and by the necessity of securing from Congress action to move the Bartholdi fountain, which encroached on the site of the monument.

National Commission Named.

The congressional resolution authorized appointment of a national Meade Memorial Commission, present personnel of which is Secretary of War Davis, Senator Fess, Representative Robert Luce, of Massachusetts, chairman of the House committee of the Library, and Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, diretcor Office of Public Buildings and Public Parks of the National Capital, having supervision of the erection.

The Pennsylvania commission for the memorial is composed of Gov. Fisher, chairman; Hugh R. Fulton, vice chairman; Benson E. Taylor, secretary; John J. Hansher, Charles F. Bidelspacher, John B. Patrick, Samuel P. Towne and John E. Baker.

On June 7, 1919, the State of Pennsylvania entered into contract with Mr. Grafly, the sculptor, and on March 26, 1920, the Fine Arts Commission approved his model, which was accepted by the congressional commission. On January 19, 1921, the latter group accepted the plan for treatment of the surrounding ground.

Plans were submitted by the architects on July 28, 1921, and on March 28, 1922, ground was broken for the structure with elaborate ceremonies. In June, 1922, preliminary test borings started on the site.

Between July 1, 1922, and June 30, 1923, the model of the memorial was approved by the Fine Arts Commission. The concrete foundations for the monument and for the plaza surrounding it were built, drainage completed and the granite coping to inclose the plaza, including its foundation, constructed. Granite steps for the base of the monument were then delivered.

Between July 1 and November 30, 1923, the coping around the plaza was completed, a cast-iron drain installed and the pink granite steps for the base of the Tennessee marble base for the pedestal placed in position.

There were no further operations until June, 1925, when the drum pedestal and four of the statues to surround it were received and set. The granite platform was practically completed in May, 1926.

MONUMENT FOR GEN. MEADE

Memorial to Maj. Gen. George Gordon Meade, commander of the victorious Union forces at the Battle of Gettysburg, which will be unveiled at the Botanic Garden Wednesday afternoon.

Congress Leaders Study Proposals for Tax Cuts

(Associated Press.)

How big a slice may be cut from the annual tax bill is a question now uppermost as administration and congressional leaders turn their attention to this major problem of the approaching session of Congress.

With the revenue question involved in the coming presidential campaign, the issue already is settling along political lines with three fairly distinct notions prevailing, both as to the total amount of reduction and where the cuts shall be made.

Under pressure from President Coolidge, administration leaders are expected to endeavor to hold the maximum reduction within the limits set by the Treasury, something like $200,000,000.

Democrats who are assembling for the presession meetings of the tax committees of Congress are measuring the prospective surplus with the hope that they can present a program contemplating a much larger reduction. Some already have declared for a cut of nearly half a billion dollars.

The third element in the equation—the Republican independents from the Western States—apparently is little interested in tax reduction. In their preliminary legislative conferences they have expressed a prefernce for a scaling down of the national debt rather than of the tax bill, but if there is to be tax revision legislation they have very definite ideas as to where the reduction should be made.

The basis for revenue legislation will be laid at hearings before the House Ways and Means committee beginning at the end of this month. At those hearings the Treasury will present its program in detail and spokesmen for the corporations and others seeking revisions will make their arguments.

Whatever bill is framed will be without the political importance of previous measures because admittedly there can be little, if any, further reduction in the taxes of the great mass of the public, which has benefited materially in each measure passed since the World War.

As the situation is shaping now, the principal fights will revolve around the corporation income, the estate or inheritance, and the remaining war-time nuisance and miscellaneous taxes. The regular income levies will come in for their share of attention, however, with proposals for complete exemption of all incomes below $5,000, and a reduction in the surtax rates affecting incomes between $30,000 and $100,000.

Despite the views of some Government tax experts that a period of prosperity is not the time for reducing the tax on corporations, leaders of both parties in Congress lean toward a substantial lowering of the corporation tax, which has received little attention in the enactment of the last two revenue measures. Reductions in the present 13½ per cent rates, ranging from 1 per cent to 2½ per cent, have been suggested.

As for nuisance taxes, there seems to be a fairly general opinion in Congress that the levies on theater admissions, perhaps club dues, the various stamp taxes on negotiable instruments and business papers should come off.

There promises to be a real fight, however, on the proposal to repeal the automobile passenger car levy, which was reduced in the last bill from 5 to 3 per cent. Some leaders favor abolition of this tax, but a number of high administration officials insist upon its retention in some form, although they are not unalterably opposed to a further reduction in the rate.

There will be a renewed drive for repeal of the inheritance tax and on this issue party lines are expected to fade away as they did two years ago when independents of both parties opposed the demand of Republican and Democratic conservatives for abolition of this tax.

South Carolina, he met nothing but anti-Smith sentiment. He found Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, at least lukewarm to the New York governor, and among other Southern senators he found open hostility. Whether there is any basis for it or not, however, the feeling is growing that Southern senators will talk anti-Smith and that Southern delegates will go to the convention prepared to vote against him and that they will do so long enough to make a showing back home and then if it seems that it is either Smith or another 1924 debacle they will jump onto the Smith band wagon.

Bolt of South Discussed.

The thought that the solid South will bolt in the event of Smith's nomination is no longer entertained. The realization is growing that Smith offers the best promise the Democrats have of getting control of the Government. Practical politicians see it this way and, although they must reckon with the feeling back home, any number of them secretly believe Smith will be the nominee.

This does not mean that the opposition to him is waning especially. Rather there are influences in the party which have placed the national ticket in secondary consideration and are maneuvering for the advantage of their State tickets. In Washington there are aspirants for the Democratic nomination. Among them are those personally ambitious to get the honor of the nomination, though knowing they could not win.

From them a steady propaganda is issuing that Smith can not win. Figures are being sent out seeking to prove that the loss of Kentucky and Tennessee Smith will lose. Smith supporters are including the two border States as for them. Tennessee would be in considerable doubt [illegible] there would be some doubt about Kentucky, although the former has never gone Republican in a presidential contest but one. It staged the world's greatest fundamentalist show. It has elected a Republican governor four times. Cox carried Kentucky but Davis lost it by 24,111 votes. Kentucky elected Republican senators in 1920 and 1924. It is, however, not a State that intensely feels religious prejudices.

Both Senator McKellar and his expected opponent, Finis J. Garrett, minority leader in the House, are trying to keep clear of declaring themselves for either Smith or against him. The issue, if it is one, is not definite enough for them to take sides.

There is a noticeable reluctance on the part of such men as Senators Glass and Swanson of Virginia to take sides. It is taken for granted that Virginia as a whole would not select Smith as the nominee. On the other hand, a silent campaign is at work for him in that State and it is reputed to have no other behind it than Thomas Fortune Ryan, a Virginian originally and now of New York.

Those who are making an insistent campaign against the New York governor, are frowning upon suggestions that an anti-Smith man be produced at this time. They tamed down rather upon the suggestion of E. T. Meredith that the anti-Smith men get together and name a candidate.

They are relying on the two-thirds rule to protect them and they are prepared to make a fight to preserve it. This is their hope. If the two-thirds rule blocks Smith and there is no outstanding man to turn to, then there is no telling what may happen—on whom the mantle might fall.

They know of a plan of the Smith men to eliminate the two-thirds rule by a resolution after several ballots have elapsed without a nomination. A resolution would be introduced providing that after a prescribed ballot the candidate having the majority of votes would be declared the nominee. This would be a way of evading the two-thirds rule. Its supporters contend that inasmuch as it would apply to any candidate receiving the majority vote no one could offer a plausible argument against it.

The anti-Smith men argue that it is in effect a repeal of the two-thirds rule and they are prepared to resist it. A contention is that the resolution could be adopted by a majority vote.

THE MORRIS PLAN

The terms of Morris Plan Loans are simple and practical and fair—it is not necessary to have had an account at this Bank to borrow.

For each $60 or fraction borrowed you agree to deposit $5 a month in an account, the proceeds of which may be used to cancel the note when due. Deposits may be made on a weekly, semi-monthly or monthly basis as you prefer.

Easy to Pay
Loan	Monthly Deposit For 12 Months
$120	$10.00
$180	$15.00
$240	$20.00
$300	$25.00
$360	$30.00
$540	$45.00
$1,200	$100.00
$6,000	$500.00

Loans are passed within a day or two after filing application—with few exceptions.

MORRIS PLAN notes are usually made for 1 year, though they may be given for any period of from 3 to 12 months.

Idea of Being "Rediscovered" Gives Former Secretary Good Laugh, He Says.

DECLINES TO COMMENT ON ANY PUBLIC ISSUES

Jurist, However, Is Held Up by Friends as Most Eminent 1928 Possibility.

By ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
Special to The Washington Post.

New York, Oct. 15.—Most eminent of all the men who are being discussed in connection with the Republican nomination for President next year is Charles Evans Hughes of New York. Since the passing of Elihu Root from the political scene, he is commonly referred to as the greatest mind in the Republican party. In view of the position he has attained in party and nation his admirers proffer him as the logical choice for Republican leader in the contest for the presidency.

What manner of man Hughes is, what his leadership would entail, what policies he would pursue as President, what views he holds on public questions—all these are considerations which will form the judgment of the party as to the expediency and general desirability of choosing Mr. Hughes for its candidate.

He Denies He Has Changed.

It is frequently remarked that it is a new Hughes we have with us today—so affable, so gracious, so wholly unlike the human iceberg that he was pictured by those who came in contact with him in the ill-starred campaign he made for the presidency in 1916 when his snubbing of Hiram Johnson on a fateful day in California cost him the highest honor in the gift of the nation and changed the course of history. Hughes has mellowed, thinks almost everybody except Hughes himself. He can't see it.

"I have a good laugh every once in a while when I read about the efforts of the new Hughes," he said not long ago, "and I go all over again, with some that I have had the pleasure of meeting for the first time, what went on in Albany years and years ago, and it is a great privilege to be pleasantly rediscovered."

It was on the same occasion, and looking backward over his years of office holding that he was moved to this comment:

"A public officer has always got to remind himself, and he ought to say every morning as he approaches his task: 'I am a servant, and it is my business to see what I can do for the American people; I am not a boss, and any little authority or great authority that I happen to have for a day is not a personal requisite.'"

Declines to Talk of Issues.

As in the case of each of the other men considered for the Presidency, one hears much of the delegate strength Mr. Hughes may be expected to command in the nominating convention, but almost nothing of his position on the issues that will be to the fore in the election. In order to throw light on his attitude, I asked Mr. Hughes for his views on current public questions.

Mr. Hughes declined to give them, saying that he would adhere steadfastly to his determination to be interviewed on no subject at this time.

"Understand, though," he added, "there is nothing personal in my refusal to be interviewed. It's purely impersonal and impartial."

Mr. Hughes paused and then added with a chuckle, "like our tariff."

His reason is understood to be the feeling that to furnish any statement of his views for publication would create the impression that he is a receptive candidate for the Presidency, despite his reiterated assertion that he is not a candidate, that at 65 he is too old for President, and that he would not accept if nominated.

Defined His Policies in Office.

On many questions of public policy, of course, Mr. Hughes has placed himself definitely on record, particularly during the four years that he served as Secretary of State. In public addresses and state papers he has defined his position in the clear, trenchant phraseology of which he is a master.

About the only important public question on which Mr. Hughes has failed to state his position is that of the modification of the prohibition law. Whether he regards national prohibition a success, whether he thinks the Volstead act ought to be liberalized he has not disclosed. As Secretary of State he negotiated arrangements with other countries to curb rum running with a vigor and success that was all the most fanatic drys could have demanded. On the other hand, he took the stump last year for Senator Wadsworth, Republican, New York whose wetness caused the Antisaloon League to bolt the Republican ticket.

But in defending Wadsworth Mr. Hughes never touched on the modification question, confining himself strictly to the contention that inasmuch as both parties in New York had joined in submitting the modification referendum the question was not an issue between the parties in the election.

On the question of farm relief Mr. Hughes is opposed to such measures as the McNary-Haugen bill.

SHIFT IN BOARD

Upper, Sam Pickard (Harris & Ewing) newly appointed member of the Federal Radio Commission, and, lower, H. A. Bellows (Underwood & Underwood) resigned, whom he succeeds.

PICKARD IS APPOINTED RADIO COMMISSIONER

President Names Secretary to Succeed Bellows, Who Resigns.

President Coolidge yesterday appointed Sam Pickard, of Kansas, a member of the Federal Radio Commission, to succeed Henry A. Bellows, who submitted his resignation effective November 1. Pickard has served as secretary of the commission since its organization pursuant to an act of the last session of Congress.

When the commission was organized, Pickard was chief of the radio division of the Department of Agriculture.

Resignation of Bellows created the second vacancy on the commission, the other having resulted from the death of John F. Dillon. No successor to Dillon has been appointed, but it is expected that this vacancy, too, will be filled soon.

Bellows, in submitting his resignation, was actuated by the financial loss which his service has entailed. He will resume his business connections in Minneapolis. Because of the fact that the members of the commission were not appointed until after the adjournment of Congress, too late for the Senate to confirm their nominations, they have not as yet been able to draw any salary.

LEGISLATIVE PLANS TO BE MAPPED OUT BY COMMISSIONERS

Change in Fiscal Relations of District and Government to Be Urged.

PRESENT ARRANGEMENT REGARDED AS UNFAIR

Appropriations to Be Asked for Airport and Also Farmers' Market.

The task of preparing a legislative program covering local needs will be started soon by the District Commissioners. They must have it ready to submit to Congress when that body convenes December 1.

Legislation changing the fiscal relations between the District govrenment and the Federal Government will be the chief recommendation of the Commissioners. It is felt the District is now paying far more than its share of the expenses, and, besides that, there is strong agitation for some kind of permanent fiscal policy.

Two other important recommendations to be made to Congress by the Commissioners will have to do with a municipal airport and a municipal farmers market. They will ask that $150,000 be appropriated to start work on an airport at Gravelly Point, and that approximately $600,000 be appropriated to buy a new site for the farmers' market. Thus far the Commissioners have not determined on a market site.

Prepared to Cite Figures.

The Commissioners when they go to Congress with a request for a permanent and equitable fiscal relations policy will be able to cite figures to prove the District is now getting the "worst of it."

Today the Federal Government pays a lump sum of $9,000,000 a year as its share of the expenses. Before that arrangement was entered into the District government paid 60 per cent of the expenses and the Federal Government paid 40 per cent. Before that there was the 50-50 plan, each government footing half the bill.

When the 50-50 plan was in operation the annual budget was about $25,000,000. Hence the Federal Government paid approximately $12,500,000. Now the Federal Government is paying only $9,000,000 a year, although the budget is around $40,000,000. And this budget is growing all the time.

What the Commissioners will recommend in the way of a new fiscal relations policy will depend largely on the report of the committee of local experts that will return here probably tomorrow from the convention of the National Tax Association in Toronto, Canada.

Personnel of Committee.

This committee is headed by Dr. Thomas Walker Page, noted economist, and includes Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank; Joshua Evans, jr., of the District National Bank; Frank Coleman, editor of the Plate Printer; W. L. Beale, real estate expert; Newbold Noyes, associate editor of the Evening Star, and William P. Richards, District Tax Assessor. Commissioner Sidney F. Taliaferro, who has supervision over the tax collecting and tax assessing divisions of the District government, was an observer at the convention.

Tax experts from all parts of the United States and Canada attended the convention, and members of the local committee therefore had a splendid opportunity to acquire a background for the study it is about to make of the District's fiscal problems. The committee will get down to work immediately so that it can report to the Commissioners a good deal in advance of the convening of Congress.

In making a recommendation to Congress, the Commisioners probably will make use of the figures recently compiled by the Board of Trade showing that among 80 cities, Washington has a tax burden that is second only to New York.

JAPAN IS REPORTED SEVERING BUSINESS FROM GOVERNMENT

Premier Tanaka Said to Be Succeeding in Gigantic Achievement.

PHILIPPINE "BOSSES" COMING TO WASHINGTON

By PATRICK GALLAGHER.

Definite news has just reached Washington indicating that the Japanese Empire is rounding another buoy in the race of Asia's progressive islanders to catch up with the most modern western nation. Government and business are going to part company in Nippon if this privately received report from Tokyo proves correct. All the known facts, aside from advance hints that have been current for several months, seem to verify the specific information that the Japanese premier, Gen. Baron Tanaka, is now carrying out a gigantic reform that will go into history as one of Japan's numerous astounding achievements. Also, in traditional Japanese fashion, Tanaka is described as leading his nation in erecting a monument to his friend, Leonard Wood, far more enduring than tori or temple.

The necessary approval is said to have been given to "the cabinet's program for a financial readjustment, as a result of which various semiofficial companies will no longer be government concerns in any respect. In general, the ideas of President Coolidge and Gen. Wood are being followed."

While this was happening in Japan, Senores Manuel L. Quezon and Sergio Osmena, Filipino legislative "bosses," were Manila-to-Washington visitors in the Japanese capital, Tokyo. They were suitably entertained by leading Japanese and it is possible that they may have been told the news. What effect it had upon them can not be known until they reach the United States. Quezon and Osmena, and their controlled legislature, to date have persisted in perpetuating their systematically organized opposition to all the basic policies of Gen. Wood.

Worried Over Situation Here.

Because of their anti-Wood attitude, Miguel Romualdez, mayor of Manila, has outfooted them to the American Capital, so Filipinos say, and they assert that Quezon and Osmena are more worried over the inside Filipino situation in Washington than they are over anything else, not excluding President Coolidge's carefully guarded secret, the name of the next governor general. Like Caesar's Gaul, Filipino office-seekers are now "divided into three parts." And the leaders of each of these parts are gathering in Washington to "appeal unto Caesar," Mr. Coolidge. Tall's political volcano is moving to Washington in sections, first-class cabins and Pullmans.

Mayor Romualdez is alcalde of Manila by appointment of Gen. Wood. Quezon, Osmena and their legislature will not confirm him. Therefore, he is here to state his side of the case and to look into the Filipino situation in Washington. According to Dean Maximo M. Kalaw, of the Philippine University, and others who are sharpening their political bolos in the columns of Manila newspapers, that situation is a total loss. The leaders are indicted in biting terms. The recall of both resident commissioners and "a complete change of personnel" in Washington feature the demands of the younger Filipino element. These demands appear under scareheads in the official organs of the party in power. The standard of revolt has been raised—partly on the stated ground that enough money has not been raised. At last reports, those Filipino millions described by Quezon and others as being willing to give their last drop of blood for "independence" have only dug down in their pantaloons to the extent of $26,311 and a few odd "clackers," the deep brown coin of the common people.

Wants to Head Off Revolt.

Filipinos inform this writer that Quezon is coming here more to head off this revolt than for any other purpose. The party is pictured as being in more dire danger than has ever been permitted to appear in the Manila press. Veterans who have witnessed the rise and fall of earlier juntas and partidos say that the crisis inside the Filipino Nationalist camp resembles very much the tense inside situation that wrecked the Federal party more than two decades ago. They prophecy the retirement of Sergio Osmena, the elimination of Commissioners Pedro Guevara and Isaura Gabaldon and a new lineup, affecting the Democratas and groups like those led by Gen. Aguinaldo.

To those who know him, Americans and some Filipinos here, Quezon is more likely to trim his opponents than they are likely to lift his scalp. En route to this Washington battleground, he has seized the first opening to pick off one of the groups arrayed against him—that led by Pedro Guevara. Quezon's Yokohama interview repudiates the commissioner's acts and statements, according to some who are admittedly hostile to Guevara.

On his part, Guevara has not been idle. He has been in New York. Important conferences have been held in New York, some say. Others call these conferences "abortive." Guevara's friends insist that Osmena must sustain him, for his own sake. Osmena's friends think that Quezon will not dare to break in Washington with the man "who made him what he is today." Quezon's friends expect a break and a sensational one. They predict that Manuel will hold a sort of coroner's inquest on the Washington work and say nasty things about the corpse. One guess is as good as another, impartial observers agree. Quezon might do anything except nothing. On the other hand, "nothing" is said to be Osmena's middle name, when a party ruckus is on.

Mindanao to Loom Up.

Seven fighting Moros of Lanao have gone to their eternal cotta. This news from Mindanao is of intense interest to many American men and women who know just what it means. It is predicted that very soon the attention of America will be caught by and fastened on Mindanao, described as "the Indiana of the Far East," "America's Master Key among the Keys of the World, the Philippines."

Mindanao is about the same size as the Hoosier State, 38,000 square miles of insular magnificence. Wonderful gulfs, bays, natural harbors, fine rivers, big lakes high above sea level, the most valuable forests under the American flag, a valley that is a veritable gold mine, the one vast potential rubber reserve inside the tariff walls, America's untasted coffee cup, sugar cane land with a 1,000,000-ton capacity and the greatest alcohol opportunity so far reported by any prospector. This, aside from the established fact that Mindanao is Sumatra's one known rival as a potential producer of the most popular type of wrapper leaf tobacco. So Mindanao has a huge appeal to enterprising business and (what is even more important) to the housewife, to the man who smokes and to those who own or who ride in cars.

Not an ounce of coffee or a teaspoonful of sugar comes to America from Mindanao. Billions of American dollars are being poured into overseas investments. Not one cent is being invested in Mindanao rubber, coffee or sugar, to say nothing of many other known opportunities. Not so much as a rubber band is being made in America out of Mindanao rubber. No American is up and doing to reap a possible fortune in Sulu pearls. The inquiring observer asks "Why?" And it is thought that very soon interested Americans will be insisting upon an answer to that question.

Americans Like Moros.

About two-thirds of the population of Mindanao are Moros, who call Senores Quezon, Osmena and their Luzon and Visayan followers their "ancient enemies." Americans, who have lived among the Moros, like them immensely, and there is no doubt at all that the Moros are solidly in favor of the American flag and American Government. "They hate the northern Filipinos and will not be governed by them," Americans who have lived there say.

"Quezon, Osmena and their associates," it is asserted, "are elected leaders of about 80 per cent of 10 per cent of the total population of the entire Philippine archipelago. This actually voting percentage of an electorate well under 10 per cent of the Philippine people does not and can not represent the views of the vast majority of Luzon and Visayan Filipinos. It takes no heed of over a million non-Christian natives who beg for American protection against official Filipino molestation. All Americans of note who know the Philippines agree that the Moros are by no means the only Filipinos who are clamoring for American Government in the Philippines.' '

"America has ceased to rule in the Philippines," it is said. News from Manila proves that statement true. Not merely has Quezon, the "superboss," effectually blocked the mayoralty of Miguel Romualdez; he has prevented Acting Gov. Gen. Eugene A. Gilmore from giving the Lanao Moros an American governor, Maj. Orville M. Johnson, of the Philippine constabulary. Unlike the Japanese memorial of Gen. Tanaka, Quezon's Filipino monument to Wood is one of disrespect and disdain. Death has not healed the breach between the great dead governor and America's problem in the Philippines—Manuel L. Quezon."

Enemies to Modern Filipinos.

An American officer who served in Lanao says this:

"We are killing Moros who want us, need us and love our flag and Government. For whom? For their ancient enemies, the northern Filipinos, whose leaders are telling us to get out.

"The red blood of dead Moros is calling to the manhood and womanhood of America. Is it decent to do this? Is it good sense?

"Vast fortunes could easily be made by Americans in Mindanao. All that is standing between Americans and these easy hundreds of millions is their own lack of interest and knowledge of Mindanao. Since the days of the California gold rush, no territory under the American flag ever beckoned to American seekers of rich opportunity as does this wonderful island, free from typhoons and tropical fevers, and needing just one thing—freedom from the fell hand of Filipino politics."

One who has watched every American Philippine move since the American occupation of the islands more than 29 years ago, points out that "Filipinos now in power in the Philippines are slyly laughing at their American dupes. They have reason to laugh. They have got what they wanted from the days of the Malolos congress. America has all the responsibility. Quezon & Co. have all the power.

Quezon Top Dog at Manila.

Manuel L. Quezon returns to Washington in triumph. He is top dog at Manila. Of course, he does not want to name the governor general. His one hope is that the wrong man will be named. In that way only can he go back with a war cry and assurance of his sole concern—to go on governing the Philippines.

A generation ago, a great Japanese, Prince Ito, warned an American friend that this might happen. Years afterward, the American in question (Dean C. Worcester) confessed to this writer that a great mistake was made when Ito's sincerely offered help was disdained, because "some Americans suspected one of the very few nations that did go out of their way to be useful to us when we took the Philippines. Why, these Japanese were the very first to point out to us islands we had overlooked—islands that might otherwise have been put under another flag."

Tanaka's Japanese adoption of the Coolidge-Wood policy is interpreted by some among those who recall the memorable Ito incident as yet another Japanese effort to be helpful without being indiscreet. Japanese ability to understand the Asiatic temperament is not disputed by observing Americans.

SINCLAIR FAMILY GROUP WHO WILL ATTEND TRIAL

Mother, Wife and Children of the Oil Man Plan to Hear Testimony.

DEFENDENT GOT START AS DRUG STORE CLERK

Now Employs 20,000 Men in Rise Which Has Had Many Setbacks.

One of the outstanding human-interest features of the coming Fall-Sinclair conspiracy trial will be the presence in the courtroom of three generations of the Sinclair family. The people of Washington have read much about the legal aspects of the oil-lease cases and the various personages directly or indirectly connected with the cases have been described, interviewed and photographed as they appeared upon the scene. But, curiously enough, virtually nothing has been printed about the personal or human-interest side of Harry F. Sinclair, who is now about to step into the role of a chief actor as one of the defendants.

That Sinclair is "a wealthy oil magnate" is generally known from the fact that he is always thus referred to in the many newspaper articles dealing with the oil leases. That he owned Zev and won the last international race, and maintains a racing stable is known to many. But, aside from that, he has so far appeared to the great majority of the people here as an abstract personality.

The coming trial, with its attendant volume of human emotions, will necessarily bring Sinclair and his family as intimately into the human-interest side of the unfolding developments as was the case with the family of Edward L. Doheny or Albert B. Fall during the most eventful days of the Fall-Doheny trial.

Wife May Show Emotion.

Mrs. Harry F. Sinclair will spend virtually all of her time in Justice Siddon's court from tomorrow on until the finish. She will follow every line of the testimony with an interest and emotion which will be more easily reflected in her countenance than in the case of Mrs. Fall, for example, who bore up under the last trial without a change of expression until the last day when the summing-up arguments proved too great a strain.

Mrs. Sinclair has gone over the various points in the case many times with her husband. She was Elizabeth Farrell, living in Independence, Kans., 25 years ago when she and Mr. Sinclair were married. She has never been fond of social activities, but has been greatly interested in music, has organized and founded music schools and otherwise followed the course of other typical American women of wealth who devote much of their lives to their children and to charity.

There are two Sinclair children, both of whom want to be in Washington and see what all the big excitement is about. Virginia Sinclair is 13 and Harry F. jr. is two years younger. They attend school and incidentally if they come here it will mean a holiday or vacation.

Mother Nearly 80 Years Old.

Mrs. Phoebe Sinclair, Sinclair's mother, is approaching 80, but expects to come here and attend the trial. She has traveled extensively each year despite her age, so that she feels she could stand the strain of a trip from Great Neck, L. I., to Washington.

Sinclair himself was born in Wheeling, W. Va., and is 51. His rise from a village errand boy or clerk in a drug store to leader in the oil industry and head of a corporation employing upwards of 20,000 people has been symbolic of two aspects of present day developments, namely the opportunities which present themselves in the never-changing industrial battle in this land of opportunity and the almost miraculous modern growth of the upsprouting oil business in America.

Succeeds on Large Scale.

From a mediocre start, punctuated with many setbacks and discouragements, came success on a modest scale, then greater success and growth and power and war service, featured by the building of the war pipeline, and further expansion and growth leading up to the events which will now be tested in a court of justice here and will therefore of necessity have a determining and decisive effect on Sinclair's future.

But neither the magnitude of the transactions involved nor the legal wrangles over testimony affecting the fate of the defendants will wholly divert public attention from the humn interest aspect of the case as it is to be reflected by those intimately concerned. In other words, no matter which way the case goes, there are going to be human beings and human emotions involved which will be of more interest to the spectators than the complicated and at times monotonous citations of drainage figures, statistics as to oil production and what not.

DEWEY TO BECOME FINANCIAL ADVISER OF POLISH REPUBLIC

Assistant Secretary to Resign Position in Treasury on November 5.

MELLON COMMENDS TALENT AND SERVICES

Will Supervise Expenditure of Loan to Be Floated in This Country.

Charles S. Dewey, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, in charge of fiscal affairs, will resign November 5 to accept a position as financial advisor to the government of Poland, and director of the Bank of Poland, he announced yseterday. The appointment is one of the many similar honors which have been given to American financial experts by different European governments since the war.

Details of Mr. Dewey's new connection have not been worked out, and he has not submited his formal resignation to Secretary Mellon pending their completion. His election to the bank directorate will not take place until November 5, at which time it is understood his resignation will be forthcoming.

It is understood that one of Mr. Dewey's principal functions when he reaches Poland will be supervision of the expenditure of the $70,000,000 loan which Poland is soon to float here though a group of American, British and Dutch bankers. In addition to this, he will serve in a general advisory capacity to the Polish government in all matters of finance and economy.

During the three years that Mr. Dewey has served as Assistant Secretary he has won himself a high place and reputation among the fiscal offices of the government. Secretary Mellon, in a letter to Mr. Dewey after being informed of his coming resignation, said that during his service "you have successfully handled numerous and varied problems which have demanded administrative and financial ability of high degree. In disposing of these problems you have at all times manifested a clear understanding of fiscal policies and have demonstrated unusual talent."

Penfield Proposed As Envoy to Cuba

President Coolidge was asked yesterday by Senator James E. Watson, of Indiana, to appoint Walter Penfield, of that State, as ambassador to Cuba, to succeed Gen. Enoch H. Crowder, who recently resigned.

Senator Watson, who is chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce committee, was asked, on leaving the White House, about the prospects for legislation for railroad consolidation at the coming session of Congress. He said he thought the outlook was unusually favorable for such legislation, and added that he would introduce a bill creating a special commission for telephone, telegraph and radio. The two first named of these activities are under the supervision of the Interstate Commerce Commission, which, Senator Watson holds, has enough on its hands with matters affecting the railroads.

GOING TO POLAND

CHARLES S. DEWEY.

TARIFF REPLY BY PARIS IS RECEIVED IN CAPITAL

Text to Be Made Public Here Tomorrow, Is Belief; Not Decided Yet.

OFFICIALS ARE OPTIMISTIC

Paris, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—The French reply to the latest note from the United States on the French tariff question was handed to Sheldon Whitehouse, American charge d'affaires, tonight. The note will be available in Washington Monday morning. Complete silence is being maintained here on the contents of the note.

It has been reported, however, that France decided to offer to apply the old tariff, enforced before 1921, to American merchandise until a commercial treaty is concluded. In some cases the maximum applicable to American goods under the rates of this tariff would be less than the minimum rate granted Germany under the recent Franco-German commercial treaty.

(Associated Press.)

The text of the French reply to the latest American note in the tariff discussion began dribbling into the State Department late yesterday, but no prospect that the document would be decoded and available for consideration by Secretary Kellogg before Monday.

It was apparent that officials felt the tariff controversy was in a fair way toward friendly adjustment as a result of the diplomatic exchanges.

The next step of the Washington Government probably will depend to a large extent upon what France has to say as to the customs rates to be charged on American goods during the negotiations for a commercial treaty which will settle finally the relations between the two governments in this and other respects.

The last American communication reiterated a request for application of the minimum French tariffs during the pendency of the treaty negotiations. Press reports from Paris, however, have indicated that France was not prepared to go to that extent and would offer instead substantially the status that American goods enjoyed before the recent application of the higher levels of customs dues under the French decree of August 30.

It was not clear last night whether the Washington government would make a further effort to obtain what amounts to most-favored-nation treatment for American goods while the treaty is under negotiation or accept the limited concession in that regard France is understood to have made in the new note. In any event, the difference between application of complete minimum French rates and those charged American good before the controversy arose is relatively so slight that it appears doubtful that this point will complicate seriously the drafting of a formula under which the treaty negotiations will be taken up.

ANTILIQUOR AGREEMENT SOUGHT WITH FRANCE

NEGOTIATIONS UNDER WAY

(Associated Press.)

An agreement, whereby the French government would cooperate with the United States to cope with the large illicit liquor traffic which makes the French islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, off the Newfoundland coast, a base, is being sought by the Washington administration. Conversations to this end have been progressing between the two governments since July.

The United States, it is understood, does not propose to conclude a formal treaty between the twp governments. It is seeking, rather, an agreement to facilitate law enforcement in this country and whereby information useful to American Coast Guard officials—such as lists of ships which clear the islands, their cargoes, their declared origin and destination, the ownership—would be available.

Treasury and State Department officials in conversations with French officials are said to have declared St. Pierre and Miquelon have become the worst bases in the Atlantic since a cooperative agreement was reached with the British administration of the Bahamas.

The agreement sought by the Americans also is represented by them as being desirable to orderly navigation because numerous fraudulent clearance papers for the French islands have been found on rum ships.

The conversations were first begun by Assistant Secretary Dewey, of the Treasury, in Paris last July. Since then the matter has been almost continuously under discussion, America and France trying to find a common basis for the agreement and to fix how close the cooperation should be without infringing French rights and the rights of the islands' inhabitants. In the past French officials, it is understood, have had occasion to complain of American Coast Guard operations too close within the territorial waters of the islands, but, despite this, the island authorities contend they have cooperated with the Treasury officials regarding shipping activities.

Effective cooperation, French officials state, therefore already exists to an important degree, and any extension of this should be carefully studied to avoid infringement of French rights. Some of the proposals put forward by the Washington administration to effect the agreement are understood to have appeared too sweeping to the French authorities.

New Congress Race By Ruth Bryan Owen

Tallahassee, Fla., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Ruth Bryan Owen, of Miami, will enter the race for Congress from the Fourth district, according to advices received here. Mrs. Owen, a daughter of the late W. J. Bryan, ran in 1926 for the Democratic nomination in the primary against Representative W. J. Sears. He has represented the district since he was elected to the sixty-fourth Congress.

Short Skirts Save 1⅔ Yards Of Goods in Average Dress

(Associated Press.)

Shorter skirts, shorter sleeves and the straight-line design of women's clothing have reduced by about 1 2-3 yards the amount of goods required for a dress made on present-day patterns, as compared with the dresses of eight years ago.

This has been determined by the Bureau of Home Economics, Department of Agriculture, which has just completed a study of the styles to determine to what extent the changes of fashion have directly affected the yardage sold of all kinds of dress goods. An estimate of the total amount of goods yearly affected by the reduction was not made.

"A gradual decrease in the yardage required for dress patterns is evident from 1918 to 1927," the bureau announced yesterday. "The skirts worn in 1919 reached the ankles. The hem line has been moving steadily upward. In 1925 it was 10 or 12 inches from the floor, and at present it is 15 or more inches up. The long or threequarter length sleeves of 1918 and 1919 became shorter and shorter up to 1924 and 1925. Just now the long sleeve has returned for daytime wear.

"As a concrete illustration of the change in yardage required at the present time in making a woman's dress, a 1919 pattern was modified and made up with a shorter skirt, lowered waistline, and narrower flounce, but otherwise virtually the same as the dress of 8 years ago. The original pattern called for 5⅞ yards of 36-inch material, but the 1927 version was made from 4 1-6 yards of material of the same width, a reduction of about 1 2-3 yards.

"During the last few years the changes in fashion have tended to decrease sales of all kinds of dress goods. Cotton fabrics have suffered proportionately, if not more than other fabrics, because of the wide variety of clothing that is made from them. Changes in the length of skirts and sleeves, the straight-line dress design, the decrease in the amount of clothing worn by women, and the vogue of dress designs that can not always be suitably developed in cotton, have been some of the factors that have influenced the reduction in consumption of cotton. Extensive advertising has also helped to make other fibers than cotton popular with women, especially when combined with fabric style forecasts."

ALASKA ELECTION IS UNDER INQUIRY

Delegate Sutherland Charged With Spending More Than Law Allows.

(Associated Press.)

Expenditures in the 1926 campaign in Alaska for the election of a congressional delegate to Washington are being investigated by the Department of Justice.

It was said at the department that Hugh Wade, one of its investigators, is now in Alaska investigating complaints that the corrupt practices act was violated during the campaign, particularly in connection with newspaper advertising. While no definite announcement was made, it is understood one complaint was made by Thomas Marquam, the defeated candidate, who charged that Dan A. Sutherland, his victorious opponent, had spent more than the $5,000 allowed under the law.

In discussing the case yesterday Mr. Sutherland said that he had heard that the department was making an investigation, but that he did not know the nature of the inquiry.

"I spent more than I should have, but I kept within the law," Mr. Sutherland declared.

Blind Men Compete For Assembly Seat

Elizabeth, N. J., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Louis Schnepel, blind musician, one of the four Democratic nominees for assemblyman from Union County, will campaign with a motortruck bearing a piano. He will tour the county, he says, to "sing his way into the legislature." He seeks the seat now held by Thomas L. Muir, also blind, Republican, a former newspaper editor of Plainfield.

POSSESSION OF POTOMAC YARDS HELD REAL ISSUE IN ALEXANDRIA'S ANNEXATION FIGHT

$1,381,456 Assessment Paid Arlington County $26,938 Taxes in 1926.

PROPERTY REQUIRES NO SERVICE IN RETURN

Movement for Incorporation Declared to Have Hastened Expansion Plan.

Shaking off the dust settlement of the last few decades, which stifled the auspicious start she made with the birth of the Nation, Alexandria is making a bid for a place in the sun of Virginia cities.

In its bid for renewed birth, the city would decimate Arlington County, the tiniest political division of that class in the Nation, for Alexandria is preparing an annexation suit by which it would acquire again as much land as is now embraced in its historic corporate limits. And, while a small segment would be lopped off the tail of Fairfax County, the bulk of the property which the city hopes to acquire would come from Arlington.

While Alexandria is compounding and promulgating its ambitious plan of doubling, Arlington County, which has ambitions of its own in the direction of citydom, is preparing and striving to thwart the neighboring city in order not only to preserve its present county territory, but to keep the rich communities which Alexandria seeks in a position to become a part of Arlington City when the time comes for that development.

The nub of the matter, as frankly stated by Arlington County leaders, and as kept discreetly in the background by the Alexandrians, is possession of the Potomac Yards, the greatest freight yards south of New Jersey. These yards are a fertile source of revenue to the political entity in which they are located, and, while the residential communities which are in dispute are important from the standpoint of population and mileage, the financial aspect of city or county possession of the yards is unquestionably the preponderant factor in the row between the city and county.

Ambitions Are Old.

Alexandria's ambitions in the direction of acquiring Arlington County territory extends way back, and in the past she has had some degree of success in her efforts toward acquisition. The land feud between the two divisions probably dates back to the time when in the middle of the nineteenth century the Federal Government deeded back to Virginia the bulk of the land ceded by that Commonwealth as its share of the 10-mile-square area which was to form the seat of the central Government. It goes back to the days when Alexandria, instead of being Alexandria, Va., was Alexandria, D. C.

About fifteen years ago the city launched a step toward obtaining a segment of the then Alexandria County, now Arlington. After a fight of more than two years, during which the annexation suit went to the Supreme Court of Virginia, the city was authorized to extend its then northern boundary line "to Braddock road, thence to a point on the south side of Janneys lane, 50 feet west of King street extended, thence around Washington Park to Roberts lane, thence to the midchannel of Hunting Creek."

This extension was a compromise from the original petition of the city and greatly cut the original extension which it sought. It had the effect however, of running the corporate line through the middle of lots and houses located on the newly established boundary, a fact which has ever since caused inconvenience and discomfort to the residents along the arbitrarily established line

After this annexation, things rocked along quietly until the State legislature at its last session was confronted with a bill which would have allowed residents of Arlington County to vote on whether or not they wished to incorporate as a city. State Senator Frank Ball, of Arlington, succeeded in having the measure adopted in the upper house, and then Delegate Charles Jesse blocked it in the House of Delegates.

Threw Scare Into City.

But the mere introduction of the measure threw a scare into Alexandria. For, while it provided for steps to be taken in [illegible] maneuvers made while the county was considering the city incorporation measure, all annexation efforts would have been blocked when and if the county became a city. Under the Virginia law annexation suits can not be brought to take away territory from a Defeat of the enabling act relieved the minds of Alexandrians, and a general understanding seemed to prevail that no annextion petition would be started for a while. But Alexandria feels that should Arlington ever succeed in becoming a city, and thus become immune to annexation suits, Alexandria would be stifled. The Potomac River and Hunting Creek block efforts for expansion along their boundaries, and the only open territory is Arlington County.

With the enabling act dead, at least for a time, things were rocking along smoothly, until on September 8 J. E. W. Timberman tossed a hand grenade into the session of the Alexandria City Council, of which he is the "baby" member. Without warning, or without consultation with his colleagues, he introduced a resolution to appropriate money for a "survey of contiguous territory for the purpose of annexing said territory to the City of Alexandria." With looks of consternation on the faces of its members, the council hastily voted to hold the resolution over, and adjourned.

But the die had been cast, and, with the proposal brought out in the open, Alexandria could do naught but put up a united, though reluctant, front, which it promptly proceeded to do.

Resolution Is Adopted.

The result was that at a meeting on September 23 the council adopted the resolution, setting forth the limits of the territory which the city would seek as beginning at approximately the south bank of Four Mile Run and the Potomac River, running southwest to Cameron Mills road, in Arlington County, thence northwest to Braddock road, thence south to the intersection of Seminary lane and Braddock road, thence south to Cameron Run, thence east to the intersection of Cameron Run and the present corporation limits in Hunting Creek.

But that was two weeks or more ago and when Alexandria starts to progress it does it by leaps and bounds, so that the territory sought has now been enlarged, another large section having been added by changing the projected boundary line from the Cameron Mills road to the Seminary road, or the "Nauck," as it is generally known. Even that took place several days ago, and, with the fever of progress and enlargement still hot within its veins, Alexandria may, as likely as not, further increase the limits of the territory which it would acquire before the petition is finally filed.

As near as the city fathers can state it now, the property which Alexandria would acquire under these metes and bounds would include the following communities: The town of Potomac, including the villages of Del Ray and Mount Ida; Braddock Heights Section No. 2, West Braddock Heights, Jefferson Park, Beverly Hills, Cottage Park or the Park Addition; Rose Crest, Sections No. 1 and No. 2; Wilmar Park and Monticello Park, all in Arlington County, and Belle Haven and Cameron Park, in Fairfax County.

Officials of the city will admit, although they don't rush into print with the statement, that business and industry in the city are not making any strides toward progress. They admit that there is a large block of industrial and waterfront property within the present corporate limits which will take care of any possible expansion within the next few years. They will concede that the present population is less than it was when the census was taken in 1920.

Why Expansion Is Wanted.

Still the only two reasons which they advance for the annexation project are that the city must have more room to expand residentially, and that it would be stifled for all time should Arlington County become a city.

Why a city with a decreasing population should want more residential property presents a nice question, but it is answered by Mayor William Albert Smoot, who says that the people who have built up the communities which the city now wants to annex were originally and still at heart are Alexandrians. He will tell you, as will other city officials, that these communities are suburbs of Alexandria, and they will name you names of persons who have sold their holdings in Alexandria and moved into these communities. For these reasons Alexandria must extend its boundaries.

The benefits which Alexandria would extend to the communities affected are innumerable, according to the Alexandrians. All of the advantages of the city would be extended at once to the villages and towns. Streets, lights, sewers, city water, schools, police and fire protection would be placed in them by the kind city.

But, according to the residents of most of the affected communities, and according to all of the other residents of the county, the communities have all of these advantages at present. And they are getting them cheaper from the county than they would ever get them from a city, for the State makes liberal contributions, particularly for street and highways, while it doesn't contribute a nickel to cities.

Both Mayor Smoot and City Manager Paul Morton, of Alexandria, deny that the city is heavily in debt and that it is seeking the additional territory in order to extend its bonding limit, fixed at 18 per cent of the assessed value of its realty. They declare that the city, with a bonding limit in excess of $2,000,000, has less than $1,500,000 outstanding, and they point out that it possesses a valuable municipally owned gas plant, much school property and other assets upon which it could realize any money it might need.

Further than that, they point out, that if any bonds should be sold within five years after the property sought has been acquired, and if the bonds were given on the territory acquired, the full proceeds of that bond issue would have to be spent on the new territory.

Really, Alexandria doesn't stand to gain anything much by the annexation project, the officials declare, and it is making its fight simply that it may not be stifled in future development.

Mayor Smoot says:

"I am interested in a number of pieces of property in Arlington County, and as a taxpayer of that county I would hate to see the entire county lose the many financial and legislative benefits which accrue to all the counties of Virginia as against the cities, and, individually, I doubt the necessity for hurry in annexation proceedings on the part of Alexandria, but when the matter is finally summed up it will be found that both communities are hastily trying to protect themselves against each other." That is as close as any one in Alexandria will come to saying that they are willing to compromise the matter and put off annexation if Arlington will postpone city incorporation.

While the main fight on the annexation project will be made by Arlington County as a unit, the efforts will be largely backed up by the residents of the affected area, although to a certain extent opinion in the area is divided. That division there is results largely from the possibility of Arlington's becoming a city. If the county does become a city all of the county benefits which the affected area now enjoys, such as a share in the gasoline tax and State aid in road building and maintenance, would be lost.

7,000 Persons in Area.

And if these benefits are to be wiped out many residents of the area would just as soon become citizens of the City of Alexandria as they would citizens of the City of Arlington.

The area sought by Alexandria embraces about 3.5 miles and includes a population of approximately 7,000. These 7,000 persons are being circulated with petitions asking that they become codefendant with the county in the annexation suit, in order that they may present to the tribunal which will hear the case the views of those who would be annexed.

But the fight will be fought officially by Arlington County, and in and around the county courthouse these days multiple conferences are being held, and devious routes of opposition are being laid. And while the county is fighting to preserve its existing boundaries, the entire question of incorporation and annexation has become tightly bound up in a bitter election fight being waged within its confines.

Facts and figures concerning the territory which the county stands to lose are being prepared, and the board of supervisors of the county already has authorized the appropriation of funds with which to employ special counsel to offset any advantage which might accrue to Alexandria through its having appropriated funds for a similar purpose.

The county will claim that the people in the area which Alexandria wants do not want to go into the city, and it will claim that loss of the territory and its wealth would work great injury to the county.

County Commissioner of Revenue Harry K. Green estimates that property in the area which the county would lose is assessed at about $4,000,000, and that in 1926 it paid to the county in taxes about $85,000. This figure in the present year, it is estimated, will run to nearly $100,000.

The area sought by Alexandria would take away a large segment of Jefferson district; in fact, would take away nearly the entire section and would leave the county with only two districts intact, Washington and Arlington.

But the great bulk of public sentiment in the county in opposition to the annexation project is upon the "steal" of Potomac Yards. These yards, with an assessed value of $1,381,456, are the choice plum, so far as revenue is concerned, of the entire State of Virginia. In 1926 they paid to the county alone $26,938.42.

The mere payment isn't the only feature of the fight over the yards. The yards get virtually nothing in return for it, or, as residents of the county point out, the thousands of dollars of taxes which they pay are "pure velvet." They require no police protection, they maintain their own fire-fighting force and no streets or roads traverse them. No sewers are needed, and the county doesn't have to pay any attention to the giant plant except to send it a bill for taxes. The same situation would obtain should the yards become a part of Alexandria, except that then the city would send the bill for the taxes.

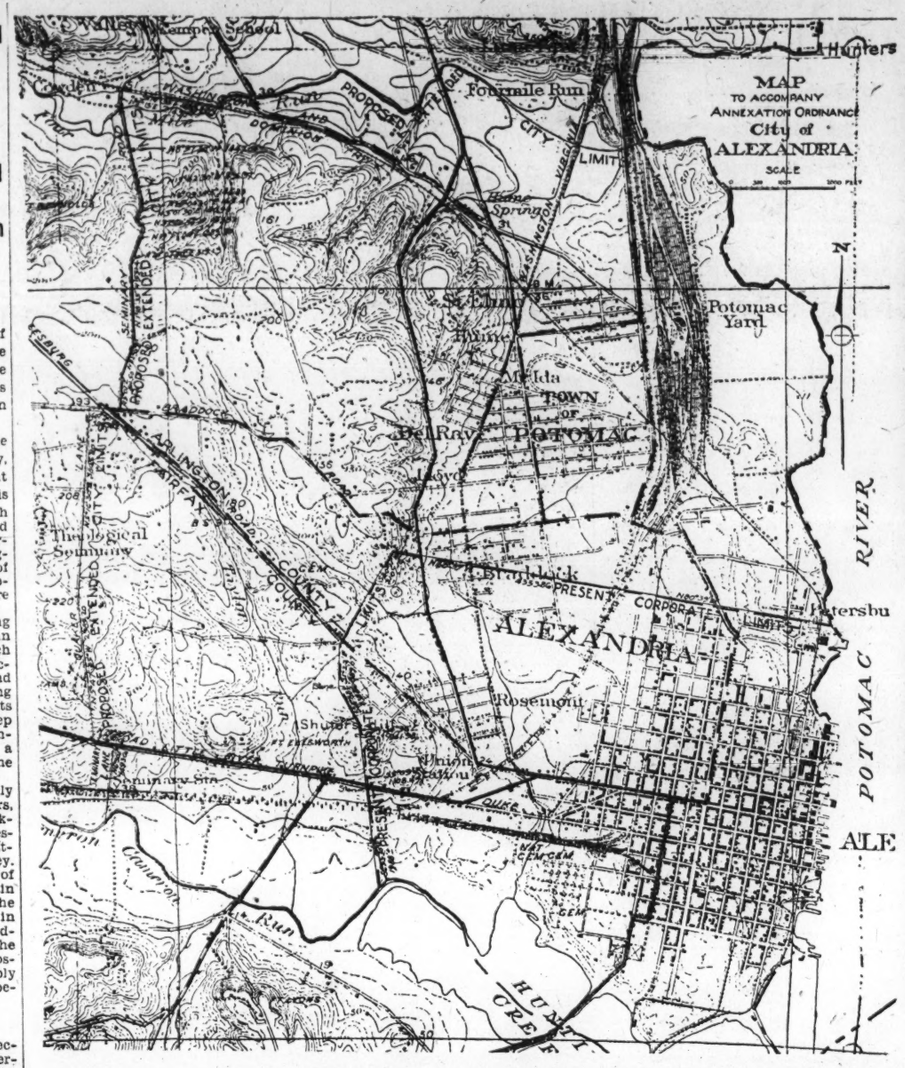

Tempest in Teapot.

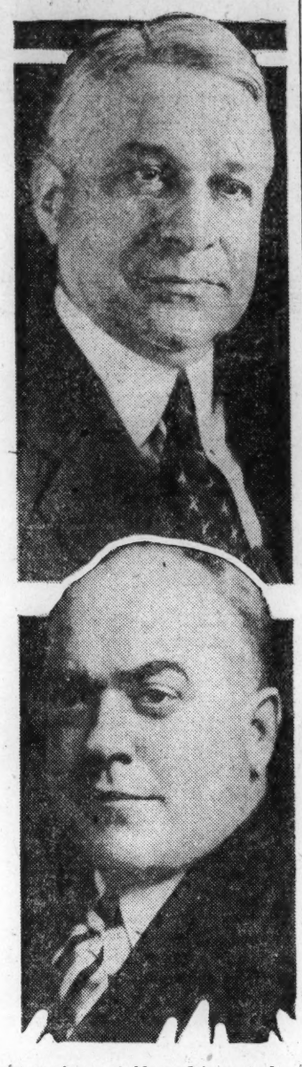

Efforts of the county to combat the Alexandria move will be ably supplemented by the government of the incorporated town of Potomac. When William C. Gloth, Commonwealth's attorney for the county, steps up to fight the case he will be aided by Walter U. Varney, corporation counsel for Potomac, and, though the two are in different political factions in the county they are seeing eye-to-eye in the annexation fight.

Mr. Varney explains that his town is unanimously opposed to going into the city of Alexandria, and that the town council has for many years been on the lookout for such a move. The council will meet soon, he explains, and take such action as may be necessary to place itself on record and get its views before the tribunal which will hear the case.

Mr. Varney is aiding Mr. Gloth already in the distribution of the codefendant petitions being circulated among the residents of the area affected, and he says that when these are turned in every resident of Potomac will have signed them.

And so it goes, with the two units, both of which were once part of the District of Columbia, carrying on a battle which for size, although not of fury, may be likened to a tempest in a teapot. When the storm has cleared Alexandria will probably be a little larger than at present, but it will not have acquired all which it seeks, and even what it gets will undoubtedly be several years in passing from the domination of the county.

SARGENT APPROVES CAMPBELL PAROLE

Prisoner Widely Known in His Attempt to Prosecute Senator Wheeler.

(Associated Press.)

Attorney General Sargent approved a parole yesterday for Gordon Campbell, of Great Falls, Mont., serving a two-year sentence at the Federal Prison at Leavenworth, for using the mails to defraud in connection with an oil promotion venture.

Campbell was sentenced in May, 1925 and recently was recommended for parole by the Parole Board. Campbell became widely known several years ago, when the Government sought to prosecute Senator Wheeler, of Montana, on a charge of having represented him unlawfully in some land negotiations with the Interior Department.

In addition to receiving a prison sentence, Campbell was fined $1,000 after his conviction at Great Falls. He became eligible for parole last July 23.

MOTHER!

A Child Doesn't Laugh and Play if Constipated

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oft-times all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

Millions of Families Depend on Dr. Caldwell's Prescription

W. B. Caldwell M.D. AT AGE 83

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as they are today. People lived normal, quiet lives, ate plain wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air and sunshine. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings to put into their system. So he wrote a prescription for a laxative to be used by his patients.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe, gentle bowel stimulant as Syrup Pepsin.

Under successful management this prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. The fact that millions of bottles are used a year proves that it has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds and fevers.

Millions of families are now never without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if you will once start using it you will also always have a bottle handy for emergencies.

It is particularly pleasing to know that the most of it is bought by mothers for themselves and the children, though Syrup Pepsin is just as valuable for elderly people. All drug stores have the generous bottles.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Ill., and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

CONDEMNATION SOON OF SITES U.S. WANTS FOR 3 STRUCTURES

Land for Supreme Court, Department of Agriculture and G. P. O. Selected.

AWARD ALREADY IN HAND FOR INTERNAL REVENUE

Bids Soon to Be Advertised for Excavations for the Commerce Building.

With the way cleared for early acquisition of the site for the Internal Revenue Building, Federal Building officials indicated yesterday that they soon will institute condemnation proceedings for the land necessary for the buildings of the Supreme Court, Department of Agriculture and Government Printing Office. The award of $815,000 was ratified Friday for the property bounded by Tenth, Eleventh, Little B and C streets for the Internal Revenue Building.

Plans are under way to place the Supreme Court site next on the acquisition program, this building being scheduled for location north of the Congressional Library and east of the Capitol.

The Supreme Court body desires to have a new home, and building officials may devote their attention next toward its construction.

The Department of Agriculture project involves the square south of B street southwest, opposite the site of the projected central administration structure of this department, which will join the existing wings. The extensible building of the department goes on the square to be condemned.

Strip of Land Wanted.

A strip of ground west of the Government Printing Office is needed to complete the site for the extension of this activity, part of the site having been acquired for the extension.

Friday's action in Equity Court, where neither property owners or the Government interposed objections to an award of $815,000 for property for the Internal Revenue Building, opens the way to clearing the site for construction, leaving disposition of the Farmers Market the only obstacle. The disposition is now in the hands of the District Commissioners.

Bids for rough excavation for the Commerce and Internal Revenue building sites will be advertised soon by Treasury officials in charge of the Federal building program.

Shriner Granted Writ Against Tax Board

James S. McCandless, former Imperial potentate of the Ancient Arabic Order of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, is entitled to a writ of mandamus against the Board of Tax Appeals in an income tax controversy, according to a ruling yesterday by Justice Siddons in Circuit Court.

The board will be directed to strike from its records a decision dated April 3, 1926, by which it reversed itself in the matter of permitting McCandless to deduct losses sustained in certain stock sales. It is also ordered to enter this decision as of November 26, 1926, which will allow McCandless to appeal. He could not have appealed had the decision been allowed to stand of April 3. Attorneys Jeffords & Dutton appeared for McCandless.

NYE TO ADDRESS C. OF C. AT MEETING TUESDAY

Report to Be Made on Auto-Tag Controversy Between District and Virginia.

TAX REPORT IS PROPOSED

Senator Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota, will be the guest of honor and address the monthly meeting of the Washington Chamber of Commerce at 8 o'clock Tuesday night in the Willard Hotel. Officers of the Alexandria, Arlington County and Fairfax County, Va., chambers have accepted invitations to attend the session at which a report on the automobile reciprocity problem of the District with Virginia, will be made by Jerome Fanciulli, chairman of the committee on transportation.

Charles W. Darr, chairman of the committee on public safety, will submit his committee's report on the compulsory liability insurance proposal. Following the meeting will be a buffet supper.

Ivan C. Weld, vice president of the chamber, was appointed by Presdient Martin A. Leese yesterday as chairman of a special committee to draw up a report on a referendum on Federal taxation, recently received from the United States Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Weld chose the following to serve on the committee: W. W. Spaid, John H. Small, Miss A. D. Hechmer, Walter C. Balderson and W. J. Waller.

The referendum report deals with such questions as a reduction of corporate income tax to 10 per cent; a repeal of Federal estate tax, abolition of war excise taxes on businesses and provision for full opportunity for the joint congressional tax committee to perfect proposals for the revision of Federal tax laws and their administrations.

Mr. Darr and Dorsey W. Hyde, jr., secretary of the chamber, were appointed by Mr. Leese as delegates to the sessions of the National Crime Commission, which will meet here on November 2 and 3. The meeting will deal largely with means for standardizing State laws concerning the receivers and sellers of stolen property. Delegates from crime commisions of every section of the country will attend.

Harry King was delegated by Mr. Leese to attend the meetings of the directors, national councilors and committees of the United States Chamber of Commerce to be held this week at West Baden Springs, Ind. Mr. King's appointment was made when prior engagements forbade Col. Robert N. Harper, the chamber's councilor, from attending the meeting.

The vacancy created by the resignation of Warren C. Kendall as chairman of the chamber's house committee, was filled yesterday when Mr. Leese appointed Joseph D. Drefuss.

The advisability of placing direction signs along the principal highways leading into the Capital for the accommodation of motoring visitors will be considered Tuesday at noon at a meeting of the parks committee of the chamber. Leo B. Abernethy, chairman, will preside.

A subcommittee of seven members to consider and report on the proposed vagrancy law for the District was announced as follows: Milton B. Zeiler, chairman; Edmund H. Parry, George B. Fraser, Miss A. D. Hechmer, E. D. Merrill, Mrs. Frank Hiram Snell and C. F. Sowers.

DISTRICT LEADER IN TEACHERS' PAY

Public school teachers in the District are better paid, on an average, by $769 annually than teachers in any of the States, it was stated yesterday in a bulletin containing statistics of State school systems for 1924-25, issued by the United States Bureau of Education.

The average salary level of District teachers when the statistics were taken was $2,021, whereas the average for the country is $1,252. Washington teachers receive $167 a year more than those in California, which pays its teachers better than any other State in the Union.

Teachers in Mississippi are the poorest paid, receiving an average of but $448 a year. The same bulletin showed that Washington carries fewer men teachers on its school rosters than 40 States. It also stated that the District gives high school education to more colored students than any eight Southern States out of thirteen tabulated.

Duke Alumni to Entertain.

The Duke University Alumni Association, of Washington, will give a buffet supper and dance Saturday night at the American Association of University Women, 1634 I street northwest. EQUAL RIGHTS LEAGUE TO HOLD MEETING HERE

PLAN PLEA TO CONGRESS

The National Equal Rights League, it was announced yesterday from Boston headquarters, has arranged to hold its twentieth annual session in the John Wesley Church, Fourteenth and Corcoran streets northwest, from October 25 to 28. The session will take the form of a mass convention and race congress for preparation of the negro in his approach to the preelection congress, and for the political struggle of 1928, in so far as he is concerned.

The convention has for its aim the formulation of an accurate consensus and expression of the opinion of the organized negro. The paramount objectives, it is understood, will be the abolition of segregation and racial discrimination in Federal Government service, the determination of equal rights issues, and formulation of principles to govern action at the polls in 1928.

The convention will undertake presentation of a petition to Congress signed by masses of colored citizens in 35 States. It will be open to individuals, delegates from various organiaztions and representatives of towns and cities through citizens committees and public meetings.

Elephant Editor Annoyed By "Ellie Fant's" Queries

Weeks of Managing Contest Conducted by The Post Alone Seem to Enable Him to Bear Nerve Strain.

Yesterday was a sort of April Fool day for the Elephant Puzzle Editor of The Washington Post. Every one and every thing conspired to annoy him, it seemed, and he would have suffered keenly except for his tough, pachydermatous hide, hardened by weeks of elephant puzzle work.

First of all, this query was received in the mail:

"Dear Puzzle Editor: What is this Elephant Contest everybody's talking about? Will it be like the Dempsey-Tunney fight? And is the $2,000 prize offered to the winner for the heavyweight champion among animals?

"Sincerely,
"ELLIE FANT."

The puzzle editor sat down seriously to answer the letter and explain all about how the person who weighs the picture elephants in The Post correctly and sends in some newspaper subscriptions, according to the rules, will receive $2,000. He started to do all this, until suddenly he saw the name signed to tthe letter. Then he said things even an elephant couldn't understand.

After a while it became warm in the office, and the puzzle editor opened the window. A peanut vendor passed by, pushing his cart along and whistling a merry tune. Suddenly the window was slammed shut, and the young assistant observed with surprise that his director seemed on the verge of apoplexy.

"Are you ill?" he inquired, in genuine alarm. He stood up, prepared to call an ambulance.

The puzzle editor replied gruffly, when he found his breath, that he wasn't ill. He wished people would mind their own business, he muttered indistinctly, which was his only audible comment on the polite solicitude of his subordinate. The whistling outside sounded louder than ever. Mechanically the words fitted themselves into the tuneful ditty:

"Said the Ant to the Elephant, 'Who are you shoving?'
Oh, there's one more river to cross—
Oh, there's one more river to cross."

JOHNSON TO JUDGE HALLOWEEN DANCE

Walter Johnson, famous pitcher of the Washington Baseball Team; Clifford Berryman, cartoonist, and Mrs. Minnigerode Andrews will be the judges and award the prizes at the Halloween celebration and dance of the Knights of Pythias, to be held in the organization's hall on October 31.

VATICAN PROPOSALS DECLARED GREATEST MUSSOLINI TRIUMPH

TERMS OF AGREEMENT NOT YET MAPPED OUT

Italian Paper's Comment Is Cautious, Lest Negotiations Be Handicapped.

Rome, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Solution of the "Roman Question" on lines laid down by the Osservatore Romano, official Vatican organ, today continues to be the absorbing topic of Italian life, since relations between the church and the state has been the most important problem which United Italy has had to face during over half century.

The Italian press, realizing the gravity of the problem and the delicate phase of negotiations it is now going through was very reticent. Indeed, the majority of newspapers merely reproduced Osservatore's editorials, without expressing any opinion, as if not wishing to handicap in any way the good intentions existing on both sides.

Fascista Press Comment.

The Fascista press merely says that the fact of the Vatican having at last come to the point of initiating discussion on a possible readjustment of the status quo and clearly setting forth the basis on which an agreement might be reached, is the greatest triumph for Premier Mussolini and his regime.

Roman newspapers reproduced foreign comment, especially that of French and English papers, which, however, are considered as premature in accepting the whole question as already settled. People here who are acquainted with Vatican methods and traditions believe that some time must elapse before any practical accord can actually be reached.

Also, all suggested solutions appearing in the French and English press giving the "Leonine City" to the Pope, or a corridor from the Vatican to the sea, or similar territorial suggestions, are merely reiterations of former ancient projects discussed several times and discarded on both sides; so that the truth is, nobody knows at the present moment—perhaps not even Pope Pius or Premier Mussolini—what will be the actual ground on which accord may be established.

The Giornale d'Italia points out the ability and tact of the personage who inspired, or perhaps wrote, the editorials that apepared in Osservatore, calling attention to the fact that in speaking of what should be given back, the Holy See ably avoided the word "restitution," which might have made the hair stand upon the heads of many people, but turned this difficulty by speaking as if it were the most simple thing in the world, not restitution of territory, but reestablishment of papal sovereignty as reparation of the wrong done the church by the Italian revolution, saying "it is universally admitted that one revolution can correct another revolution, therefore the Fascista revolution can remedy what the revolution for the unity of Italy did against the prerogatives of the church."

The Roman newspaper goes on to say that these considerations could not be made under the spur of events which led to the fall from temporal power, but now after 57 years, following Pope Pius IX and four more Popes and the World War, it is possible to discuss the "Roman question" with equanimity on both sides. A frank, clear statement by the Holy See that it does not seek any international guarantees of foreign intervention renders direct discussion between the heads of the church and the state not only possible, but makes the probability of an agreement almost certain, considering the good faith on both sides.

Gen. Sutton Found Wandering in Canyon

Vancouver, B. C., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Gen. Frank A. Sutton, former British army officer, later adviser to the Manchurian war lord, Chang Tso-Lin, and now heavily interested in British Columbia real estate and mining property, was found today after he had wandered for twenty hours in trackless underbrush near his camp after losing his trail on Friday. Because of the dangerous character of the 24-mile canyon, where he was lost and where the Peace River breaks through the rockies in a raging torrent, it was feared the general might have fallen over a cliff and lost his life. Search parties looked for him all last night and today.

Heart of Kosciusko Returned to Poland

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

Warsaw, Oct. 15.—The heart of Poland's national hero of liberty, Thaddeus Kosciusko, who fought for the liberty of America, was brought to Poland today by two Swiss officers and received with a solemn ceremony by a delegation of Poland's crack officers at the Polish border. It was taken to the palace of the old kings in Warsaw.

The heart was kept embalmed at Rapperswil, Switzerland, together with other Polish relics taken there by Polish emigrants before Poland was resurrected by the Versailles Peace Treaty.

Chess Challenger Is Holding His Lead

Buenos Aires, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—The fifteenth game for the world's chess championship was played here tonight without changing in any way the 3-to-2 lead held by Alexander Alekhine, for another draw was recorded in 30 moves after three hours of listless play.

Capablanca, the champion, again opened with his queen's pawn, which was met by the challenger with the usual defense. Queens were exchanged at the fifteenth move.

Bishop of London Makes Hole in One

London, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—The Bishop of London has joined the hole-in-one club.

Cuno Held Unlikely To Take Post Here

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

Berlin, Oct. 15.—Wilhelm Cuno, former chancellor of Germany and president of the Hamburg-American Line, who has been mentioned as the successor to the late Baron Ago von Maltzan, German Ambassador to the United States, tonight before the chamber of commerce declared he was "entirely occupied by the economic questions in Germany and Austria since the war and had no intention of abandoning his devotion to economic reconstruction."

This was interpreted to mean that Dr. Cuno will refuse the Washington embassy.

GUARD SLAIN IN ATTACK ON ARMORED BANK CAR

SECOND ESCORT MAY DIE

Philadelphia, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—A man was killed and two were wounded today when two bank guards, two bank officials and three policemen fought off five hold-up men who attacked an armored car carrying bank funds.

The dead man is Thomas Kennedy, 54, a guard for the West Philadelphia branch office of the Belmont Trust Co. The wounded men are William Lindsey, 45, another guard, and one of the holdup men. Lindsey was shot three times and is in a serious condition.

The bandits were waiting at the bank when an armored car arrived with the cash for the day's business. In the car with Lindsey and Kennedy was John E. Hagerty, treasurer of the bank, who had $13,000 in a bag. In another automobile, behind the armored car, rode Raymond Keller, assistant to Mr. Hagerty.

Keller had opened the bank doors, when a volley of shots were fired, smashing the glass. The two guards returned the fire and a battle began. Hagerty, head down, plowed into the open door, while Kennedy and Lindsey, seeking shelter, fired at their assailants. Three policemen, hearing the shots, ran to the scene.

The holdup men returned the fire for a moment, then fled. Two of them ran in one direction, pursued by Lindsey and a policeman. Lindsey fell at the corner, shot in the back, left thigh and hip.

Kennedy, running after two who fled in another direction, was shot through the heart as the fugitives turned in their tracks and emptied their pistols at him. Only one of the holdup men was seen after Kennedy fell. He appeared to be wounded, and was seen to stagger into a blue automobile, which drove off.

The same branch was robbed November 12, 1926. Holdup men escaped with $38,000 by following the tactics which failed today.

PEACE OF BALKANS AGAIN IS DISTURBED BY ENVOY'S DEATH

Killing of Albanian Minister in Prague Said to Have Political Angles.

16-YEAR-OLD ASSASSIN SURRENDERS HIS PISTOL

Drinks 3 Large Glasses of Cognac to Fortify Self for the Slaying.

London, Oct. 15 (A.P.)—The peace of the Balkans has again been disturbed by an assassination. The Jugoslav-Bulgar ferment over the murder of Gen. Kovachevitch had barely subsided when last night, at Prague, Tsena Bey, Albanian Minister, accredited to both Jugoslavia and Czechoslovakia, was assassinated.

Dispatches reaching London suggest that Tsena Bey's assassination might be due to the tension between Albania and Jugoslavia, which recently caused European anxiety. It is also hinted that the incident might be connected with the Macedonian movement, which has given rise to trouble along the border between Jugoslavia, Bulgaria and Greece, and upon which the blame for the assassination of Gen. Kovachevitch is placed by Jugoslavia.

Further details of last night's assassination came from Prague today. According to the Czechoslovak police, Agiviadh Bebi, the Albanian youth who fired the two fatal shots while the minister was getting his hat in the cloakroom of a cafe, is a student in the sixth class of a Roman school. He came to Prague from Vienna last Monday.

Bebi is only 16 years old and of remarkably small stature. He speaks Italian, French, German, Labanian and Slavic. He planned the crime very carefully, witnesses say, visiting the cafe each day and closely watching the movements of his victim, who lived in rooms above the cafe.

To fortify himself for the assassination he drank three large glasses of cognac a few minutes before he pulled the trigger which put the diplomat low.

When asked why he killed Tsena Bey, Bebi replied "because he wanted to sell Albania to Jugoslavia."

The assailant made no attempt to escape. He handed his revolver and passport to the police calmly. To them he said, "One more traitor is out of the way and I am responsible."

Tsena Bey had been in Prague about a fortnight and was to have presented his credentials to President Masaryk within a few days. He was 38 years old and the son of Riza Bay Duakova, one of the richest Albanians of the Anseleld region of Jugoslavia. His father was once adjutant to Abdul Hamid and by a strange turn of fate also died at the hands of an assassin. The motive for this crime never was explained.

The late minister was a Mohammedan and is said to have married into the family of Ahmed Zogu, present head of Albania, who appointed him to represent Albania both in Jugoslavia and Czechoslovakia with its headquarters at Prague. Tsena Bey took part in the rebellion in which Bishop Fan S. Noli was ousted from the presidency. At that time he was minister of interior and commander in chief of all the Albanian troops.

There is a difference of opinion in respect to Tsena Bey's political attitude. Some say that he was friendly to Jugoslavia, while others declare that he was identified with the inner Macedonian revolutionary organization which was held responsible for the death of Gen. Kovachevitch.

Jugoslavs See Challenge.

Belgrade, Jugoslavia, Oct. 15 (A.P.). The assassination of Tsena Bey, Albanian Minister to Jugoslavia and Czechoslovakia, has made a profound and painful impression throughout Jugoslavia, where the slain minister was well known for his efforts to promote cordial relations between Albania and Jugoslavia.

The Belgrade newspapers today declare almost unanimously that they consider the murder a direct challenge to Jugoslavia.

Tsena Bey, who was a diplomat of marked ability, had won great popularity here by his constant enunciation of the doctrine of "the Balkans for the Balkan people" and his reported condemnation of what is regarded here as Italy's domination over Albania.

BURNING SCHOONER'S CREW SAVED AT SEA

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—The crew of the Flower Dew, a British schooner, reported sighted apparently abandoned and burning last night by a passing steamer about 400 miles east of Savannah, Ga., was taken off by the steamship Beronica and will be landed at Portland, Me., radio messages received here this evening state.

The Coast Guard cutter Modoc was this morning ordered to sea from Parris Island, S. C., by Capt. F. S. Van Boskerck, commandant of the Coast Guard division, to search for Flower Dew, reported sighted by the United Fruit liner Fiaxola.

It is likely that the Modoc will reach the vicinity of the ship before tomorrow, and in the meantime the schooner will probably have burned to the water's edge, making it difficult to locate, it was said here.

The schooner Maurice B. Thurlow, which stranded on Diamond Shoals Thursday, is today a total loss, according to dispatches fro the Coast Guard cutter Mascoutin. The Thurlow has been broken up and destroyed by the pounding of the waves, according to the message. The crew was taken off yesterday by the Mascoutin and all are safe aboard that vessel.

GEN. GOMEZ STRIVING DESPERATELY TO FLEE

SKIRMISHES REPORTED

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

Mexico City, Oct. 15.—Brought to bay, Gen. Arnulfo R. Gomez, leader of the abortive insurrection, is striving desperately to evade capture and death at the hands of 1,000 federal soldiers pursuing and hounding him in the wild wooded regions near Huatusco in the state of Vera Cruz, where minor skirmishes between the scattered rebels and the loyal troops have occurred.

Gomez two weeks ago, long weeks for him, was a presidential candidate and a political power. With his aids crushed and beaten and his partner in the antireelectionist movement, Gen. Francisco Serrano, executed, his hopes have perished before the powerful fist of President Calles, directing the federal army in stamping out the revolt.

It was the end of the rebels' hopes when Gen. Gonzalo Escobar's federal troops with heavy fire routed the Gomez forces, combined with the remnants of the Serranoistas, at Yahualulco, Vera Cruz.

Gomez, according to the official report, figured that his entrenchments were impregnable and believed that he could assume a defensive attitude that not even the strongest force of National troops could break. He was wrong and today, two weeks after the rebellion opened with the garrison mutiny in Mexico City, when 1,200 men thought to comprise the bulk of the Gomez-Serrano strength all over the nation, death has come to the seditious move, the same grim death that overtook the vast majority of its leaders with only two noteworthy exceptions—Gomez and his aid, Gen. Almada, who led the garrison revolt.

Skirmishes have marked this week's activities, with the rebels invariably taking bad beatings wherever they were cornered by government troops. The end came so swiftly that from the national problem it developed into it has now become a common outlaw-bandit chase with Gomez as the quarry and Almada also considered a big prize. So complete has been the annihilation of the rebel strength by the swiftly acting President Calles that his aids and army officials have moved from the broad terrace heights of Chapultepec Castle to their regular offices downtown in the National Palace, showing the government's attitude in considering the rebellion completely finished.

Officials who a week ago worked earnestly on a quick solution have achieved their goal and have assumed normal life, returning to their regular routine and entertainment, many of them resuming the playing of polo, which is a great pastime of army officer here. Another high point in the week's developments has been a material slackening in executions of ringleaders of the plot such as marked the opening of the week's activities. Practically all the instigators fell into the hands of the federals, some being imprisoned and others summarily executed, but the ultimate end was achieved. The quick executions probably were the most effective means of quelling the outbreak. Every activity is now confined to localizing Gomez in Vera Cruz, with his capture or death expected momentarily.

Apple Pie Weighs More Than a Ton

Yakima, Wash., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Heralded as the "world's biggest," an apple pie weighing more than a ton and requiring a specially constructed oven and a derrick for handling, was baked in Yakima today. Four bakers, wielding rolling pins 15 feet long rolled the dough for the crust. Fires were started in the huge oven yesterday to assure the proper heat. Apples weighing 2,100 pounds were precooked in a cannery. The pie was of the open-faced variety, with strips of crust criss-crossing over the vast surface.

The baking of the pie was preliminary to the annual apple celebration. The 2,000 school children, each of whom have been promised a bite of the pie, milled around the large outdoor oven while it was baking.

OZONE IN UPPER AIR SAVES VIOLET RAYS NEEDED FOR HEALTH

Announcement Made by Dr. Abbot in Report of Smithsonian Institution.

SCIENTISTS ALL OVER WORLD CONTRIBUTE

Habits of Mosquito Fish and Ritual Bull Fight Revealed to the Public.

The ultraviolet rays so indispensable to human health just miss being cut off from the sun rays by a slender trace of ozone in the upper atmosphere, according to a paper written by Dr. S. G. Abbot, acting secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, which is one of 31 articles appearing in the eighty-first annual report of that institution.

"With the higher plants," the scientist writes, "it must be sunshine or death. With man and the higher animals it must be sunshine or sickness."

Pointing to the use of sun rays as a cure for rickets, Dr. Abbot says the particular rays which have this curative property seem to be a very narrow region in the ultraviolet. "It is astonishing to remember," he continues, "that this very group of rays, thus proved indispensable to the development of growing creatures, just misses being cut off from sun rays by the trace of ozone which exists in our upper atmosphere. On so delicate a chance depends human health."

In discussing the influence of sun rays on plants and animals Dr. Abbot touches on a field of investigation in which little has been done, but which gives promise of having a pronounced effect on the world's food supply. He lists four vital activities of the sun in plants. The first is the mysterious combining effect of certain solar rays, which, acting in green leaves, build up the most complex life chemicals from such simple materials as carbonic acid gas of the air and weakly impregnated water from the ground. The second is the evaporation from the leaves and twigs of enormous quantities of water, thus leaving behind in suitable concentration the various needful chemicals brought up by the water from the soil. Thirdly, the sun, by this process of evaporation, counteracts its own great heat and prevents scorching, and, fourthly, it maintains a suitable temperature.

Effect of Light Studied.

By controlling such factors as the temperature of environment, the duration of sunlight and the intensity and spectral quality of sun rays, Dr. Abbot shows that man can produce astonishing changes in the growth and texture of plants. For instance, scarcity of light tends to thin and broaden the leaves, an effect which is taken advantage of by tobacco growers when they erect semitransparent tents over their crops.

In another article on the evolution of stars, Dr. Abbot summarizes the probable course of such evolution as follows:

"Out of the formless nebula, whose atoms were brought into being by some means of creation which we do not understand, red giant stars, far less dense than air, were formed. Under the combined influences of gravitation and radiation, these giant stars grew hotter and denser. With rising surface temperatures, their colors advanced through yellow to white and blue, attended by the familiar changes of spectra, and by a great decrease in diameter, but much change of total brightness. Arrived at temperatures so superlative and densities so considerable, the flow of radiation from within to heat the surface is hindered by absorption owing to shortness of average wave length, so that the surfaces no longer maintain their maximum temperature or radiation. Yet the inner temperatures continue rising because the stars, though so dense, retain the characters of perfect gases. For their atoms are reduced by separation of nuclei and electrons. The process of cooling at the surface continues until the star, born a red giant, dies a red dwarf, having not only attained great density by contraction, but lost much mass by annihilation."

Astronomy Is Subject.

Astronomy furnishes the subject matter for two more articles in the report. J. H. Jeans, the distinguished English mathematician and astronomer, discusses the new outlook in cosmogony, in which he says that "a number of considerations combine to show that the universe is finite, and it is just because we know this, and are beginning to discover the actual limits to the size of the universe, and to its duration in time, that the present position in astronomy and cosmogony is of quite unusual interest."

Dr. Jeans inclines to the belief that the Andromeda nebula and the star cloud N. G. C. 6822, at distances of 950,000 and 1,00,000 light-years respectively, fix the approximate limits of the universe. "We now get the best picture of the the universe by thinking of it as consisting of a number of subuniverses, detached from one another like islands on an ocean. * * * Our own star system is a very big island indeed, with the sun not far from its center; the big nebula in Andromeda is another big island, smaller but of comparable size; while the star clusters and smaller nebulae are islands on a smaller scale."

The problem of the cosmogonist, according to Dr. Jeans, is to explain why the universe is as the astronomer finds it. He accepts the theory that the origin of a star's heat is the star's mass. It lives by transforming its mass into radiation. The most likely way in which mass could be completely transformed into radiation would be by the positive and negative electric charges of which all matter is constructed rushing into one another and mutually annihilating one another.

"From the sun's known rate of radiation it is found that its mass must be diminishing at the rate of about 250,000,000 tons a minute. * * * At the present rate of radiation, the total mass of the sun would provide radiation for 15,000,000 years." Between stars of the very highest luminosity, which are what Dr. Jeans calls at the top of the evolutionary ladder, and those of lowest luminosity, the time is 200,000,0000 years, which represents the total life of a star.

Dr. Jean concludes his article with the statement that there is little hope of man's learning from the stars the secret of obtaining free energy. How desirable this would be he makes clear by saying that the "total consumption of coal in the British Isles produces less heat, light, and energy than could be obtained by the annihilation of an ounce of matter per day." But he holds out no hope because he believes that the types of matter in the stars which are changing into energy at an appreciable rate are not present on earth. "They probably consist of elements heavier than uranium, the heaviest element known on earth."

An imaginative article of great interest is contributed by the French astronomer, Lucien Rudaux. He visualizes the surfaces of the moon and the planets and the appearance which the sun and the earth would have to dwellers upon these other worlds.

In an interesting article on the cause of earthquakes, particularly those of the Eastern United States, Dr. William H. Hobbs writes that "the deep seated reason for the changes brought about in the configuration of the earth's surface, is by geologists generally believed to be the continuous loss into surrounding space of the heat from the earth's interior portions. This loss of heat is accompanied by a reduction of volume, a shrinking of the interior core of the earth, and the outer shell of rock being already cooled to a relatively stable condition must wrinkle as it adjusts itself. The old illustration of an apple in late winter which wrinkles from the loss of water and consequent reduction of volume of its interior portion, may still serve well at the present time."

In the field of biology, the report contains two articles on the control of injurious insect pests. Dr. David Starr Jordan treats of the efficency of the so-called mosquito fish as an exterminator of carriers of malaria and other less dangercus, but equally irritating mosquitos. In 1904 Dr. Jordan was instrumental in introducing this fish into the Hawaiian Islands, where it has since become very abundant and has practically rid the islands of mosquitos.

Control of Insect Pests.

Dr. L. O. Howard, chief of the United States Bureau of Entomology, discusses the control of insect pests such as the gypsy moth by parasites which live in its body and destroy it. He cites the case of the parasite which practically put an end to the incursion of the sugar cane borer in the Hawaiian Islands, as an illustration of the remarkable results occasionally obtained from such methods of control. But he points out that such results are rare, that the problem in continental areas is much more involved and that the importation of predatory parasites must be left in the hands of experts if evil results are not to follow.

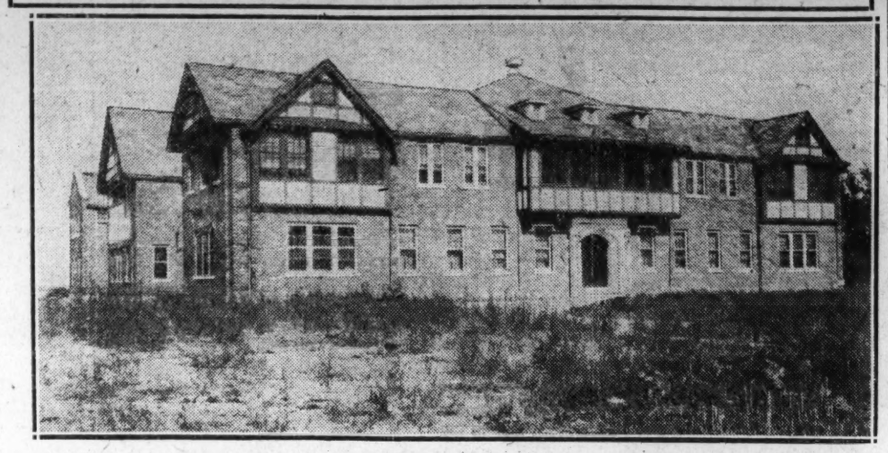

"The meaning of evolution," according to Dr. John M. Coulter, "is probably more misunderstood than any doctrine or science. * * * The general meaning * * * is that the plant and animal kingdoms have developed in a continuous, orderly way, under the guidance of natural laws, just as the solar system has evolved in obedience to natural laws." He points out that Darwinism is quite a different thing from evolution. The former is merely one of the explanations of evolution There is no longer any doubt, he says, that evolution is a fact. It is quite a different question whether the proposed explanations are adequate. None of the explanations so far advanced fits all the facts, and Dr. Coulter looks to the science of genetics (heredity) to uncover the full machinery of evolution.

Carl Whiting Bishop, associate curator of the Freer Gallery under the Smithsonian Institution, contributes an article on the ritual bullfight, a very widespread and ancient custom, confined to no particular culture or ethnic group. It is practiced today in Korea. "Its origin," writes Mr. Bishop, "is apparently to be sought in one or another form of nature worship, and, where its primitive significance has not been obliterated * * * it almost invariably forms part of a ritual observance intended either to promote the fertility of the crops or to forecast the amount of their yield."

INDETERMINATE TERMS URGED FOR PRISONERS

SUBMITS FIRST REPORT

Importance of the adoption of an indeterminate sentence law for the District is emphasized in the first annual report of the Board of Public Welfare, submitted yesterday to the District Commissioners by John Joy Edson, chairman, and George S. Wilson, director of public welfare.

"Under the present system of definite short sentences," the report says, "many prisoners are committed several times during one year. These habitual offenders, sent for short terms of 10, 30 and 60 days, are a source of annoyance and expense to the authorities and in these short sentences can not be substantially benefited by the institution.

"If these prisoners were committed on indeterminate sentence with a maximum of one or two years, many of them during that time would acquire regular habits of living and industry and it could be reasonably expected that a considerable number of them would be able to follow regular habits and provide for themselves and their families upon their discharge."

The report points out that the board was organized only one year ago, and says the first year's work has been devoted largely to familiarizing the board with the various institutions and agencies committed to its care. Reports of the heads of the institutions under the supervision of the board are submitted.

Dairying Bureau Cow Gets Medal for Milk

Cream of Milk Maid Mary Jane, a purebred Jersey cow, owned by the Bureau of Dairying here, has been awarded a silver medal for producing 536.19 pounds of butterfat and 9,790 pounds of milk in 365 days, it was announced yesterday by the American Jersey Cattle Club.

The cow's milk averaged 5.48 per cent butterfat for the year and her production was quite consistent throughout the period, remaining above 40 pounds of butterfat in every complete month of the test, which was started when she was two years and two months of age.

2 Accused of Running Illegal Medicine Show

Charged with operating a medicine show in violation of the District pharmacy law, Ned Howard House, 27 years old, 920 F street, and Valentine H. Seewald, 37, were arrested yesterday by Headquarters Detectives Sanders and Warfield. They deposited $50 collateral each and were released for a hearing tomorrow in Police Court.

The show was conducted on a vacant lot on E street, between Eighth and Ninth streets. A preparation was sold labeled as oriental herbs.

MADDEN TO STUDY CANAL ZONE NEEDS

Sailing for Panama to See if Additional Reservoir Is Required for Shipping.

(Associated Press.)

Advisability of constructing an additional reservoir in the Canal Zone to supply water for movement of ships through the canal locks will be considered by Chairman Madden of the House Appropriations Committee, who will sail from New York Tuesday for Panama.

The chairman said yesterday he had been told that before many years additional water would be required to meet ship movement demands and that he wished to ascertain the facts so that a reservoir, if needed, could be provided in advance. He estmiated such a reservoir would cost about $12,000,000 and take from three to four years to construct. Mr. Madden said he would also inquire into the state of all Government commercial activities and, with respect to possible defense needs, would give particular attention to the condition of the air defense.

"The Canal Zone should at all times be impregnable," he said. "While I believe that such is its present condition, I propose to look into the condition of its fortifications."

M'ADOO TO ADDRESS BUSINESS MEETING

ST. JOSEPH ORPHAN HOME DEDICATION SLATED FOR TODAY

MGR. THOMAS TO GIVE ADDRESS AT BUILDING

Boys of the School Are to Appear in Songs and Drills.

Formal opening and dedication of the new St. Joseph's Home and School will be celebrated by St. Joseph's board of trustees and Sisters of the Holy Cross at 4 o'clock this afternoon at the new building, Twenty-eighth street and Bunker Hill road northeast.

The new school, a brick structure, supersedes the old St. Joseph's Male Orphan Asylum at Tenth and H streets northwest. Sister Marie will be in charge, with a staff of twelve Sisters of the Holy Cross, three of whom are teachers.

As chairman of the board of trustees of St. Joseph's, the Rt. Rev. C. F. Thomas, pastor of St. Patrick's Church, will preside and give the dedicatory address. There will be songs and drills by the boys of the school under the direction of the sisters.

Addresses to Be Given.

Mgr. Thomas will introduce the Rev. John I. Barrett, archdiocesan superintendent of education. There also will be addresses by the Rev. John O'Grady, director of Catholic Charities in Washington, and Judge William H. DeLacey, a member of the board of trustees of St. Joseph's.

The new building was completed in February at a cost of $250,000. Of this $200,000 was raised by the sale of the old structure to Harry Wardman, and $30,000 in a city-wide campaign conducted by the trustees and led by Henry W. Sohon and Francis Weller.

The home was incorporated in 1855, at which time it occupied the southwest corner of Thirteenth and H streets northwest. Sister Irene was sister superior, and there were but eight wards. The home moved in 1860 to the southwest corner of Tenth and F streets, and again in 1866 to its last site, between Ninth and Tenth, on H street northwest, which it purchased from the Washington Orphan Asylum.

There are 75 orphans cared for in the new home, which was occupied February 1, 1927. Children between 7 and 13 years old are admitted, and instruction is given from the first through to the eighth grade.

14 U. S. Prisoners Favored for Parole

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Warden John W. Snook of the Atlanta Federal penitentiary said today that fourteen prisoners were recommended for parole by the parole board which concluded its special session last night. Whether Earl Carroll, New York theatrical producer who was one of the 71 who applied for clemency, was among the fourteen was not stated.

Papers in the cases acted on will be forwarded to Attorney General Sargent in Washington from whom any announcement will come.

One hundred and thirty-two prisoners were eligible for clemency but only 71 were heard.

Children's Day Ends Fair at Petersburg

Special to The Washington Post.

Petersburg, Va., Oct. 15.—The Petersburg Fair, which came to a close tonight, was declared by the fair officials to have been the greatest success, financially and otherwise, in the history of the association. Each day during the exposition, with the exception of Wednesday, when there was rain, the attendance was exceptionally large. All departments were well filled with exhibits and the races were among the best ever seen here.

Today was children's day at the fair, when all children were admitted to the grounds free of charge.

Virginia Boy Scout's Sacrifice Recognized

New York, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Gold honor medals, in recognition of acts of heroism, have been awarded to two Boy Scouts and to the families of two other scouts who paid for their bravery with their lives, the National Boy Scout Honor Board announced today.

The two scouts who met death were James Anderson, 14, of Sydney, Ohio, and Ross Smith, 15, of Medota, Va. The two other honor awards are to go to Charles F. Reubel, of Jamaica, N. Y., and Harley Warn, jr., Whitefish, Mont.

Auto Driver Arrested On Larceny Charge

Missing since March 18, the automobile of Mrs. Anna B. H. Pitcher, wife of Col. W. L. Pitcher, U. S. A., of 1661 Crescent place northwest, was recovered by police yesterday morning when Forrest E. Chappell, 24 years old, of Riverdale, Md., was arrested charged with grand larceny.

Chappell, a taxicab driver, was arrested by Detectives Jett and Wolfe, of the automobile squad. He led them to the machine which was parked near Nineteenth and L streets northwest.

BORAH AND KELLOGG CONFER ON LOANS

State Department May Abandon Policy of Passing on Foreign Obligations.

The controversy which has arisen over the course of the State Department in passing on foreign loans may be ended by the State Department abandoning the policy.

This was disclosed yesterday as the result of a conference between Senator Borah, chairman of the foreign relations committee, and Secretary Kellogg. Senator Borah has supported the view of Senator Glass and has said the policy should be terminated. Like Senator Glass, Senator Borah holds the State Department lacks authority for such a policy.

Secretary Kellogg himself makes no claim the State Department has legal authority for the policy. He and Senator Borah are understood to be of about the same view in the matter. Senator Borah later expressed the opinion that the policy would be ended, at least when debt settlements have been made with France and Greece. It may be ended before that.

ANTO CARTE, BELGIUM, GETS SECOND HONOR

Pittsburgh, Oct. 15 (A.P.)—Henri Matisse, noted French modernist, has received first prize at the opening of the Twenty-sixth International Exhibition of Paintings, at the Carnegie Institute. The prize-winning canvass is "Still Life," a painting of fruit and flowers.

The award carried a prize of $1,500. In the exhibition are 280 paintings from Europe and 120 from the United States. Sixteen nations are represented.

"Motherhood," a painting of mother and infant, by Anto Carte, of Belgium, received second prize of $1,000, while "Poppies," by Andrew Dasburg, of Santa Fe, New Mexico, won third prize of $500.

Wins Garden Club Prize.

"Calla Lilies," a painting of six snow-white lilies in a vase, by Max Pechstein, of Germany, won the $500 prize offered by the Garden Club, of Allegheny County, for the best painting of flowers or gardens.

Matisse, who captured the first prize deserted his studies of the law to become an artist. Today he is the recognized leader of advanced arts in France.

Dasburg, the third prize winner, is a leading figures among the American modernists. Born in Paris of American parentage, he studied art under Cox and later under Matisse and Picasso.

SUCCESS OF FRENCH FLIGHT TURNS PARIS FROM RUTH ELDER

COSTES AND LE BRIX FLY SEA IN 19 HOURS

Mrs. Grayson, Held Back by Weather, Is Bitterly Disappointed.

Paris, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—The magnificent flight of Dieudonne Costes and Joseph le Brix across the southern Atlantic Ocean, from St. Louis, Senegal, to Natal, Brazil, has relegated to second rank in the French nation's enthusiasm the spectacular but unsuccessful attempt of Ruth Elder and George Haldeman to cross the northern Atlantic.

A glance at Paris and provincial newspapers of today reveals this relegation, for, while the achievement of Costes and Le Brix is spread over the front pages the story of the daring attempt of the American aviatrix and her copilot was to be found on the inside or back pages.

It was the first time the French have had an opportunity to cheer their own aviators in a year marked by wonderful American achievements, and they took advantage of the opportunity with full nationalistic pride.

Movie Story Hurts.

Reports have been circulated and published in the French press to the effect that Miss Elder intends to enter the motion picture fields. Dispatches from the United States telling of the attempt by her backers to capitalize Miss Elder's exploit by selling a copyright story of her flight and subsequent literary productions appears to have rather chilled the highly emotional French republic, which is quick to enthuse and just as quick to congeal.

No official reception by officials of French aviation was known in governmental circles to be in course of preparation and thus far it appears that she will have to rely entirely on the population's spontantous acclamation on her arrival.

Costes and Lieut. le Brix, winging across the ocean from St. Louis, Senegal, brought their Berguet military biplane Nungesser-Coli down on the flying field near Port Natal, on the tip of the Brazilian peninsula, at 11:40 o'clock last night to receive the ovations of a great crowd and the official congratulations of Brazilian officials.

Cross in 19 Hours.

The start from St. Louis was made at 6:23 yesterday morning, Senegal time. Flying over Dakar they headed out across the Atlantic at 7:40. The distance from Dakar to Port Natal is about 2,150 miles, which, with the three-hour time difference, gives them an elapsed time from the African to the South American coasts of 19 hours and an average speed of about 113 miles an hour.

From the time of their departure from the African coast until their landing there was no report of their having been sighted by any vessels, and their approach to the Brazilian coast was heralded only when signals from their wireless were picked up by ships north of Fernando do Noronha Island.

Costes and Le Brix now have behind them the most hazardous of the four laps in their flight from Paris to Buenos Aires, which is intended to blaze the trail for a Franco-South American air mail. If they follow their original plans they will hop next to Rio Janeiro, and thence to the Argentine capital.

Miss Grayson Disappointed.

Old Orchard, Me., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Mrs. Frances W. Grayson and her two companions, whose amphibian plane, The Dawn, has been standing on the sands of this beach since Monday evening awaiting a favorable opportunity to take off for Europe, declined tonight, because of the several disappointing postponements, to set another hour for the start. They will wait, they said, until a few hours before low tide tomorrow morning to decide whether the Atlantic disturbances which balked them today have subsided sufficiently.

From the postponement at 6 o'clock this morning the atmosphere of the party changed from one of eager expectancy to that of patient waiting. Aviators, mechanics and newspaper men sought varied recreation in the vicinity of the town.

This morning Brice Goldsborough made further tests of his radio, including the use of kites, as would occur should the plane be forced to alight at sea. In the afternoon, Mrs. Grayson led a party of five who in short order gave the oil-spattered cabin and struts another coat of deep blue paint.

This, she declared, would be thoroughly dry before morning. While she was perched on the lower wings, paint brush in hand, and plentiful daubs on a once white flying suit, a delegation from the Old Orchard Board of Trade, headed by George H. Hichborn, the president, who extended formally the good wishes of the town's citizens, presented a bunch of roses "to the woman aviator who is to be first to fly the Atlantic."

Germans Wait on Plane.

Horta, Island of Fayal, Azores, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—The German aviators of the Junkers plane D-1230 which arrived here yesterday from Lisbon, announced today that they intended to leave for Newfoundland with New York as their ultimate destination as soon as they could make their plane ready.

Describing their flight from Lisbon yesterday, the German aviators said that they flew at an average height of from 900 to 1,800 feet. They saw few vessels, the hop was made in cloudy and windy weather after passing St. Michael's Island, the most eastern part of the Azores.

Lilli Dillenz, Viennese actress, who is a passenger aboard the D-1230, and hopes to be the first woman to cross the Atlantic by air, today expressed gratitude with her companions for their cordial reception.

The Portuguese gunboat Beira, now anchored here, gave valuable assistance to the German plane by supplying it with bearings for navigation by wireless.

Rickshaws Vanishing From Tokyo Streets

Tokyo, Oct. 15 (A.P.)—Japan's most picturesque vehicle, known to foreigners as the rickshaw, or more properly the jinricksha, is rapidly disappearing. These high, rubber-tired, two-wheel carts, drawn by bare-legged natives always at a trot, are being superseded by automobiles, according to traffic officials, and it will not be many years, traffic officials believe, before they will have given up the struggle.

In 1910 there were 26,792 rickshas in Tokyo and only 96 automobiles. Today there are about 8,000 rickshas and in the neighborhood of 18,000 motor cars.

on Thursday morning the American Girl was sighted flying toward them. As the plane passed over the ship a packet was dropped from it, falling into the sea. Another package was dropped, and this hit the deck. It contained a message asking the distance to shore.

An answer was painted on the tanker's deck, reading "360 miles of Terceira, Azores." The fliers seemed to understand and the crew thought they would proceed toward land, but the plane came lower. The engine stopped and the plane then settled on the water. It was less than three minutes before the boat containing the rescuers had been put overside.

Escorted by Authorities.

Agents of the steamship company operating the Barendrecht were the first aboard to congratulate the fliers when they arrived here this morning. Local authorities followed them aboard and helped form the escort that brought them ashore. Miss Elder, showing no grief over the loss of the plane, struck spectators by her fresh appearance. She looked none the worse for her adventure. Haldeman also seemed to have withstood the unfortunate journey without ill effect.

Members of the crew spoke words of praise for Miss Elder's conduct immediately after her rescue, saying that she never lost her courage, her coolness, nor her lipstick. The latter was in evidence on her arrival this morning, for she rouged her lips with it before posing for photographs taken with Capt. Goos, a nautical cap sitting pertly on her curly brown hair.

The fliers, while they were unsuccessful in their attempt to reach Paris, which would have made Miss Elder the first woman to fly across the Atlantic, established a long distance over-water flight record.

They were taken, after the greetings aboard the Barendrecht, to the home of the civil governor of Fayal, where they will be guests until, according to their plans, they board the Portuguese mail boat Lima which sails Monday for Lisbon, whence they will proceed overland to Paris—still their goal.

Miss Elder and Haldeman said their plane developed a defective oil line, reducing the pressure to 5 pounds. This was not sufficient pressure to force enough oil into the motor to keep it from running hot. Their fear that they would not be able to fly 360 miles with their motor in this condition was given as their reason for landing beside the Barendrecht.

The plane might have been saved had it not been for the rolling seas, that dashed it against the side of the tanker as an attempt was being made to hoist it aboard. With its wings broken off, members of the crew said, the plane fell back in the water, where explosions occurred. To prevent the flames that resulted from the explosions setting fire to the steamer, the lines were loosed and the body of the plane was swallowed by the sea, while the wings rose and fell on the tossing seas, soiled remnants of the beautiful orange and maroon aircraft in which they flew from Roosevelt Field last Tuesday evening.

Miss Elder, dressed in her natty male golf costume with plaid sweater and socks, vivaciously told those who greeted them of how their passports and parachutes had been lost. But she still wore the Chinese ring taken along as a talisman. Members of the crew said neither Miss Elder nor Haldeman had any belongings when they came aboard the Barendrecht, and they surmised that the small Bible and the toy cat, Miss Elder's other good luck charm and spiritual comforter, had been lost.

During their reception here, Haldeman stood mutely in the background, seemingly satisfied that Miss Elder should have the spotlight. Both expressed profound gratitude for their rescue to Capt. Goos and members of the Barendrecht's crew before being brought ashore i na launch. Traffic Director George Mackay, of the Western Union Cable Co., will help to entertain the fliers until their departure Monday.

Actress' Offer Declined.

The offer of Lilli Dillenz, Viennese actress, to take Ruth Elder to New York on the Junkers plane D-1230 was declined by Miss Elder, the actress, who is a passenger on the plane, said today.

The American aviatrix, who was rescued from the waters of the Atlantic, wishes to go to Paris, Miss Dillenz said.

"From woman to woman, I say Miss Elder is a most charming girl, pretty and jolly, despite her experience," Miss Dillenz said. "Paul Starke and I met Ruth and George Haldeman, her pilot, this afternoon, and privately offered to take them to New York. Ruth declined because she wishes to go to Paris. I myself am resting from social activities and am ready to leave here at any time."

New York, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Funds were cabled Miss Ruth Elder and her pilot, George Haldeman, today, T. H. McArdle, manager for Miss Elder, said.

The money was sent to the Bank of Fayal at Horta, where Miss Elder and her companion were landed today. Mr. McArdle said that "sufficient funds to take care of both of them" had been sent.

Emden, Germany, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—It is reported from Horta, the Azores, that Ruth Elder, the rescued American flyer, has announced that she will go to Paris to stay a fortnight and then sail for New York to prepare for another transatlantic flight next spring.

Funds Are Asked.

A request to friends of Ruth Elder and her companion to cable credit for passage from the Azores to France for expenditures was transmitted to the State Department yesterday by American Consul William F. Doty, at St. Michaels, Azores. There is no consulate at Horta, but Doty said that the British Vice Consul there would cooperate in looking after the aviators.

By instruction of the State Department Doty communicated to the civil governor at Fayal a request that official courtesies be extended to the party when they landed from the ship that picked them up. His message to the State Department said that the pair were destitute and had lost all identification papers. Friends were asked to cable credit either to the Bank of Fayal at Horta or to the civil governor, Fernando Dacosta, at the same place.

Ruth Elder was named yesterday in a new list of air pilots licenses by the Commerce Department. Miss Elder's application for a license as a private pilot was received some time ago. She did not seek the higher grade of transport pilot under the Government classification, but merely sought permission to operate airplanes for pleasure only.

AUTHORS' WIVES LEAD MAINE ROAD CLEAN-UP

Kennebunk, Me., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Summer and winter residents of Kennebunk, including the wives of several of America's foremost authors, today assumed street cleaning equipment and went to work on the roads. The occasion was their launching of a Statewide campaign against "the wrecking of the natural beauties of Maine by picnickers, roadside advertisers and other scenery messers."

Leaders in the clean-up drive were Mrs. Booth Tarkington, wife of the Indiana author; Mrs. Kenneth L. Roberts, wife of a widely known magazine writer, and Mrs. Edward P. Dwight, widow of the former law partner of Charles Evans Hughes.

The women left Kennebunk by automobile early in the forenoon, equipped with trucks, boxes, baskets, rakes, brooms, white cotton gloves and other paraphernalia. They cleaned three sections of the State higway between Wells and Kennebunk where automobile picnickers had lunched by the roadside. Their harvest, which made up eight truck loads, was inventoried as follows:

One hundred and thirty-six pasteboard boxes containing egg shells, sandwich crusts and banana skins; 262 empty pasteboard boxes, 548 luncheon wrappings, 129 paper drinking cups, 77 sardine tins and more than 700 unclassified pieces of trash.

Mrs. Dwight, who plans to organize the women of the State and carry her fight against scenery defacement to the Maine legislature at its next session, estimated tonight that the Maine State highway between Kittery and Belfast was littered with more than 5,000 truck loads of discarded lunch boxes and lunch wrappings.

CHANNEL SWIM FAKE ADMITTED BY WOMAN

was seasick. She slipped into the water again after daylight Tuesday when 3 miles from Folkestone, England. She swam ashore and received the greeting of the crowd.

When Miss Logan returned to London she was nearly mobbed by admiring throngs. She was congratulated by friends, and the newspapers and officials paid tribute to her.

Letter Found in Hotel Safe.

After telling her story to the news of the world and returning the check, Dr. Logan explained that the protective letter would be found locked in a hotel safe at Hythe, the letter was found as promised. It read:

"I, Dorothy Cochrane Logan, hereby declare before leaving Hythe to start on my channel swim on October 10, 1927, that I am not undertaking this swim for any personal gain in honor or money.

"If conditions are favorable I hope to swim the channel in a straight-forward and unassisted manner. If conditions are unfavorable I intend to get across somehow with the purpose of proving the necessity of independent umpires to prevent possible abuses. If my swim is successful without assistance, my trainer and my two pilots will make an affidavit with me to this effect, if there is no press representative with us. If we have in any way faked the result we will publish the full facts within one month of this date.

"If any money prizes should be awarded, I shall make no personal use of them until I have published the full facts.

"(Signed) Dorothy Cochrane Logan,
"M.D.D.S."

Army Officer Witness.

Dr. Logan's letter was witnessed by G. H. Woodward, L. S. M. N. Adams, lieutenant commander of the British navy, retired, and Carey.

The log kept by the pilot showed that the woman was aboard the vessel 8 hours and 50 minutes of the 13 hours and 10 minutes that the "swim" lasted.

Supporting Miss Logan's story, Carey told of the difficulty of consuming sufficient time to make the feat appear reasonable. Miss Logan while on the boat suffered from nausea, which resulted in reducing her strength.

"Some of the French people don't believe we were ever at Cape Griz Nez," Carey said. "We got to Gris Nez all right—and left it too. Three miles out we struck a strong drift of tide which carried us fast toward Calais, which was off our course. Moreover, the waters were desperately cold and general conditions too much for human endurance over a long period. Out of sight of Cape Gris Nez light I took Dr. Logan from the water."

Convoy Vessel Loafs.

The convoy, a fishing smack with a motor, loafed about the Channel until dawn trying to keep to the course which the swimmer would naturally follow, and trying to avoid other craft.

"A few minutes before 6 a. m. we were off South Foreland lighthouse, not more than 3 miles away," Carey continued. "On the open deck in broad daylight, in full view of any binoculars that might have been turned upon us from Dover or Folkestone, I greased Dr. Logan for the second time. The ebb tide was flowing strongly when she reentered the water and swept us past Dover toward Folkestone. Suddenly the tide slackened and we were struck by the amusing possibility of the hoax ending in Folkestone harbor, of all places in the world.

"But we were spared that; with the slackening of the tide the young flood came in and Dr. Logan found it easy to swim on to the beach under the eyes of the waiting and cheering crowd."

ditions in Crenshaw County would have been better."

In its report the grand jury expressly stated that it did not intend to charge that there are within the Klan no men who do not measure up to the true standards of citizenship, explaining:

"W do not presume to suggest that every man who is a member of the klan is there because of some sinister motive. But still we have found what we believe to be an organization which has either gotten completely out of control of those who control it, or else it has gotten into control at least in part, of certain men who, in our judgment, are unworthy of trust."

In conclusion the grand jury passed its work on to the petit juries urging them not to forget the solemnity of the law in dealing with these cases and "not to be swerved by friend or foe."

45 Persons Mentioned.

Attorney General Charlie C. McCall of Alabama, who personally directed the grand jury investigation, said 45 persons were mentioned in the 102 indictments. Thirty-seven of these are residents of Crenshaw County, he said, while eight live in Butler County.

Names of all indicted men and the charges against them will not be known until warrants are issued for their arrest. Mr. McCall has indicated, however, that he was trying for charges of assault and battery, which when committed by masked persons is felony under the laws of Alabama.

Attorney General McCall earlier today issued instructions for a subpena calling on the local manager of the Western Union Telegraph Co. to produce copies of all telegrams exchanged between Hiram W. Evans, imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, and members of the local ...apters.

Home-made Supply of Fine Cough Syrup

Better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $2. Easily prepared.

If you combined the valuable properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real healing power as there is in this home-made syrup, easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup, or clarified honey, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the throat tickle and heals the irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and it is splendid for bronchitis, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, which has been used for generations to break severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

THE WIFE and CO.

By LYLE HAMILTON.

(Copyright, 1927, by Eugene MacLean.)

She gave a sigh of content and pressed her cheek to his bosom. It was a gorgeous outlook—a long life with Bob Brownell, with suites of rooms, which they would get as soon as they were married. As Molly snuggled into his arms, he looked over the room she lived in.

CHAPTER I.

MRS. POTTER'S flat was at the top of a very long flight of steps. It started at the street door, and went upward without a turn or landing or any other place to pause. The flat itself occupied the whole second floor of a two-story house, and was uncommonly high above the ground. This basement began in an areaway, and its ceiling was higher above the sidewalk than a man's head. So, when anyone went up Mrs. Potter's stair, it was necessary to mount the distance from the sidewalk to the level of the first floor, and then to keep on climbing another full story more.

The girls who lived at Mrs. Potter's used to call this stairway names, when they came home from work at night or from parties in the early morning. The ascent was steep, and very tiring, and furthermore the steps creaked. It was after parties that they objected to the creaking, on account of Mrs. Potter's disposition.

Molly Louise Arthura Anderson lived just at the head of the stair, to the left. Her room looked out on the back yard, which was 12 feet deep and as much as 25 feet wide. Two girls lived in the room next to her, and around the corner of the hall three other girls had a room, next to Mrs. Potter's own suite—which was composed of a bedroom and a kitchen.

The bathroom—there was only one—was at the corner of the hall. This bathroom was the nearest approach to a social meeting place that the establishment possessed. The girls would crowd there in the mornings, and exchange snatches of news concerning new hats, and coats, and boy friends, while they hurried their toilets. It was necessary for them to hasten in order that they might have time for breakfast before going to work, because they always stayed in bed until the last possible moment.

Mrs. Potter was regarded by all of them as a difficult feature of life in the flat. She had a habit of appearing at the head of the stair, when a girl came home after midnight, and staring without a word until the lodger had mounted the steps and entered her room and closed the door. If a young man came, and remained late, Mrs. Potter would stand outside and bang upon the woodwork. More than once she had been known to set a girl's trunk and suitcase out in the hall and tell her to begone.

A fear of these demonstrations kept the girls subdued, more or less, while they were in their rooms, and ordinarily they would not invite their male acquaintances to the flat at all. They would meet the boys outside—at the corner, for instance—and leave them at the door on returning home.

Molly L. A. Anderson had no more love for Mrs. Potter than the other girls had, but on the whole she approved of the landlady's demand for strict propriety. Molly was engaged to be married, and she often told her fiance that Mrs. Potter kept "an awfully decent place."

"Mrs. Potter, I want you to know it's perfectly all right for Mr. Brownell to come to see me," she said, when she ushered the youth into the presence of the landlady. "We're going to be married. We're engaged."

Mrs. Potter surveyed the tall, merry-eyed Brownell from his new shoes to his close-cropped dark hair. "Hmm!" said she, at length. "I've been taking roomers fifteen years, and this is the first time any girl has shown me one of her young men. Shown him on purpose, I mean." She took another look at Brownell. "He could be worse, I suppose."

With this she went back into her room and shut the door.

"She's not so bad," said Molly, leading him toward her own room. "And she does keep such a respectable place!" She threw open her door and stood aside for him to enter.

It was the first time he had visited the girl at her home. He cast a quick glance around the room as he entered, and even after Molly had snuggled into his arms as they stood between the dresser and the trunk that flanked the entrance, he looked over her head at her surroundings.

Molly's bed was in the corner. It wasn't a regular bed, with headboard and footboard. It was a broad divan, over which Molly kept a dark cover in the daytime.

A shelf ran from the corner of the bed to the window, about five feet above the floor, and a curtain of blue denim hung from this in stiff folds. Under the curtain Molly kept her clothes; there was no closet in the room. In the corner beyond the window was a table with a pot of flowers on it; next to this the dresser; next was the doorway, where Brownell and the girl stood, and then the trunk. Two chairs occupied most of the remaining wall space.

"It's great," he assented. "But, gee whiz, Molly! Is this where you've lived for two years?"

She withdrew her head from his coat. "It isn't very gaudy, is it?" she said, following his gaze from the dresser to the bed, to the denim curtain, to the chairs, and to the worn old carpet. Molly had spent the entire morning—it was Sunday—making the room as beautiful as she could, but she did not resent his tone. The apartment wasn't very gaudy. "Still," she went on, "I've got it nicer than the other girls. I have the room to myself, you see. It costs a lot more, paying for a whole room this way, but it's worth it, don't you think?"

He drew her to him, tenderly. "Poor little brave kid!" he said, kissing her on the temple. "When we're married you'll have a whole suite of rooms to yourself—a living room and everything, and a kitchen."

She gave a sigh of content and pressed her cheek to his bosom. It was a gorgeous outlook—a long life with Bob Brownell, with suites of rooms, which they would get as soon as they were married, and the automobile that he had already, and nice clothes, and——

She reached up and took his face between her hands, and drawing his head down she kissed him on the lips.

All this was on the first day of their engagement. She had promised to marry him late Saturday night, on their way home from supper—a supper that had followed a show and a ride through the lonely midnight streets. The promise was given in the machine, as it stood outside the door, and an hour later, as she reluctantly left the car to go to her room, they had agreed to spend the Sunday afternoon and evening together.

After this, he came to the room often. Sometimes she made him wait in the hall while she changed her dress, in preparation for dancing or the theater. Occasionally he came and sat in the bigger of the two chairs all evening and talked until it was so late that Molly's eyelids drooped.

They would have been married at once, except that they agreed there should be enough money in the bank to buy furniture for a flat—"I just couldn't stand living in a furnished apartment after we are married," Molly said. "They charge so much more, and it just means that you pay for the landlord's furniture, and then it isn't yours after all!"

"Sensible little baby," he said, fondly. She was sitting on his lap at the time. "But as soon as we get enough money together, between us, you stop work! Do you hear? You'll never pound a typewriter again!"

She twisted a button on his vest. "Just think, Bobsie," she said. "We're making $65 a week—the two of us are. That's more than lots of men make who have big families."

"When I catch my stride, I'll be making twice that, myself," he boasted. "The boss said last week that he didn't have a man that covered the ground I do."

"It's a pity he wouldn't give you a raise if he feels that way," she returned, warmly. "I'm sure there isn't a young fellow in town as clever as you are, dearest—you ought to be getting $140 instead of only $40."

Brownell embraced her, in answer to this tribute. "Still, I'm doing better than most fellows," he assured her, as at last she sat more erect and smoothed back her hair. "I'm planting $10 in the bank every week now—wish I'd started saving money before I met you! I might have had five or six hundred dollars by this time.

"I've got two hundred and five, and twenty-five cents," she said.

He grimaced. "You're four times as rich as I am," he calculated. "Sometimes I think I ought to sell my roadster—it costs me a lot to keep up, and the cash I'd get would be so much velvet."

"Don't sell your lovely car!" she protested. "You need the recreation—really you do, honey, working so hard all day! And I like to ride in it, too!"

Eventually, after many discussions, it was agreed that when their savings had reached $500, they would invest in furniture at once, and be married. Molly was accustomed to put $5 a week in the bank, out of her $25 wages, and sometimes a little more. They estimated that the $500 mark would be reached in seventeen weeks, after allowing for extraordinary expense.

"Four long months!" sighed Molly. "But it's worth waiting for, isn't it, Bobsie dear?"

She began sewing on those evenings when Brownell was otherwise engaged, and on her way home from work she lingered before the shop windows and stared at laces, and voiles, and crepe de chines, and rugs and table linen.

Brownell wasn't the first young man who had come into Molly's life. Molly was pretty. The men at the office hung around her desk, in idle moments, and there had been a succession of fellows who had taken her to dinner, and to dance, and to the movies, and motoring in the country.

She had read of girls who had a flock of suitors, crowding the evening hours with light amusements. Naturally, she would have liked to have a flock of suitors, too, but to her distress she found the boys came only one at a time—if one young man was attentive, the others remained definitely away. Later, she learned that this was the experience of the other girls, too.

"Say, baby," an older girl had enlightened her at last. "What you see in the books is all wrong. A fellow wants a girl all to himself. See? And if he finds out that other sheiks are coming around, he don't come. The boys are good medicine all right, but you gotta take 'em one pill at a time. They don't mix ay-tall."

So Molly made the best of the situation, and contrived to enjoy herself greatly. She would meet a new fellow, he would eye her with approval, they would go out together in the evenings and on Sundays for a few weeks or months, and then he would drift away to make room for another.

Finally she became acquainted with Bob Brownell, and after that she didn't care whether she met any more men or not.

Bob was good-looking and alert and gay. He always dressed well; he was an excellent dancer; his small motor car was not the smallest in the market and was quite new.

Like Molly—like most of their acquaintances—he was not a native of Washington. He had come five years before to hunt a job, and had found one rather promptly. Furthermore, he kept it. Most of his friends drifted from one employment to another, vainly seeking a task that would combine large pay with more hours of rest. Brownell, with an inheritance of New England caution, held to the job he had.

"A tree doesn't grow well," he explained to Molly, "when you keep pulling it up by the roots and planting it somewhere else. It's the same way with a man. I'm planted in that office, and I'm going to grow to be president of it. Just you watch!"

His present chore was to sell stationery and office sundries, and he rushed in and out of tall buildings and stores and factories all day, five and a half days a week. Saturday afternoons he spent in fixing up his reports and customer lists.

He lived in a two-room-and-kitchenette apartment with two other young men. They met expenses share-and-share alike, including a small investment with the bootlegger from time to time. Bob was no drinker, however. He assured Molly of that on their first meeting.

"I hardly ever touch the stuff," he said, as he finished telling of some adventures the night before with a bottle of gin. "I just take a drink when the other fellows do, to show I'm no blue-nose, but I don't like booze."

"I hope," she said, looking up at him shyly, "that you'll never drink any more."

This was her first indication of personal interest in him, and he promptly took her hand. She tried to draw the hand away, but he held it hard while he assured her that he would do anything in the world to please her. It was several weeks later that they became engaged, and in the meantime it was definitely understood that he would take no liquor at all.

"I'm afraid of boys who drink," she told him.

Molly confided her own small story to him, one day when the roadster was parked beside the road in Rock Creek Park. She had come to the city to go to business college, equipped with a hundred dollars that her mother had given her, a tearful blessing from her father—who had no money—and of more value, a high youthful courage in her heart. The hundred dollars vanished presently, but the principal of the business school found odds and ends of jobs for her to do until she became a full-fledged and competent stenographer.

"I got $15 a week when I first graduated," she told Brownell, "and I thought it was all the money in the world! Now it's 25, and I feel so poor sometimes!"

He patted her shoulder, his arm warm about her neck. "No more being poor, Mollykins," he said. "Soon as we get our 500 we'll live in luxury in a five-room flat!"

"I hope we can do it all right." Her tone was wistful. "It costs us $50 a week—the two of us—to live, and you're only making 40, honey boy."

"But there'll only be the one rent to pay," he argued, "and you'll have your own kitchen, so our food won't cost us so much, and we won't spend a lot going out evenings because we can be together at home!"

At this last entrancing thought she turned impulsively and hugged him. "It'll be heaven!" she breathed. "Mrs. Robert Brownell!" She looked off into the distance, starry-eyed. "I love you a lot, sweetheart," she added.

This broke up the conversation more or less, and when they started back to dinner Molly's head still was pressed tightly into the angle between Brownell's jaw and his shoulder. He was driving with one hand, and they were very happy.

The subject of their future did not come up again for more than a week. When it did come up, Molly cried long and hard and bitterly for the first time since she was a child.

It was about 6 o'clock in the evening, and Molly was brushing her hair before the greenish-looking glass in her room. Brownell had told her he was not coming that evening, so she had put on an old kimono and thrown herself on the couch to rest a while before going out to dinner.

She was trying the effect of a new style in hairdressing, lately introduced by a new baby star in the movies when the bell in the hall gave three long rings and a short one.

That was Molly's signal. Because there was only one bell in the flat and the stair was long and Mrs. Potter irritable, the girls had arranged a code which was confided to their friends. A girl in the next room to the landlady's answered the bell when it gave one long peal. Another hurried into the hall when the ring was sharp and short and repeated four times. Each of the others had a signal of her own—and the three long rings and a short one belonged to Molly.

"I wonder who——" she said aloud, as she went into the hall and pressed a button. This opened the latch on the door below, and Brownell immediately appeared.

"You can't come in!" she called, as he hammered on the door a moment later. "I'm putting on my dress—I didn't expect you."

He muttered something which she failed to hear.

When she swung open the door, with a radiant smile of welcome, he gave her a brief kiss on the cheek and went to one of the chairs, upon which he dropped heavily.

"Why, Bobsie!" she exclaimed. "What in the world's the matter?"

She ran to his side and sank to her knees on the floor, taking his head in the circle of her arm. His lips were tight and his eyes were glowering.

"Tell me!" she went on, anxiously. "Are you sick, honey boy?"

"I've just been floored," he said, looking straight before him instead of at her.

"Not discharged!"

"Pretty nearly as bad," he said. "The boss pushed a brick wall over on me."

Hastily she ran her hand over his shoulder and arm. "Not really!"

Something like the flicker of a grim smile showed at the corner of his mouth. "It wasn't a real brick wall, Mollykins, but it hurt as much, nearly, as if it had been. Molly, I'm afraid we're sunk." Shifting himself so he could see her as he talked, he went on. "The boss called me in just as I was starting home. 'Hear you're going to be married,' he says. 'Well, I'm proud of it, you know, and I swelled out my chest and says 'You bet!' I though he was going to give he a present or something!

"He sits there a long time, looking at me, and then he says, 'Too bad.'"

"Tood bad!" echoed Molly, aghast.

Brownell nodded. "And that wasn't all. He told me that he had thought of promoting me—sending me out on the road at a bigger salary, and maybe giving me charge of one of the branches later on. But—here's exactly what he says, 'I've had more good men ruined by marrying fool wives than any other way. I'm looking for single men in this business.'"

"But Bobsie," wailed the girl, "I thought that employers always liked married men, because they're steadier!"

"I said that very thing to him. And he says: 'The men are all right, but their wives are all wrong, 90 per cent of the time. They're selfish, and they whine, and they kick, and the men are so worried they can't keep their minds on their work. Marriage used to be all right, when women did their share, but they don't do it any more. They're grafters.' That's just what he said, Molly. 'They're grafters.'"

"Bobsie, darling," said she, making a brave effort toward composure, "shall we call it off? Shall we not get married?"

CAPITAL KIWANIANS WORKING TO ELECT KIMBALL GOVERNOR

LINDBERGH IS GUEST THERE AT SAME TIME

Roe Fulkerson Will Make an Address Friday on "Who Is Living Your Life."

Oldest of the 46 clubs which now compose the Capital District of Kiwanis International, the Washington Kiwanis Club will play a prominent role in proceedings of the Capital district convention, which convenes in Wilmington Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The Kiwanis convention coincides with Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's visit to the city, and the flying colonel will attend the grand banquet of the club Friday in the Hotel du Pont-Biltmore convention officials announced yesterday.

Led by Roe Fulkerson, past international vice president of the organization; Claude W. Owen, past district governor, and Mark Lansburgh, past president of the local club, the Washington delegation leaves for Wilmington with the announced intention of bringing back the District governorship. Harry G. Kimball, present lieutenant governor, is their candidate.

With the Washington club as a nucleus, the Capital district has expanded in eight years from two units with 89 members to the 46 branches now chartered, extending over 4 States and boasting a membership of 3,000. The first steps toward its formation were taken August 29, 1918, when Washington and Baltimore had the only clubs in the territory.

The Washington club, the first in this section, was started in February, 1917, and chartered May 19 of the same year. The Baltimore club was chartered a year later. A joint meeting of the two in Baltimore, and a subsequent one in September, 1919, led to definite plans for the first annual convention October 4, 1919. In the interim three additional clubs had been formed, in Wilmington, Richmond and Norfolk.

Before the district was a year old the member clubs in convention had committed themselves to the policy of "effecting among the people living in the territory within which the Capital district organization operates, a clever relation to that constitution and a more intimate knowledge of the Declaration of Independence, the American Bill of Rights and the Constitution of the United States." The third and fourth annual conventions were held in Washington.

Represent Local Club.

Charles W. Pimper and J. B. Edmunds will represent the local club as delegates at the Wilmington convention, and Edwin F. Hill, district publicity director; John C. Wineman and George H. Winslow will go as alternates. Prominent among others in the Washington delegation are Radford Moses, vice president of the club, and F. A. Meatyard.

Roe Fulkerson, of the local club, is scheduled to address the Friday session of the convention. He will speak on "Who Is Living Your Life?" The delegates will be welcomed by Wilmington's mayor, George W. K. Forrest, and President George F. Cornell, of the Wilmington club. Russell S. Perkinson, of Petersburg, Va., present governor of the club, also is scheduled to address the delegates.

MAY BE GOVERNOR

HARRY G. KIMBALL, lieutenant governor of the Capital District of Kiwanis, whom the Washington Kiwanis Club will support for governor of the District at the Wilmington convention Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

NONMAGNETIC VESSEL TO MAKE 3-YEAR VOYAGE

Carnegie, Due Here Tomorrow, Expected to Start on Cruise in Spring.

OVERHAULED FOR TOUR

The Carnegie, unique nonmagnetic research vessel of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, which was overhauled last summer in dry dock in Hoboken, N. J., will arrive here tomorrow morning.

The Carnegie, which has not a piece of iron or steel in its entire composition, has been overhauled in preparation for a cruise of the six oceans, starting next spring and lasting three years.

The cruise will extend over a distance of 100,000 miles. Although the Carnegie is constructed of stout timbers, and is primarily a sailing vessel, having an engine for auxiliary power, it has traveled the oceans more thoroughly than any vessels that was ever launched.

The only metals on the ship are brass, copper and bronze, metals which will not affect by magnetic influence the delicate instruments used in making observations on the ocean surface. The vessel is used primarily in making observations in terrestrial magnetism, but several other branches of science relating to the ocean are included in the researches.

The vessel has been furnished with new instruments. With one of these samples of water at various depths in the ocean will be obtained for study..

The Carnegie left New York Friday under tow of a vessel of the United States Coast Guard, which will bring it to the mouth of the Potomac, whence it will be towed to the Seventh street wharves by a tug.

Katherine Bevard Leaves $35,000 Estate.

Katherine H. Bevard, who died September 25, left an estate valued at $35,000, according to the petition for letters testamentary filed yesterday in Probate Court by her brother, William A. Bevard. The testatrix was also survived by the brothers Ephraim H. Bevard, Robert E. Bevard and James T. Bevard.

Rough Games Are Passing, Playgrounds Head States

The games that Washington boys play now are not nearly so "rough" as the games of fifteen or twenty years ago, according to officials of the local playground system. On the other hand, they say, the games that girls are playing are far more strenuous than those their mothers indulged in.

In the "old days" before the advent of organized mass play, say the experts, the games seemed designed to test the boy's capacity for endurance—and, in many cases, his capacity for punishment. Today they are designed to test his skill.

Twenty years ago there were only a handful of Washington boys playing golf. "Shinny" was the equivalent of golf in those days, and a rough game it was, too. The players were armed with curved sticks, and the idea was to knock a ball over a line drawn between two teams. If a player crossed over the line to the enemy side, the result usually was a loud "whack!" and an even louder scream of pain.

"Shinny on your own side!" the enemy player would yell, and if possible bring his stick down on the other's shins.

Today thousands of Washington boys are playing golf, a sport that until recent years bore the stigma of being an "old man's game." Those who are charged with building up the city's youth are glad to see this juvenile drift toward the ancient game.

Many of the boys' games that were in vogue a score of years ago are not even known by the modern boy, as, for example, "Bull in the Ring." This game, together with such games as "Baby in the Hat," were, from a modern standpoint, cruel in the extreme, and a boy rarely emerged from one of them without a body covered with welts and bruises.

American football, once referred to as "modified murder," is far less rough now than it was 15 or 20 years ago. Even so, the playground directors discourage boys in the elementary schools from playing it. These smaller boys are urged to play soccer instead.

About the only real game the girl of 20 years ago went in for was lawn tennis, and the game, as they played it, was about as exciting as ping pong. The girl of today is out on the hard, dirt court, smashing the ball around with all the vigor of a man.

Morever, the girls now are going in for track, and are playing almost all the games that boys play—basketball, schlag ball, golf, indoor baseball and dodge ball.

"Modern play for boys and girls," says Mrs. Susie Root Rhodes, director of the local playground department, "is designed to bring about the maximum good with a minimum of danger."

MANY MINOR INCIDENTS REQUIRED MUCH HELP

Floods were almost continuous in the United States throughout the last year, the annual report of the American Red Cross for the fiscal year ended June 30, just made public, indicated in its summary of disaster relief operations of the organizations.

All told the Red Cross administered relief in 77 major disasters in the United States, and rendered financial or other assistance in 20 disasters in American insular territory or in foreign countries, a total of 97 disaster operations for the period covered by the report. This is an average of seven such relief tasks for each month in the fiscal year, necessitating virtually unremitting disaster work by the organization

"Flood conditions alone kept the relief forces of the organization almost continuously busy," the report said "Before the Florida hurricane floods in Kansas and Illinois required Red Cross aid. In the Illinois River Valley flood waters covered some of the land for the entire winter. Those driven from their homes were cared for by the Red Cross. This task was barely finished when refugees began coming out of lowlands flooded by the Mississippi River."

Indicating the continuity of the relief service required in the past year, the report points to the fact that from mid-September to Christmas the Red Cross was engaged in relief operations in southern Florida following the hurricane, and that in less than four months after it had withdrawn its forces from that State the relief forces were in the field in the greatest relief task of Red Cross history, the Mississippi flood.

"Here it faced a situation radically different from that in Florida" the report continued. "It had to operate in the greater part of seven States for 1,000 miles north and south and several hundred miles east and west. With support of the Government, States outside the flood area and private agencies, it created the greatest relief organization our country has known. Here it faced the necessity of rescuing, sheltering, feeding, clothing and protecting the health of more than 600,000 men, women and children of two races, and feeding thousands of domestic animals, for many weeks, of returning them to their home territory with shelter, food and seed for planting, and the tremendous problem of aiding them to resume normal living.

"The critical period of the disaster itself continued for two months. The relief work begun in March, will continue far into the year 1927-1928. The largest disaster relief fund ever raised in this country was contributed—approximately $17,000,000."

Relief operations in Florida were covered by the report as this disaster occurred within the past fiscal year. That relief operation and the one incident to the Mississippi Valley flood are the outstanding undertakings in this field by the Red Cross, the report adding that national appeals for relief funds were necessitated by both occurrences. In these two disasters, out of 77 in the United States, the Red Cross cared for approximately 650,000 people.

"Responding to the Proclamations of President Coolidge, and the appeal of the Red Cross, to meet the suffering caused by two of the disasters—the hurricane in southern Florida and the floods in the Mississippi River valley—the people of this and other countries provided the Red Cross with more than $20,000,000," the report stated, adding that the period covered was only to June 30.

Unusual Demand Stressed.

Stressing the unusual demands on the relief forces, the report said:

"From April to June, while the floods were pouring down the Mississippi Valley, the Red Cross provided relief in 21 other disasters, 11 caused by tornadoes, in one of which alone, approximately 17,000 persons were assisted. At one period of the year it was carrying on relief operations in 14 disaster situations simultaneously."

The raising of $20,000,000 in two national appeals by the Red Cross, the report pointed out, was accomplished without the addition of a single worker other than the volunteers assembled by the local Red Cross chapters in various parts of the country. It also pointed out the adaptability of the Red Cross forces in swinging from one type of disaster service into another without loss of effectiveness. Tribute was paid to the thousands of volunteers whose service made the Mississippi task possible, the report explaining that even the large force of experienced Red Cross workers assembled in Florida would have been "woefully inadequate" for the Mississippi flood relief.

Nurses who served under the Red Cross in both the Florida and the Mississippi flood undertaking were given special mention in the report, which stated that while they were needed in large numbers in these disasters, they served in smaller groups in comparatively minor catastrophes in various parts of the United States, especially the mid-Western area.

Expenditures by the Red Cross in the two outstanding disaster relief operations of the fiscal year ended June 30, 1927 included $4,477,000 in connection with the Florida hurricane, of which amount $3,818,000 represented contributions received for this disaster relief operation.

Amount of Expenditures.

Up to June 30, 1927, there had been expended on emergency and reconstruction work or committed at the close of the fiscal year $12,400,000 for the Mississippi Valley relief program. The total actually expended on all disaster relief by the Red Cross up to the close of the fiscal year was $8,216,893.31 for disasters within the country and $256,962.60 for foreign relief.

Disaster relief operations at home and abroad covered such calamities as explosions, floods, tornadoes, hurricanes, fires, mine explosions, earthquakes, cloudbursts, hailstorms, epidemics and refugee relief in China.

The continuing demands on Red Cross service which, the report states, are increasing as indicated by recent years, are urged by Chairman John Barton Payne as reasons why an increased enrollment of membership in the Red Cross should result from the coming roll call, from November 11 to 24, inclusive. The Red Cross now numbers 3,087,000 members, the report showed.

"We need at least 5,000,000 members," Chairman Payne stated in the report. "We are obliged to draw annually upon our reserves, and the demands upon us increase each year. Our roll call funds should meet our normal needs and add something to our reserves for the great disasters. We must have a large reserve. No one can tell when a situation may arise when this reserve will be essential to the lives of thousands The Red Cross can not wait to raise funds. Action prompt, instant, is its life. Instant action means the lives of many. It must be strong, it must be ready; this means a large reserve."

DRINK WATER WHEN KIDNEYS HURT YOU

Take Glass of Salts if Your Back Aches or Bladder Troubles You.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean you have been eating foods which create acids, says a well known authority. An excess of such acids overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the system, so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

CITY HEADS OPPOSE WATER POWER PLAN

Contend Development of Great Falls Might Interrupt Water Supply.

The District Commissioners have added their voice to those who are protesting against the development of the water power of Great Falls by a private corporation. The board, at its meeting yesterday, directed Engineer Commissioner Ladue to prepare a letter of protest to be sent to the Federal Power Commission, which is considering application by the Potomac River Corporation for a permit for hydroelectric development.

Radical differences between the development plan approved by the Commissioners in 1924 and the present plan will be pointed out in the letter. Under the 1924 plan the development would have been made by the Federal Government and would have remained under Federal jurisdiction.

Opposition of the Commissioners is based largely on possibility of interruption to the city's water supply, disruption of plans for the beautification of the city's environs, and the fact that increased electric power is not needed by the city.

HAYNE ENDS SERVICE IN PRINTING OFFICE

H. C. Hayne, for 31 years an employe of the Government Printing Office, and for the last 9 years assistant foreman in the night proofroom, retired from the Government service yesterday.

Mr. Hayne is a native of Lima, Ohio, and was appointed to the Government Printing Office by Senator John Sherman, in December, 1890. He served until 1894, when he was removed. In 1900 he was reinstated by an executive order from President McKinley.

Mr. Hayne was among a group of six or more who were seeking the position of Public Printer when the position became vacant under the Harding administration, and remained in the running until the choice narrowed down to George H. Carter, present public printer, and himself.

Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I get hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 450-A Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.—Adv.

Infant Care

Mothers, you can't start too early to establish a child's serene and tranquil disposition. Even an infant can have a happy, fretless state of uninterrupted health. What will help do this? A simple, purely vegetable product as old as you are, plain Castoria.

A few drops of Castoria will settle all uneasiness in a jiffy. Will dispel colic or ward off constipation; and just as surely check diarrhea.

In real sickness, call a physician. But many physicians urge only Castoria for those little childish disorders that need nothing more. You need never be afraid to give pure Castoria. It is safe and perfectly harmless, for it contains no paregoric, no opiates, no dope of any kind. At least, this is true of the genuine Fletcher's Castoria*—and that is the kind doctors tell you always to buy.

Fletcher's Castoria is fine for any child. All children love to take it. Delicious tasting, and as good as it tastes. Just look for the Fletcher signature on the package and you will know you have the genuine and pure Castoria.

*SPECIAL NOTE: With every bottle of genuine Fletcher's Castoria is wrapped a book on "Care and Feeding of Babies" worth its weight in gold to every mother or prospective mother.

PLEA FOR FREEDOM OF RADIO RESEARCH VOICED BY MARCONI

Inventor Is Among Speakers at Dinner for Delegates to Conference.

HARBORD AND SARNOFF ARE NEW YORK HOSTS

Hoover Expresses Confidence That World Regulation Will Be Unnecessary.

New York, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—An urgent plea from the inventor of wireless to those now charged with its control throughout the world that they enact no regulations that would tend to prevent research and experimentation was voiced here tonight by Senator William Marconi to delegates to the international radio conference.

Marconi spoke at a banquet given to the delegates, representing 76 nations, at the Hotel Plaza by the Radio Corporation of America and the National Broadcasting Co.

"Radio is still young," Marconi said, "and it requires a certain degree of latitude and liberty to enable it to successfully attain its mature development.

Fullest Possible Scope Asked.

"I therefore venture to express the hope that one of the results of your deliberations will be to allow the fullest possible scope for research and experimentation, both from a scientific and a commercial point of view, on short waves throughout the length and breadth of radio's natural laboratory, which is the world."

A similar plea was made by Mr. Sarnoff, who said that the delegates could "confine progress in a straightjacket or give it the right of way in the air."

He emphasized the "enormous possibilities which the future of radio holds for us," asserting that in addition to the short wave system of transmission, facsimile transmission whereby p...otographic copies of documents can be transmitted, better sound broadcasting and television when both sight and sound will be combined, are within measuring distance.

Hoover Also Is Present.

Gen. Harbord referred to the presence of Secretary of Commerce Hoover and stressed the importance which radio by facilitating international communication is playing as a wor... peacemaker.

The delegates arrived from Washington this morning and spent the greater part of the day inspecting the receiving station of the Radio Corporation at Riverhead, Long Island, and the new broadcasting station of WEAF at Bellmore, Long Island.

Secretary Hoover, a guest at the banquet, made a brief extemporaneous address, expressing confidence that radio, under the leadership of such men as Marconi, would develop along lines which would make international regulation unnecessary.

In the eyes of the world, the secretary said, broadcasting is conceived as the major function of radio, but there are many other functions which are certain to be developed in the future as the limitations now prevailing are overcome.

CURB ON DEATH PENALTY DECREED BY THE SOVIET

Only Antigovernment Crimes to Be Capital Offenses Under Manifesto.

AID TO PEASANTS GIVEN

Leningrad, Russia, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—The abolition of capital punishment, except in the most grave offenses, and the commutation of prison terms, except of those convicted of working to destroy the Soviet government, was announced tonight.

The announcement was made in a manifesto read by Alexis I. Rykoff, president of the council of peoples' commissars, before the Soviet parliament which opened an extraordinary session tonight.

The shortening of the working day to seven hours also was provided in the manifesto.

According to Rykoff and Michael Kalinin, president of the All-Russia central executive committee, the manifesto foreshadows a new and more liberal internal policy.

The clause dealing with capital punishment reads:

"Clause 9. Exclude from the criminal code in force in the union of Socialist Soviet republics the application of capital punishment as a measure of social defense in all cases save anti-government crimes, military and armed riots."

The executive manifesto grants further relief regarding these items, increase in the budget for workers homes by 15,000,000 rubles over last year's appropriation, the release of 10 per cent more of the poor peasants from paying taxes (25 per cent of the poor peasants already having been released), the increase of the school budget for the population of villages by 15,000,000 rubles, and double insurance funds for war invalids.

The manifesto also provides the setting aside of 10,000,000 rubles to help poor peasants restock their farms and the working out of a scheme to make the peasants secure in their old age.

SAVES HER CHILDREN AND SELF IN FLOOD

Woman, Twice Swept Down Mountain Stream, Pulls Trio Ashore.

Special to The Washington Post.

Luray, Va., Oct. 15.—Swept down Cedar Run, a mountain stream near the eastern boundary of Page County, Mrs. Schuyler Dodson with her two children, 2 and 4 years old, respectively, last night narrowly escaped with her life and, as if by a miracle, saved her children.

Improvised fish dams for the last 24 hours have been holding back flood waters, due to heavy rains. Mrs. Dodson and her children were alone in their mountain home. The nearest neighbor was a mile away. The bursting dams above could be plainly heard by her above the rush of waters and hurricane that was felling trees.

Believing her home would be swept away, Mrs. Dodson, in the darkness, started with her children for the home of her brother, Bernie Taylor. She had no lantern. Twenty feet from her home she and her children plunged into the raging torrent that was threatening her dwelling. In the darkness Mrs. Dodson frantically grasped for twigs and bushes along the bank of the stream, meanwhile holding her baby and trying to keep within reach of the elder daughter. Knowing she and her children were being rapidly carried toward a chasm through which they could not pass alive, the mother redoubled her efforts to escape. Within 50 feet of the chasm Mrs. Dodson grasped the limbs of an overhanging tree. After she had succeeded in pulling herself and children up the precipice another rush of water again swept them off. Again the mother found a stout tree limb by which she saved herself and children.

ROBERT ADAMS HEADS CENTRAL SPEAKERS

Robert Adams was elected president of the Four-Minute Speakers Bureau of Central High School at the bureau's first meeting of the season last Wednesday in the Morgan Memorial room. Frances Edelin was elected vice president; Catherine Pritchard, secretary; Minor Hudson, treasurer, and Robert Maurer, sergeant-at-arms. Robert Adams presided.

The school orchestra started last week under the direction of H. P. Hoover, with a membership of 35. Twelve students have registered in the verse-writing class, which meets the seventh hour on Wednesdays with Miss Olem L. Orr as teacher.

The first issue of La Cronique, Central's French paper, will be off the press about November 1. Miss Sarah Sugar is editor. Harold R. Greenfield Central student, has taken a photograph of the school and stadium from the air.

Bertrand Russell, former professor of philosophy at Harvard, and at present a lecturer on the staff of the British Institute of Philosophical Studies, will speak Tuesday night in Washington Auditorium on "Education and World Peace" under auspices of the Washington Chapter of the League for Industrial Democracy.

LINDBERGH CHEERED BY 15,000 IN VIRGINIA; BYRD'S GUEST TODAY

GOVERNOR GIVES SCROLL TO HIM AT BIG BANQUET

Ocean Flier Resting Today at Executive Mansion—Visits Baltimore Next.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Straight as a martin to its gourd, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh arrived over the city at 1:53 o'clock this afternoon from Winston-Salem, N. C., to make a perfect landing at the Richard E. Byrd airport a few minutes later after circling the airport one time. As the famous Spirit of St. Louis taxied down the middle of the field to a specially prepared hangar, a crowd of 15,000 pressed vainly against the military cordon thrown around the field to see more closely the smiling, slender youth whose aerial passage to Paris won for him the plaudits of the world.

Cameras clicked on every hand as the famous smile flashed again and again upon the cheering crowd and members of the city's official reception committee greeted him soon after he had stepped from the mechanical unit of the celebrated "we," which was moved to a nearby hangar where a guard kept watch over it.

Triumphal Ride 8 Miles Long.

The world-famed young colonel took his place in the rear seat of a big automobile with Mayor Fulmer Bright to begin his triumphal march to the State fair grounds where a huge crowd was waiting to see and hear him. Over flag-hung streets lined with cheering and enthusiastic persons the air pathfinder to Paris rode to receive an unbroken ovation along the eight mile route.

A thunderous acclamation greeted Col. Lindbergh at the fairgrounds, where he spoke from a raised platform, equipped with a microphone to carry his voice far beyond the borders of the Old Dominion. His brief speech was in the interest of the advancement of aviation.

John Stewart Bryan, publisher of the Richmond News-Leader, presided and conferred upon the young aviator the Richmond medal of distinguished service, bearing the following inscription:

Given Few Hours of Rest.

Following the reception at the fair grounds, Col. Lindbergh was tendered a reception by Gov. Byrd at the governor's mansion, which was succeeded by several hours of seclusion there for him to relax.

A banquet, attended by 500 guests, was given Col. Lindbergh tonight at a local hotel. Gov. Byrd presented to him, in the name of the City of Richmond and the State of Virginia, a scroll. The scroll bears the following inscription:

"You have been called our ambassador of good will to Europe. This, indeed, you were, and in your modesty and dignity and good sense you gave to Europe an example of the finest type of American manhood.

"Virginia welcomes you and salutes you as a young American who has the strength of ten because his heart is pure; as a son who has justified the life of a noble mother and the memory of a fine father; as an aviator who has a dream of the future in the air and the practical knowledge to make the dream come true; as a brave man without conceit and a famous man without pretense. Great as your achievement was, Virginia admires you even more for what you are than she applauds you for what you did."

Col. Lindbergh will spend tomorrow here as the guest of Gov. Byrd, it was announced this afternoon. The time of his departure for Baltimore, the next stop on his itinerary, was not definitely made known tonight.

FILLED PRISON TURNS 400 FROM ITS DOORS

Special to The Washington Post.

Moundsville, W. Va., Oct. 15.—Dr. L. M. Robinson, warden of the West Virginia Penitentiary here, declared today that something must be done in the near future to overcome crowded conditions at the prison, else serious consequences may result.

Fifteen hundred men and women are now being cared for within the prison walls, while 400 others are being guarded elsewhere, Dr. Robinson said.

Prisoners are kept two in a cell in most instances, and this, it is maintained, does not conduce to reformation of character. The capacity of the prison is only 900.

Of the prisoners outside the penitentiary, 250 are at work constructing State highways, while 150 others are at Alderson helping on the new Federal prison for women.

The legislature will be obliged to enlarge the institution, Dr. Robinson said.

School Head to Decide Fight for Principalship

Clarksburg, W. Va., Oct. 15.—The Roosevelt-Wilson High School principalship squabble, wherein two pedagogues claim the position, will be carried before George M. Ford, State superintendent of schools, at Charleston, Monday, for a hearing.

The case is being taken to the State department by J. Walter Duncan, former principal, deposed by the school board as now constituted after having been employed for the coming year by the retiring board. Stanley K. Dickinson was elected by the new board as his successor. There has been a mixup in the membership of the school board, J. Wesley Rine, former president, having been ousted by the court following impeachment on charges of irregularities, and Henry Bassell being named president.

Barber Shoots Man In Battle in His Shop

Newport News, Va., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—A man named Eggleston was dangerously wounded in Williamsburg this afternoon when shot by L. S. Gardiner, proprietor of a barber shop in which he worked, according to police of Williamsburg. Gardiner said he shot Eggleston in self-defense, the latter attacking him with the head rest of a chair when he attempted to discharge him, according to the story told to the authorities.

Eggleston was hurried to a Newport News hospital for treatment. His condition is reported critical.

NONE HEARD APPROACH OF INTERURBAN TRAIN

Indianapolis, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—With the death of Mrs. Mary Berling, 36, the toll of the automobile trailer-interurban car crash here last night was increased to eighteen this afternoon.

Previously the toll was raised to seventeen today when Mrs. Ethel Merriman died.

Lee Merriman, her husband, was killed instantly in the crash at a crossing of the Indianapolis and Newcastle (Honey Bee) Line, 4 miles northeast of Indianapolis.

All of the dead—eleven men and seven women—were members or relatives of members of the drill team of the Mystic Order of Veiled Prophets of the Enchanted Realm, fun organization of the Masonic Order. They were en route to a barn dance.

Others Likely to Die.

Four or five of the injured are expected to die, physicians said.

Three investigations have been started, designed not only to fix the blame for the accident but to prevent recurrence of such a tragedy.

David E. Matthews, chief railroad inspector for the Public Service Commission, announced that a series of tests would be made at the crossing with traction cars operated at varying speeds to obtain data on stopping cars.

Dr. C. H. Keever, Marion County coroner, planned to summon witnesses for an inquest Monday.

Police held Motorman W. W. Merrill, who suffered a broken leg in the accident; Conductor Hal Titus and Harry Stewart, driver of the truck that was pulling the trailer. All were charged with involuntary manslaughter.

Scene of Horror Related.

A scene of horror, with relatives and friends lying dead or sending out agonized cries for help, confronted survivors of the tragedy.

One of the few survivors of the trailer was C. J. Leppert, who leaped as the car bore down on the party. Trembling from shock, and wringing his hands, he said he could not get the screams of the mortally injured out of his mind.

"I didn't see the car," Mr. Leppert said. "I just remember all of a sudden the lights and the crash. I jumped, and sailed through the air, bruising myself as I alighted in a crumpled heap. After that it was horrible. I could hear moans, shouts and crying—I didn't know where I was."

Stunned and speechless, Rowland P. Rhodes stood beside the cloak-covered body of a woman.

"She is my wife," he said; "I can not tell you about the accident."

His voice broke and he stood mutely on watch until the body was removed in an ambulance.

Policeman in the Party.

Harry Smith, a city policeman, was one of the party. "The first thing I knew of the accident was when I looked up and saw lights down low which looked like automobile lights," he said. "When the interurban got about two light poles away (200 feet) it whistled. It was too late to jump. There were terrible screams, then a crash. I was stunned for a minute, but started to do what I could."

Lawrence W. Drapier, monarch of the Sahara Grotto, whose members and relatives made up the party in the trailer, was in his automobile and witnessed the accident. Bodies and fragments of the trailer were tossed high into the air, he said. Seizing a flashlight he leaped into the mass of mangled forms and it was through his assistance that early identification of most of the victims was established.

"That's Lee Merriman," he cred, as he hovered over one body, "and, my God, there's Von Glascock. Vonnie! Vonnie! He was playing the accordion. All my boys, every one of them. Just out for a good time, and now look!"

MILLICENT ROGERS' MARRIAGE DELAYED

Father "Hopes" She Still Intends to Be Bride of Arturo Ramus.

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, Oct. 15.—Reports that Millicent Rogers, the former Countess Salm, was to be married today in her father's home in Southampton, L. I., to Arturo Ramus, wealthy young society man from Argentina, were denied by Col. H. H. Rogers today at his Long Island home.

"No," said Col. Rogers, "she isn't going to be married today. That's all off."

Asked if she was to have been married today, he said there had been some plans to that effect, but that they "seem to have been changed."

Asked if she still intended to marry the Argentine, the father replied, "I hope so."

He said that the wedding would no doubt take place later in the season, but that he could not say just when.

Catherine Candler Soon to Be Bride

Atlanta, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Two members of the Candler family are now on their honeymoon and another will soon hear the wedding chimes.

Asa Candler, jr., son of the founder of the Coca Cola Co., married his secretary, Miss Florence Stephenson, yesterday. His son, John, married Miss Elizabeth Brandon in Richmond, Va., Wednesday.

Miss Catherine Candler, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Candler, is to marry Dr. W. C. Warren, jr., a young physician, at an early date. She is a granddaughter of the elder Asa Candler.

Astronomy Teacher Will Enter Business

Chicago, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Prof. Forest Ray Moulton, internationally famous astronomer and mathematician, and head of the astronomy department at the University of Chicago, has resigned from the University to enter business, it was learned today.

He will be associated with the utilities power and light corporation, in an executive position.

Prof. Moulton's theories on the formation of the earth and the solar system have attracted wide note. He is a member of the National Academy of Science, a fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society, of England, and a former research associate of the Carnegie Institute.

6 LOST WHEN LINER SINKS FREIGHTER OUT OF NEW YORK

24 OF THE CREW OF 30 RESCUED IN DARKNESS

Engine Room Workers Were Carried Under, Is Belief of the Captain.

New York, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Six Norwegian seamen probably lost their lives when the Havre-bound liner Paris rammed the freighter Besseggen amidships off the Statue of Liberty early today, sending her to the bottom in ten minutes. Twenty-four of the crew of 30 were saved by ferryboats and tugs.

The collision occurred about 1 a. m. as the Paris, heading for the open sea, swerved out of the channel to avoid crashing into a string of barges and piled into the Besseggen, ripping a great hole in the freighter's side. The liner stood by until harbor craft dashed to the rescue, then steamed to Quarantine and a few hours later pushed on toward Europe.

Eight men had been picked up by the liner. They were put off in police boats at Quarantine and joined their rescued mates at the Battery. The municipal ferries Brooklyn and American Legion, with several tugboats, cruised the water about the wreck for several hours, picking up the survivors.

Fear for Engine Room Crew.

Capt. Ludwig Hassell, of the Besseggen, his wife and their 4-year-old child were saved by a lifeboat crew from the Brooklyn. The skipper said he was afraid the crash came too suddenly to allow time for the engine room crew of the freighter to escape. He and his family narrowly escaped being drawn under by the suction of the sinking freighter and were saved only when the flimsy improvised life raft was tossed into the air by the whirlpool, throwing them clear of the danger zone.

The Besseggen was loaded with raw sugar from Cuba. Since October 2 she has swung at anchor a few hundred yards off the Statue of Liberty without having interfered with the world's busiest shipping lane. Shipping men said today that a strong ebb tide, a stiff breeze and the accident of the barge Tow, which made the Paris swing out of her course, probably combined to cause the collision.

Another Hazard to Vessels.

The hulk of the Besseggen, sunk athwart the ship channel off the Statue of Liberty, will offer another hazard to vessels entering or leaving the harbor, shipping r en said today.

The wreck is the second which must be passed by big steamers within a few hundred yards. The other is that of the El Sol, sunk by collision last year with the freighter Sac City. Her spars are still visible above the water, but the Besseggen is entirely under.

Reginald Denny, Star, And Wife Separate

Los Angeles, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—The Examiner today says that Reginald Denny, film star, and his wife, Irene Hazeman, musical comedy actress, have separated, Mrs. Denny having moved from the family residence in Hollywood.

At the theater where she is appearing, Mrs. Denny declined to discuss the separation. She referred all inquiries to her attorney, Charles R. Hazelhurst.

Denny is vacationing at his camp near Running Springs in San Bernardino County, Cal. Servants at his home said he had spent more of his time at his mountain camp recently than at his Hollywood home.

Teachers Are Notified Of Institute Plans

Washington school teachers were notified of plans for the Community Institute of Washington, and asked to suggest subjects and speakers for its program, in a circular issued yesterday from the superintendent's office of the Franklin Administration Building.

"In pursuance of the policy of using our school buildings to promote the cultural advancement of Washington," the circular read, "the Community Center Department has organized the Institute to present programs of outstanding merit. The Washington Society of Fine Arts and the Public Library have cooperated with the Community Center Department in planning the series which is offered for the season at Central Community Center."

Duvall Not to Quit, Despite Law Ruling

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—After three law firms today had held that bond issues of $48,000 bearing the signature of Mayor John L. Duvall were illegal because of his conviction recently of violating the corrupt practices act, the mayor asserted he had expected such an opinion.

He reiterated he would not resign and indicated he would carry on a court fight if necessary to hold his office.

ASING CAR FARES ON ECONOMIC LAW URGED BY STORRS

ACTION INVESTMENT IS SAFE DESPITE AUTOS

blic Transportation System Always Will Be Needed, His Article States.

By LUCIUS S. STORRS.
naging Director, American Electric Railway Association.

ew York, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Traction nagements are well aware that the ence on our streets and highways 22,000,000 automotive vehicles has ed many people to conclude that day of organized public transpor- on is nearing its end, and the time roaching when every individual do his journeying about the cities suburbs in his private automobile, a bus. Were this conclusion sound, ourse the investment of more than 00,000,000 in the electric railway ness would be in real danger. unately, it is not sound. he only trouble with the electric way industry as a whole (and that udes the auxiliary or supplemen- motor coach service which the ways are rendering) is that in many es the rate of fare is noncompen- ory, burdens of taxation inherited n the horse-car days have not been d from the car-riders' backs and managements have not yet engaged active merchandising of service. t the street car is as necessary to prosperity and convenience of dwellers as it ever was is proved the fact that despite the tremend- increase in the number of private omobiles in use there has been no ndonment of electric railway serv- in any large community, nor is such abandonment thinkable.

Fare Revision Is Problem.

evision of the rate of fare is of the ost importance to this industry. In w large centers of population the 5- t fare has been made a fetish by se to whom it is of political ad- tage, but in the greater part of the ntry economic law prevails over po- al expediency. Thus we find 214 the 313 cities of 25,000 inhabitants or e in which there is street car service nting their street railway companies asic 10-cent fare, with modifications meet local conditions. There is gen- recognition of the economic value he service which the street cars ren- and with this comes recognition of simple truth that adequate service ends entirely on adequate income. t the same time the mechanical tus of the industry has been produc- new types of street cars that are ter in weight, safer and speedier, dsomer, more comfortable and ter in motion. Roller bearings and types of drive have been adopted. one-man car with its automatic ty devices has proved its efficiency economy. Modern attention to the anship of transportation is re- ling in traffic increases despite the petition of the private automobile.

he electric railways also have adopt- he bus in large numbers. Nearly motor coaches now give service g with nearly 80,000 passenger et cars to the people along 60,000 s of route, 44,000 of which is rail e. The bus manufacturers are ing out vehicles really designed to t transportation needs, and they the railways readily applying them hat we term unified service.

he railway industry is well aware the public is the arbiter of its iny; that if it does not render the t of service the public wants it not expect prosperity. Its policy, efore, is to do whatever may be in public interest. Granted that, re- less of the number of private auto- iles that ever may be in use, there must be a public system of trans- ation or modern city life breaks n, the question of permanence of public system is merely one of fair pensation. The electric railway is ededly the most economical means ass transportation, and those who e spent their lives in the industry invested their money in it have no s as to its stability.

Conditions Abroad Shown In Money Market Rates

Open market money rate of various European countries apparently reflect divergence in economic conditions abroad.

The London bill rate has remained at approximately 4⅜ per cent since the rise from below 4 per cent early this year upon easement of the short money market. Astringency in the market in Germany sent the rate soaring to near the 6 per cent mark. Conditions in France have resulted in continued reduction in rates, but with indication the market was becoming more firm. The rate in Switzerland has been just below the official 3½ per cent.

The cahrt, prepared by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, shows the trend of rates in European countries and in the United States since 1925, based upon 90-day bill rates in this country and corresponding rates abroad.

Travelers Aid Ends Poster Competition

The Travelers Aid Society poster competition for the best original designs for a poster visualizing the definite service being rendered travelers, closed last night. The jury of award will review the posters early this week to determine the winners.

Headquarters of the campaign received a great many designs at the last minute, fifteen being sent in by students of the art class of McKinley High School. The subjects embraced by the posters cover a wide range. Some of the contestants have expressed their conception of the service in bright colors, while others have chosen black and white drawings.

AUDITOR, 51 YEARS IN SERVICE, RETIRES

Charles D. Davis, 72 years old, for the last ten years auditor of the Bureau of Mines, retired yesterday after 51 years of service with the Government.

Davis left his post two weeks ago. However, his retirement officially dated from yesterday, since the remaining two weeks of his service were accumulated leaves of absence allowed him. He is now at his new home, near Annapolis, Md.

Davis's first work with the Government was the destruction of old and worn-out currency for the Treasury Department. In those days the destruction was by hand. Davis and two other employes would make scraps of paper out of the old bills and would take them to a furnace in a small shack on the Monument grounds, where the old notes, formerly so valuable, would be stuffed in the grate, to be burned to crisp ashes. That was in the early 70s. Mr. Davis was with the Geological Survey from 1881 to 1917. He was transferred from there to the Bureau of Mines.

Militia Officers To Attend Meeting

Maj. Gen. Anton Stephan, commanding the District of Columbia National Guard, and Lieut. Peyton G. Nevitt, adjutant, will attend the meeting of the National Guard Association at St. Paul, Minn., October 26 to 28.

Guard headquarters announced yesterday that team matches will be held October 22, and individual matches October 23. The annual oyster roast will be held in conjunction with the matches, which will be followed by the annual turkey shoot.

Capt. J. C. Jensen, ordnance department has been designated captain of all rifle teams of the District guard, to be designated to represent the District in competitions during 1928.

PRICES FOR WHEAT CONTINUE FIRM AS EXPORTS INCREASE

CORN DROPS WITH GAIN IN CROP PROSPECTS

Favorable Weather Estimated to Have Raised Forecasts 145,000,000 Bushels.

The wheat market continued firm during the week ended yesterday influenced principally by the good demand for milling wheat and the advancing markets at Winnipeg and Liverpool which were apparently reflecting the delayed movement and poor quality of wheat in Canada and Europe, according to the Weekly Grain Market Review of the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics. An indicated increase of about 145,000,000 bushels in the corn crop as a result of favorable weather during September weakened the corn market. Rye was firm with wheat and also as a result of a continued active demand but the oats market weakened with corn. The barley market was independently firm, particularly for malting grades. Large offerings of flax of which a greater percentage was of poor quality weakened the flax market.

The domestic spring wheat crop was estimated October 1 at 313,771,000 bushels but included in that figure were 80,210,0000 bushels of durum produced in the Dakotas, Minnesota and Montana. With the exception of the 1922 crop, this is the largest production of durum ever recorded for the United States. With this increase in spring wheat over the September forecast the total production of all wheat in the United States is now placed at 866,538,000 bushels.

Quality Reported Low.

A feature in the foreign wheat market situation is the quality of this season's crop. According to the dominion bureau of statistics the quality of the Canadian crop is about 97 per cent of the ten-year average. Rains and snow in September caused considerable damage to the quality and also delayed marketings. Only about one-third as many cars of wheat were inspected during September as during the corresponding month last year and inspection reports confirm the low quality of the grain. The number of cars grading No. 3 Northern or better was only 46 per cent of the total, against 81 per cent in September, 1926. About one-fourth of the September inspections were no grade, whereas last year less than 10 were no grade.

The Australian crop is now officially placed at 115,000,000 bushels, which should provide some 70,000,000 bushels for export from the new crop, not taking into account stocks of old wheat on hand at the end of the season.

The supply of wheat available for export from the United States and Canada at the 1st of October was around 100,000,000 bushels larger than on October 1 last year, not allowing for unmerchantable wheat. Export demand, however, continued of good volume, exports from the United States during September totaling nearly 36,000,000 bushels, compared with about 29,000,000 bushels last year, when hard winter wheat was going out in large quantities from the Gulf ports. A good percentage of the United States exports since the 1st of July has been of Pacific Coast wheat, exports of wheat and flour from the Pacific Coast ports during July, August and September totaling nearly 22,000,000 bushels, compared with 16,500,000 bushels last year.

Wheat Prices Advance.

Cash wheat, particularly milling qualities, continues in good demand and premiums of winter wheat were advanced 2 to 3 cents a bushel. Prices of high grade winter wheat in virtually all markets are now above an export basis except on the Pacific Coast. Export bids were around $1.39¾ a bushel for No. 1 hard winter wheat delivered at gulf ports compared with quotations of $1.51 to $1.52¼ for ordinary No. 1 hard winter at Fort Worth and $1.38½ to $1.43½ for 12½ protein No. 2 hard winter at Kansas City. In the Liverpool market No. 2 hard winter wheat from the United States for October shipment was quoted at $1.51 compared with $1.70 for Canadian No. 1 Manitoba October and November shipment and $1.55 for 63½ pounds Argentine Rosa Fe for October to December shipment.

Soft winter wheat premiums continued to advance but the recent high premiums paid for soft winter at St. Louis attracted more wheat to that market and premiums were reduced about 9 cents during the week. At the close of the week, however, No. 2 red was quoted there at $1.44 to $1.45, Chicago, $1.38½; Cincinnati, $1.40 to $1.41, and Toledo, $1.39.

In the spring wheat markets premiums for choice high protein wheat were higher while the lower grades were weaker. Thirteen per cent protein No. 1 dark northern was being quoted at 16 to 26 cents over the December price, which closed October 14 at $1.29, an advance of about one-half cent for the week. Higher protein was bringing increasingly higher premiums. Best types of Montana wheat were selling from $1.50 to $1.65 a bushel which would compare in a general way with quotations of $1.49⅜ for No. 1 northern at Winnipeg. Offerings of good milling durum were also scarce and premiums of high protein bright lots of amber durum were advanced. No. 1 amber was quoted at Minneapolis at 2 cents under to 20 cents over the Duluth October price and 13 per cent protein No. 1 amber was quoted at Duluth at premiums up to 15 cents over the October price, which closed October 14 at $1.21⅛.

Rye Market Steady.

The rye market continued steady, influenced by the strength in wheat, but also as a result of continued active demand both for export and domestic trade. Prices were slightly higher, No. 2 rye being quoted at the close of the week at Minneapolis at 92 to 92½ cents and at Chicago at 99 cents a bushel.

The improvement reported in the corn crop during September was confirmed by the October 1 estimate which was increased about 145,000,000 bushels over the September 1 forecast and placed the crop at 2,603,000,000 bushels, or about 44,000,000 bushels below last year's harvest. The estimate for the corn belt is slightly larger than for last year with the gains in the States west of the Missouri River overbalancing the losses in the States east of the Mississippi River. The production of corn in the Southern and Southwestern States will probably exceed that of last year, according to present indications.

The improved prospects were the principal weakening feature in the market and December future prices declined neary 7 cents a bushel at Chicago for the week ended October 14. Cash prices declined with futures, but demand was becoming more active at the lower prices, particularly from industries manufacturing corn products. At the close of the week No. 3 mixed corn was quoted at Chicago at 96¾ cents and No. 3 yellow at 89 to 90 cents. No. 3 yellow sold at Kansas City at 87 to 90 cents and at Minneapolis at 84 to 84½ cents. No. 3 yellow was quoted at St. Louis at 91½ cents and No. 2 yellow at Omaha at 84½ cents. Corn was selling in country points in Nebraska at around 70 cents a bushel, compared with about 90 cents a month ago.

The oats market which had been holding steady up to a few days ago weakened materially with the decline in corn prices. Demand became less active except for the heavy weight oats, and cash prices declined about 2 cents a bushel, No. 3 white oats being quoted at the close of the week at Chicago at 46 to 50½ and at Minneapolis at 43 to 44¾ cents.

The barley market, particularly for malting grades, continued firm notwithstanding the decline in corn prices. Receipts of good quality barley were scarcely equal to the active demand from maltsters and exporters and prices held firm. The poor quality of much of the crop in several European countries is causing a continued active export demand for United States barley suitable for malting purposes. Special No. 2 barley was quoted at Milwaukee at 80 to 85 cents and best malting grades at Chicago at 74 to 77 cents. Barley prices were also firm in Western markets, No. 3 barley being quoted at Denver at $1.50 to $1.55 a hundred pounds, which is equivalent to 72 to 74½ cents a bushel. No. 2 Western barley was quoted at Los Angeles at about $2.07½ a hundred, equivalent to about 99 cents a bushel.

FINANCIAL DISTRICT CHATTERBOX

A. M. Nevius, vice president Riggs National Bank, and F. G. Awalt, deputy comptroller of the currency, have made reservations on the bankers' special which will take a group of Eastern bankers to the annual convention of the American Bankers Association, to be held in Houston, Tex., beginning October 24.

Directors of the Union Finance Co. have declared the regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent on the preferred stock and 10 cents a share on the common stock. This is the twenty-ninth quarterly dividend paid by the company.

J. T. Exnicios, president Departmental Bank, departed yesterday for a two weeks' vacation in the Adirondacks.

E. B. Spencer, president First National Exchange Bank, Roanoke, Va., was a visitor to the financial district last week. He was a guest of John Poole, president Federal-American National Bank, on Wednesday.

John M. Riordon, executive vice president Bank of Commerce and Savings, motored to Baltimore yesterday to attend the Navy-Notre Dame football game.

Volume of Trade With France May Be Cut by Higher Duties

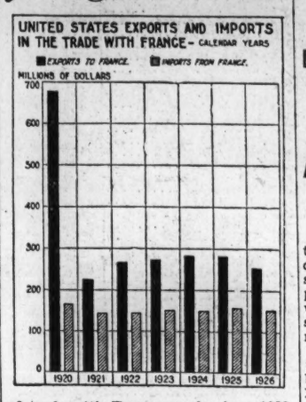

(Associated Press.)

Observers are agreed that the increase in duties on French imports from the United States will reduce the volume of trade with that country.

The French market for American goods, however, probably will be diminished only fractionally. Department of Commerce figures indicate that the goods affected by the new four-fold rates, and whose market theoretically already is closed, brought less than $15,000,000 yearly as compared with the total volume of trade with France, more than $200,000,000 annually for at least six years.

Many American products will continue to pay the minimum duty rates and others will pay the slightly higher intermediate or new minimum duty rates, thus permitting American manufacturers generally to compete successfully with those of other nations in the French market. But other American manufacturers who since 1910 have enjoyed the same low rates as other favored nations probably will find the French market closed to them and competition impossible because they will have to pay a rate four times as high as that imposed upon similar products imported in increasing quantity from Germany.

The chart, prepared by the Department of Commerce, shows the volume of trade with France yearly since 1920. During 1920 exports totaled nearly $700,000,000, probably due to the numerous needs of the war-devastated areas. Since that year, however, exports never have reached $300,000,000 yearly. Imports have remained consistently below $200,000,000.

WEEKLY MARKET REVIEW

(U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics.)

For the Week Ended October 14, 1927.

Fruits and Vegetables.

Potatoes steady to firm. Pennsylvania sacked Round Whites closed at $1.95 to $2.10 per 100 pounds in Eastern markets. Maine sacked Green Mountains $2.25 in New York City; $1.75 f. o. b. Presque Isle. Northern sacked Round Whites, $1.40 to $1.85 carlot sales in Chicago; $1.40 to $1.50 f. o. b. Waupaca, Wis. New York Danish type cabbage slightly weaker at $17 to $25 bulk per ton in terminal markets; $10 to $12 f. o. b. Rochester. Wisconsin sacked stock steady at $1 per 100 pounds in Chicago. New York and Midwestern yellow onions slightly weaker at $1.25 to $1.85 sacked per 100 pounds in consuming centers, but steady at $1.30 to $1.45 f. o. b. Apples generally steady to firm. Eastern Jonathans ranged $1.75 to $2.25 per bushel basket in Eastern cities. Virginia Yorks $5 per barrel in New York City; $4.50 f. o. b. Shenandoah Valley points. Michigan and Illinois Jonathans $7.50 to $8 per barrel in Chicago.

Live Stock and Meats.

Top price on hogs at Chicago today is $12.15, or 30 cents higher than a week ago. Beef steers were 26 cents to 50 cents higher. Heifers advanced sharply and cows showed price improvement. Veal calves were 50 cents to $1 higher. Sheep were steady. Other classes ruled generally higher. Wholesale prices on fresh Western dressed meats at New York today were 50 cents higher on good grade steer beef, steady on veal and heavy pork loins, $2 to $3 higher on lamb, steady to $1 higher on mutton and steady to $1 lower on light pork loins.

Dairy Products.

Butter markets continued on a steady to firm basis during the week ended October 14. While declines occurred early in the week, later advances brought prices to the previous level. Light supplies resulted in increasing use of storage butter. Receipts are still relatively light, although production conditions are reported as improved. Closing prices on 92 score: New York, 48 cents; Chicago, 45½ cents; Philadelphia, 49 cents; Boston, 47½ cents.

Cheese markets were firm at prices on the Wisconsin cheese boards advancing ¾c to 1¼c over preceding week. Trading continued moderate. General confidence is expressed regarding stored cheese. Receipts at Wisconsin warehouses show further gradual declines. Wholesale prices at Wisconsin primary markets October 13, 1927: Flats, 27c; single daisies, 27c; longhorns, 27¼c.

Hay.

Hay markets held steady. Offerings good quality hay readily absorbed at slightly higher prices. Relative scarcity top grades resulting more active inquiry medium to lower grades. Alfalfa and prairie strengthened by improved demand. No. 1 timothy, Boston, $22.25; Pittsburgh, $18.50; Cincinnati, $16.50; Chicago, $18.50; St. Louis, $20.50. No. 2 timothy, Chicago, $16; No. 1 alf

STOCKS TURN IRREGULAR AFTER EARLY ADVANCE

Recent Leaders Move Little. Gains, However, Outnumber Losses.

SHATTUCK AT NEW HIGH

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, Oct. 15.—After a show of strength in the early trading today liquidation and bear selling set in and the stock market became irregular with the general trend toward lower levels. A strong bid to attract outside buying by pushing up some of the speculative leaders met with little success. The market was in an unsettled condition at the close, partly reflecting divided opinion about trade prospects for the remainder of the year. The day's turnover of slightly under a million shares was comparatively large for a short session.

Such recent leaders as General Motors, U. S. Steel common, Allied Chemical, General Electric and New York Central moved sluggishly over a narrow range and finished the day close to yesterday's final prices.

During the two hours trading eighteen stocks scored new peak prices for the year and six hit new lows. The former were Underwood Typewriter, May Department Stores, Shattuck, National Distillers Products, Reid Ice Cream, Lambert, Homestake Mining, Beechnut Packing, Bush Terminal, Coty, Fidelity Phoenix Insurance, Cushman, Collins & Aikman, Purity Baking A, U. S. Leather A, Midland Steel Products preferred, Vicksburg, Shreveport & Pacific preferred, and American Linseed common and preferred.

Lows were established by Sinclair Consolidated, Remington-Rand common and first preferred, Cuba American Sugar, Pure Oil, and Advance Rumely preferred. Many of these stocks lost part of their early gains before the close.

Several issues, usually moving independently, were pushed forward for net appreciations extending to 6¾ points, among them being American Can, Air Reduction, American Chicle, Butterick, Wrigley, Ward Baking B, U. S. Hoffman, Universal Pipe, Union Oil of California, National Biscuit, Omnibus, Radio Corporation, Packard Motor, Mack Truck, Greene Copper, and others. It will be noticed that in this appear several old selling platers which were led up to the post this morning and sent off to a good start. Their dust, to a certain extent, obscured the uncertain performance of many erstwhile market leaders.

An outstanding feature of the session was the strong upward movement in the stock of F. G. Shattuck, which was twirled up to a new high at 99⅞ and closed at 98, a net gain of 4⅝. As this stock pays only $2 a year it was evident that there was some special reason for the demand at current prices which has been in evidence during the last three sessions of the stock market. Because of expanding operations, Shattuck was mentioned as a second Kresge or Woolworth, in its line. Estimated earnings for 1927 run as high as $7 a share and those in close touch with the affairs of the company were of the opinion that the stock would not for long remain in the category of $2 dividend payers.

Both Midland Steel Products preferred, on the stock exchange, and the common stock on the curb market, were outstanding features on the side of advancing prices. American Sugar was under steady pressure, declining 4¼ net.

Revival of bullish activities in American Can was inspired by the recent favorable dividend action of National Biscuit, which only the other day voted an increase in its regular dividend rate to $6 annual basis and ordered an extra payment of $1 a share.

Rails had little part in the day's market. Oils held up fairly well, although many traders realized that numerous items of unfavorable news were just around the corner.

Sterling exchange held firmly around previous closing levels. Pesetas turned from their weakness of the past few days and shot up 20 points to about 17.30 cents. Dutch guilders moved still higher, setting another year's peak.

NEW YORK COTTON.

New York, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—An opening decline was followed by sharp rallies in the cotton market today on trade buying and week-end covering, accompanied by talk of a firm technical position and unconfirmed rumors of a bullish statement on price trends from Washington. The price of December contracts advanced from 20.45 to 20.98, or 34 points net higher, and closed at 20.91. The general market closed steady, at net advances of 18 to 30 points.

The market opened steady at a decline of 10 to 24 points under overnight selling orders from the South and further liquidation promoted by relatively easy Liverpool cables and unfavorable weather reports. March contracts sold off quickly at 20.71, or about 27 points net lower, but there was trade buying at the decline below 20½ cents for October. The market soon rallied on covering, evidently stimulated by strength in the New Orleans market, and active buying believed to be for New Orleans account, prices advancing to 21.25 for March, or about 54 points above yesterday's closing quotations. Offerings seemed to increase somewhat as prices approached the 21-cent level for December contracts, and closing prices showed reactions of some 7 to 10 points from the best.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 164,000 bales, against 240,000 last year.

Private cables said that hedging and Bombay selling had been absorbed by trade calling and London buying on the decline in the Liverpool market, but that the cotton goods trade in Manchester was depressed, and more looms were being stopped in the Blackburn and Burnly districts. Traders evidently found little change in reports from the domestic consumption figures for September, which possibly may have contributed to the rally from the early low level.

NAVY BEATEN BY NOTRE DAME'S LATE ATTACK; G. U. BOWS TO SYRACUSE, 19-6; MARYLAND WINS; WALTER JOHNSON IS GRANTED RELEASE BY NATS

Hilltop Team Defeated by Passes

Orange Backfield Has Lead of 13-0 at End of First Half.

Barbuti Intercepts 7 Heaves; Nork Makes Lone G. U. Score.

By ORREL MITCHELL,
(Staff Correspondent of The Post.)

SYRACUSE, Oct. 15.—Georgetown faced its first big test of the season here this afternoon and was found wanting. In a struggle replete with spectacular forward passing and brilliant open field running, the Orange of Syracuse triumphed over the Blue and Gray of Georgetown, 19 to 6, before a crowd of 18,000 in the Archbold Stadium.

Against the fast charging forwards and alert secondary defense of the Syracuse team, the visitors failed to reveal any of the scoring qualities that made them 2 to 1 favorites to win.

The forward pass was a prominent feature in the offensive of the rival elevens, but whereas the Orange employed the aerial attack in the "flat territory" with frequent success, the air game of the Hilltoppers was pitifully weak in the early periods against the zone defense of the visitors.

It was largely the all-around brilliance of Syracuse's four horsemen that brought on the downfall of the overrated visitors. The backfield of Capt. Barbuti, Baysinger, Goldman and Sebo, did everything a backfield could do and in brilliant manner.

With Harold Baysinger hurling the oval in distances ranging anywhere from 15 to 60 yards, and Jonah Goldman snaring passes with a deftness that amazed the throng, the Hilltoppers were dazed as Syracuse rolled up a 13-to-0 score during the first half. Raymond Barbut was the big menace to the Georgetown aerial attack and intercepted alien passes on no less than seven occasions. Samuel Sebo bolted with lightninglike drives through the line when called upon to get a precious 3 or 3 yards.

However, the Georgetown line from tackle to tackle was, for the most part, an impregnable barrier that repeatedly repulsed any thrusts through this sector.

The old weakness of Georgetown teams—inadequate defense against the forward pass—was very much in evidence in today's game, and led directly to the first two touchdowns of the Orange. An intercepted forward pass by Sebo put the Hill Toppers on the defensive midway in the opening quarter. Syracuse's initial drive goalward was checked on the 15-yard mark, where Brophy's attempted place kick from a difficult angle went wide.

An exchange of kicks saw the Orange with possession of the ball on the Georgetown 34-yard line, from where, on the first play, Goldman grabbed Baysinger's pass in the "flat territory" and sped down the side line for a touchdown. Brophy added the extra point.

Barbuti returned Mooney's kick-off to 30-yard line. On Baysinger's punt Raymond, of Syracuse, recovered the ball on Georgetown's 47-yard line when the oval grazed a Georgetown player. Line rushes failed to gain, and, on a remarkable forward pass that sailed 55 yards through the air, Referee Hughitt ruled that Hannegan had interfered with Barbuti as he attempted to take the pass. It was Syracuse's first down on the 5-yard line. On a fake kick, that completely baffled the Georgetown team, Goldman romped leisurely around left end for the second touchdown.

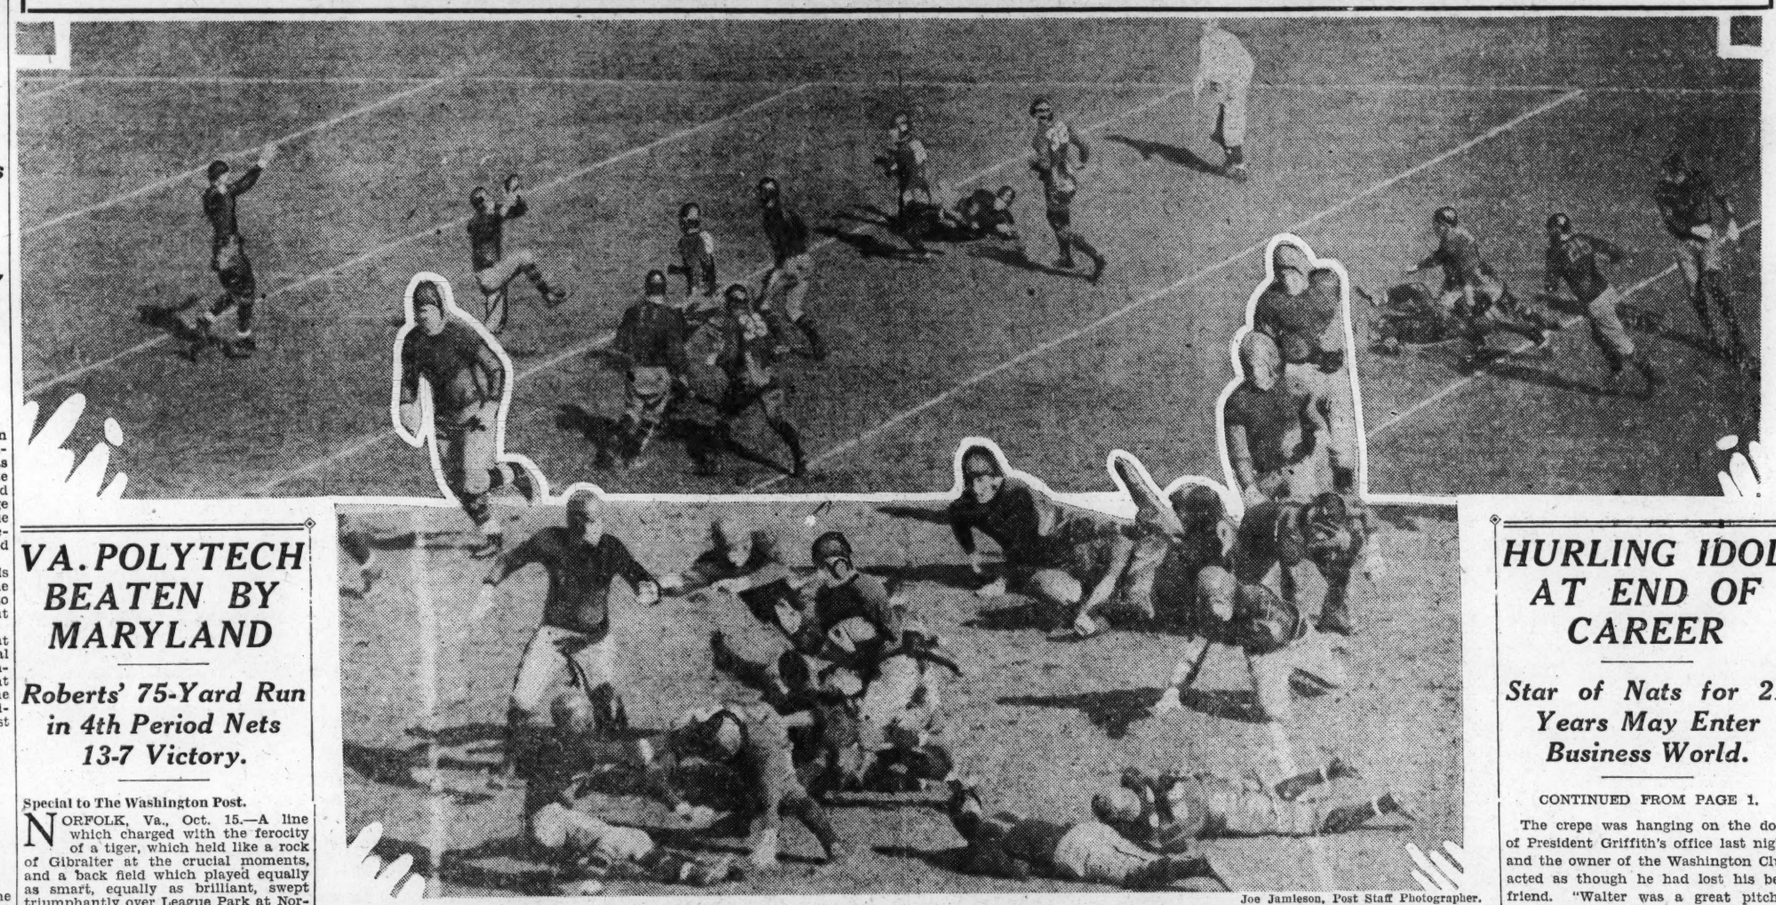

In the waning moments of the second quarter a determined drive by the Hilltoppers carried the ball to the 4-yard line, where poor generalship nullified a golden scoring opportunity for G. U. Three attempted forward passes were grounded.

After Nork had bucked center for a yard the Georgetown quarter back made exclusive use of the forward pass as a medium to score the goal. Three were successively grounded, and G. U.'s scoring threat came to an end, as Syracuse regained possession of the ball on its own 20-yard line and punted out of danger.

Georgetown scored its touchdown

VA. POLYTECH BEATEN BY MARYLAND

Roberts' 75-Yard Run in 4th Period Nets 13-7 Victory.

Special to The Washington Post.

NORFOLK, Va., Oct. 15.—A line which charged with the ferocity of a tiger, which held like a rock of Gibralter at the crucial moments, and a back field which played equally as smart, equally as brilliant, swept triumphantly over League Park at Norfolk this afternoon and carried the Old Liners from Maryland to supreme heights in their annual football classic with Virginia Tech. They won, 13 to 7. It was a gripping, spectacular game, a death-to-death struggle that thrilled the hearts of 8,000 gridiron fans and kept them gasping for breath until the very last whistle.

The boys from Maryland tonight are singing the praises of Auggie Roberts, a third string quarter back on Curley Byrd's team. It was this husky, fast-moving substitute who proved the hero of the day. His sensational 75-yard sweep in the fourth quarter enabled the Terrapins to claim a lead which was never overhauled.

What a run that was. It came with startling suddenness and held spectators spellbound as the fleeting Roberts hastened with the speed of a Nurmi toward the north goal, carrying with him the touchdown of victory.

Robert is a former Washington Central High School boy, who was taking part in his third varsity game. But it was the first time he had proven his real worth as a player. He was rushed into the game shortly after Tech had scored its second touchdown, replacing Gordon Kessler.

Immediately the complexion of the contest changed. The Gobblers, leading by 6 points by reason of a great march down the field, were stunned, so it seemed. Frank Peake, heralded punter and hero of the conquest of Colgate last Saturday, kicked from the 25-yard line and the ball sailed into the waiting arms of Roberts, who, behind perfect interference and mixing speed with crafty dodging and weaving, scored the touchdown which proved him the bane of Virginia Tech.

It was one of those games which clill the spine of every spectator, a nerve-wrecking scrap which saw the colors of victory fly on one camp one minute and on the other the next. Powerless, unable to show any dash in the first and second quarters, the Gobblers uncorked a series of line thrusts in the third which completely swept the Marylanders off their feet. Hammering away at line which weakened by the constant knock and tear of opposition, the Old Liners gave way, and allowed the Gobblers to drive them from their 25-yard line to Maryland's 22-yard line, just as the whistle ended the third quarter.

It was the spark of the Colgate battle burning once more in the hearts of the Gobblers. They were fighting men. They were trailing by six points, and nothing, it seemed, could stop them, and into the final period the boys in orange and

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 15 (A.P.). Alert and steady football shot through with the individual brilliance of the backfield star, Bruce Caldwell, carried Yale to a 19 to 0 victory over Brown in the Yale Bowl today in sweet retaliation for the triumph of the Bears a year ago.

Cashing in on every Brown misplay the Yale team held the whip hand all the way and twice shook Caldwell loose for runs that led to touchdowns.

The victory was the twenty-seventh for Yale over Brown since the rivalry began in 1880. Two of the 33 games played were ties and a team of "iron men" won the fourth for Brown in 1926.

In the opening period Capt. Randall, of Brown, fumbled and Quarrier recovered for Yale on the enermy's 16-yard line. Fighting doggedly, Brown twice turned back the Yale attack, but another fumble by Randall in the second period carried Yale to scoring distance for the third time and this chance the Elis did not miss.

The fumble came as Randall swept around right end at mid-field. Caldwell got the ball and dashed to the Brunonians' 21-yard line before he was tackled.

The drive for the goal was all Caldwell, with 5 yards through the line, then 11 off-tackle, until finally on fourth down the ball was on the 1-yard line. Then Caldwell shot off right tackle for the score. Cox failed to kick the goal.

In the third period, Randall again fumbled the ball, this time within yards of Eli's goal line. Again Caldwell recovered the ball and from behind the goal line Caldwell punted to safety.

A frantic forward pass attack at the start of the fourth quarter lost the ball on downs to Yale and Caldwell and Hoben plunged to mid-field. Caldwell tossed a long forward pass to Scott for a gain of 23 yards. Hoben smashed a yard at center, then Caldwell sprinted 26 yards around right end for a touchdown. He failed to get the extra point.

Under the steady battering, Caldwell

NEILSON FIELD, NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Oct. 15.—A reconstructed Rutgers Team went down under a 6-to-0 defeat at the hands of the George Washington Eleven this afternoon in a hard-fought contest. The Colonials, coming up from the Southland undefeated, outplayed the Scarlet in every period of a game witnessed by 5,000.

The visitors gained their victory by making one of the fastest touchdowns ever executed on Neilson Field. Lopeman took the kick-off at the beginning of the third period and ran the pigskin back 45 yards before being stopped on Rutgers' 42-yard mark. Stehman crashed through center for 10 yards, and on a similar play ran for a touchdown.

The Colonials presented a heavy line which gave its fast back field of Stehman, Lopeman and Sanders an opportunity to tear through the Rutgers defense.

Princeton in 13-0 Victory Over Washington and Lee

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Princeton won its third football game of the season today by defeating Washington and Lee 13 to 0, the victory keeping the Nassau sheet clean of liabilities since neither Amherst, Lehigh nor the Generals from Virginia today have been able to take a bite from the Tigers' tough hide.

The Virginians fought doggedly against the smashing Princeton drive and but for a mental lapse probably would have escaped with only one touchdown against them. The Tigers got the jump on the boys from the Shenandoah Valley by scoring one touchdown in the firse period before the visitors had found their way about the field. This represented the difference until the third period when the Generals gave the home team the ball in scoring distance without any effort on the part of the Tigers.

The Generals held the ball too long when they waited until the fourth down to kick and when the punt failed to materialize Princeton got the ball and a touchdown with it.

PENN BEATEN BY STATE, 20-0

Conquerors of Brown Are Outplayed in All Branches.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—A ferocious Penn State Lion came out of Nittany Mountain to humble the confident University of Pennsylvania Eleven, 20 to 0, in their annual encounter today at Franklin Field before 65,000 persons

It was a far different State Team from the one which lost last week to Bucknell. With the odds against him, Coach Bezdek sent his Penn State warriors into the fray to avenge a 3-to-0 defeat last year and incidentally, to give their ancient rivals the worst lacing they have suffered in several years.

While State's gridders outplayed the Red and Blue in nearly every department of the game, it was their forward passes added to Penn's numerous fumbles that sounded the death knell of the Red and Blue and gave Penn State its first victory here since 1923.

Harnas made the first touchdown on a line plunge after long runs by Capt. Roepke and Lungren, but the other two scores were the result of a swift and well-directed aerial attack. With the ball on Penn's 40-yard line early in the final period, Roepke tossed a long pass to Lesko, who carried it over for the second score.

A few moments later Roepke shot another forward to Lungren, and he carried the ball to Penn's 8-yard line. Hamas made 7 yards through the line then Roepke crashed through for the touchdown.

After missing the first, Roepke kicked two placements for the extra points.

Pauli, Scull and Shober, Penn backs who were towers of offense in Pennsylvania's 14-to-6 victory over Brown, last Saturday, were taken out early in the game because of injuries.

The line-up and summary:

Harvard's Passes Defeat Holy Cross Gridmen, 14-6

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 15 (A.P.). A vastly improved Harvard eleven, which, in addition, was in a fighting mood, turned back Holy Cross in their annual meeting in the Harvard Stadium today and won by the score of 14 to 6.

A crowd exceeding 45,000 persons witnessed a thrilling contest, marked by brilliant runs and dazzling aerial work. It was Harvard's effective use of the pass, both forward and lateral, and the Crimson's equally effective aerial defense that decided the battle in favor of the Horween team.

The Crimson showed smarter football than it displayed against Purdue last week, and opened with a penetrating attack that resulted in a touchdown early in the opening period.

Coach Arnold Horween departed from a long-established custom when he started Art French, a good ground gainer, at quarterback instead of using a man whose main duty was to run the team, as was the case on many other Harvard teams. With four good offen-

Temple U. Smothered By Dartmouth Drive

Hanover, N. H., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—The Dartmouth Eleven today smothered the "wonder team" of Temple University, 47 to 8, showing late season form in all departments of their game. Temple was held to four first downs.

Lane was the individual star of the game, scoring five touchdowns. Temple's score came in the final period when Bonner picked up a fumble and ran 87 yards for the touchdown.

a touchdown. After taking a pass, Ranford broke away for a 15-yard run and later made first down on Notre Dame's 3-yard line. A double pass, Hannegan to Spring, netted the remaining distance, and the first touchdown of the game. Hannegan missed the try for point.

Navy's touchdown was the signal for Rockne to extract his second team from the game and insert his regulars except Flanagan. The second quarter was not so eventful, but neither team was able to score. Flanagan twice squirmed through the Navy line and around the ends for long gains, but within the 20-yard mark Navy always was able to make a stand. Capt. Hannegan of Navy blocked down a pass near the end of the half that barely failed of completion and would have resulted in a score for Notre Dame.

Taking the kick-off at the start of the second half, Navy was unable to gain on rushes by Lloyd and Clifton, and Lloyd was twice thrown for a loss by Notre Dame forwards. On his attempt to punt from his own 20-yard line, Lloyd failed to get the kick away in time.

Fredericks, Notre Dame center, who throughout the contest was a bulwark in the line, rushed through the Navy forwards at the snap of the ball and thew his body in front of Lloyd's kick. The ball bounded near the Navy sidelines, and the first to reach it was Walsh. A haphazard interference formed quickly and Walsh, chiefly through his own doggedness, flung off two tackles to make the remaining 10 yards to a touchdown. Dahman's kick was wide, and the score was tied at 6-6.

Rockne's trickery asserted itself later in the third quarter, when Notre Dame scored the touchdown that gave the team the lead. Lloyd punted to Notre Dame's 30-yard line, and Flanagan took up an offensive.

On the first play the Notre Dame star broke away around right end. He started slowly, shifted, cut, galloped and jogged down the side lines for a gain of 35 yards to Navy's 35-yard line, being tackled by Schuber, the Navy safety man. He started again and was thrown after a gain of 10 yards. Wynne took the ball for an 8-yard gain and Flanagan was called upon again.

Two rushes by Flanagan placed the ball within 8 yards of a touchdown. Line bucks advanced it 4 more yards and with the goal line 4 yards away and one down to make it in, the burden was upon the Notre Dame backs.

Quarter Back Riley solved the situation. A trick was the thing. The ball was snapped and the great Flanagan hit the line. He was stopped at the point of scrimmage by anxious Navy forwards. But he didn't have the ball. Riley had not given him the ball, but himself had taken it and a dazed Navy team looked up to find Riley over the line, untouched by a Navy hand. The trick had worked and although Dahman missed the kick, Notre Dame led 12 to 6.

Virtually helpless on the offensive since the touchdown in the first quarter, Navy made a strenuous, but unavailing bid to score near the end of the third period. Arthur Spring was sent into the line-up by Coach Ingram and he reeled off three short gains near midfield. He then threw a tremendous pass to Smith, who was downed on Notre Dame's 40-yard line after a 40-yard gain.

Spring made 6 yards, but Bauer failed to gain in two attempts and Navy's scoring chance was dissipated when Bauer's long pass grounded over the goal line.

A stalwart Notre Dame line regained

HURLING IDOL AT END OF CAREER

Star of Nats for 21 Years May Enter Business World.

The crepe was hanging on the door of President Griffith's office last night and the owner of the Washington Club acted as though he had lost his best friend. "Walter was a great pitcher and a great fellow personally. He is a credit to the game and a credit to the Washington Club, to which he has given his best at all times. I hate the thought that Walter will not be with us next season but he asked for his release and I felt that his services with the Washington Club entitled him to it."

Griffith's letter to Johnson, dated yesterday, promising the pitcher his release as requested, follows:

"Dear Walter: In pursuance of your conversation with me of yesterday, in which you requested that the Washington American League Baseball Club give you your unconditional release, I wish to say that, while it will not seem natural to me, nor, I imagine, to the public, to look at a Washington ball team without you on it, I, of course, feel it my duty to grant your request, especially in view of the fact that you state you have many business propositions offered you which you desire to consider at this time.

"You state to me that you believe your efficiency as a pitcher on the Washington Club is practically at an end and that, rather than remain here and attempt to carry on, you think it to our advantage, as well as to your best interests, to be free to invest your money in and probably manage some ball club which would assure your future in the game. This is only in keeping with the great, honest spirit of sportsmanship which you have always displayed during your basbeall career.

"I deeply regret that our day of parting association has arrived, and I am granting your request solely with the belief that it is being of service to you.

"Assuring you that I will use my best efforts to secure waivers that you know are necessary for an unconditional release, and wishing you all the luck in the world, I am, yours most sincerely, CLARK C. GRIFFITH, President."

Contrary to general belief, there is such a thing as sentiment in baseball, and none of the other clubs in the two big leagues are likely to hold up the request for waivers on the big pitcher. Johnson's diamond career has been such

OSMAND WINS LAUREL FEATURE IN STRETCH DRIVE

Black Maria Loses by Neck

Euphrates Noses Out Speedy Prince in Third Event.

Special to The Washington Post.

LAUREL RACE TRACK, Oct. 15.—Joseph E. Widener's 3-year-old Osmand and W. R. Coe's Black Maria staged a great stretch battle in the running of the $10,000 added Laurel Handicap here this afternoon, which Osmand won by a neck. Ridden by Jockey E. Sande and making practically all of the pace, Osmand displayed splendid courage when called on for a final effort in the last 20 yards.

There was a bit of delay at the post, and Workman, prejudicing the start, bounded away a length in front of his filed with Macaw when the barrier was sprung. Sande immediately got busy with Osmand and, in the run around the turn, moved up stoutly and was on equal terms with the Whitney racer as they straightened out on the back stretch. Then he drew away, and, passing the half-mile pole, was a length and a half to the good.

Black Maria, who broke slowly, was a trailer the first three furlongs. Then she began to wear down the gap that separated her from the leaders and at the turn for home Cotiletti slipped through next the rail and moved up with a rush. He was within a length of Osmand at the furlong pole and 50 yards from the finish it looked as if the mare had Osmand beaten.

Sande then drew his whip, and when he struck Osmand with it a couple of times the Widener colt bounded away, gaining a neck advantage in a couple of strides. Macaw was third, beaten a length, for the place, and then followed Canter, a head in front of Valorous.

The stake had a gross value of $14,175, the winner's portion of which was $10,700.

It was a wonderful gathering that turned out to witness the sport, the attendance being by far the largest of the meeting. There were many visitors from New York in the clubhouse throng, long distance races were featured and two of the events were at a mile and a quarter.

A rousing finish came with the running of the third race, when Euphrates just managed to last long enough to nose out Speedy Prince. Moses was third three lengths away. The conditions called for a dash of a mile and a quarter. Fretwell was again made favorite and once more he failed his backers, the finish finding him sixth in a field of eight.

Bluemont started out like a winner. He was full of run and, going to the first turn, led his field by a length. He retained this advantage until nearing the half-mile pole where Euphrates caught and passed him. Euphrates was in hand entering the home stretch but in the final furlong tired and had to be hard ridden to stall off Speedy Prince's challenge. Moses had a lot of bad racing luck due in a measure to poor handling. Fretwell was never able to improve his position, although Morris kept hustling him along in an effort to do so.

James Rowe, jr., saddled his second winner of the afternoon for the Harry Payne Whitney stable when he sent Groucher to the post in the Edgewater Handicap. This was a 6-furlong dash for 2-year-olds in which War Whoop was a well-played favorite.

Sande had the mount on the latter and the Glen Riddle colt flattered his backers for a few seconds when he took the lead soon after the start. Before they had gone a sixteenth, however, Groucher had caught him and the Whitney youngster drew away without effort rounding the far turn, where he opened up three lengths on his field. He was setting a fast pace but in the run through the home stretch he began to shorten his stride and at the end Workman was forced to rouse him to the utmost to stall off Toro, who closed in resolute fashion. The latter just failed to make it and was beaten out a head. House Girl was third and the favorite, War Whoop, last.

The sixth race, which called for a journey over the mile and a quarter route, was won by Comet, who beat Clear Sky out a neck after a hard stretch drive. Shadowdale was the one to make the early pace and, with Comet in close pursuit, he showed the way until well around the far turn where Comet and Clear Sky both moved up. Comet got his head in front before entering home stretch, but Clear Sky hung on with determination. Both horses battled it out all the last furlong with both Goodwin and Fishman riding like demons, but Comet proved the gamer of the two. Wheatstick was third, beaten a length and half for the pace.

A dozen platers went to the post in the first race, a dash of six furlongs under claiming conditions. Leatherwood was again made the favorite and again proved a disappointment. He had the advantage of having Workman as rider. In the early stages, Leatherwood outran his opposition but, as in his previous efforts, he weakened after going half a mile.

Flora M. was the winner. She beat Gymkhana out a length and a half in a driving finish. Flora M., a usual fast starter, was slow to begin and was outrun in the first quarter. Rounding the far turn, she moved up strong, but was carried wide entering the home-stretch. Under a rousing finish, she came [illegible] and was going away at the [illegible] more, a long shot, was third.

The Whitney colors were carried to an easy victory by Purr in the second, when she beat Marsh Violet out two lengths and a half. Purr began none too fast and was outrun until rounding the far turn where she went around her field with a good burst of speed. She caught and passed Tokio at the furlong pole and from there to the end was in hand.

Tokio curled up under pressure. Sande got her away well and at one time she had a two-length lead. When Purr challenged, she quit and Marsh Violet beat her out in easy fashion by two lengths for second place.

FLORA M. much the best, followed the leaders to the turn out of the backstretch, came around on the outside and easily drew away in the stretch run. GYMKHANA, forward factor from the start, held on well under pressure to outstay STANMORE at the end. The latter raced well back in the early stages, came through on the inside entering the stretch, closed full of courage. LAWLESS, shuffled back at the start, closed an immense gap.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EUPHRATES, $14.80, $6.20, $4.20; SPEEDY PRINCE, $4.70, $3.20; MOSES, $3.20.

EUPHRATES wore down pacemaker at the half mile pole, drew clear rounding the turn and held on well under hard driving to barely last. SPEEDY PRINCE went up with a rush rounding the backstretch, bore out slightly in the stretch run, was wearing the leader down and would have won in a few more strides. MOSES, in close quarters all first half, was taken to the outside, closed some ground, but could not reach the winner.

GROUCHER WINNING RACE FROM TORO.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,500. For 2-year-olds. The Edgewater Handicap. Start good. Won driving. Place same. Went to post at 3:25. Off at 3:27. Winner, ch. c. (2), by Whiskbroom II—Calamity Jane. Trained by J. Rowe, jr. Owner, H. P. Whitney. Value to winner, $1,000; second, $325; third, $227. Time, 0:23, 0:47 2-5, 1:13 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GROUCHER, $6.20, $3.70, $3.30; TORO, $3.80, $2.80; HOUSE GIRL, $4.30.

GROUCHER raced WAR WHOOP into early submission, drew clear on the turn, but was ridden out to the limit to stall off TORO. The latter rated along behind the pace till called upon rounding into the homestretch, came to the outside, closed gamely under hard hand ride and was wearing the winner down at the end. HOUSE GIRL trailed for the first threee furlongs, came through in the middle of the bunch entering the homestretch and closed full of run. CATSPLAY broke forward, but lacked speed to hold position

FIFTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $10,000 added. For all ages. The Laurel. Start good. Won driving. Place same. Went to post at 3:59. Off at 4:01. Winner, ch. g. (3), by Sweeper—Armanda. Trained by W. Coyne. Owner, J. E. Widener. Value to winner, $10,700; second, $2,000; third, $1,000; fourth, $250. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47, 1:13 3-5, 1:38 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OSMAND, $5.40, $3.30, $2.70; BLACK MARIA, $4.40, $3.00; MACAW, $2.70.

OSMAND broke well, took command straightening out in the backstretch, made all own pace, stood repeated challenges to hold on gamely at the end to outlast BLACK MARIA. The latter, shuffled back at the start, worked way through the middle of the bunch on the turn, came to the inside in the stretch run, responded with splendid courage and was steadily wearing the winner down. MACAW broke in motion, rushed clear of the bunch, was then taken in hand, rated behind the pace, came to the middle of the track in the stretch drive, closed some ground when called upon, but hung in the final drive.

COMET BARELY SCORING IN SIXTH RACE.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and one-quarter. Purse, $1,500. For 3-year-olds and up; claiming. Start good. Won driving. Place same. Went to post at 4:33. Off at 4:34. Winner, ch. g. (4), by Gnome—Star Flight. Trained by P. E. Fitzgerald. Owner, J. H. Shea. Value to winner, $1,000, second, $300; third, $200. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:49 4-5, 1:15 2-5, 1:41 3-5, 2:06 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—COMET, $6.50, $4.30, $3.00; CLEAR SKY, $4.70, $3.70; WHEATSTICK, $5.30.

COMET, rated along under heavy restraint behind the pacemaker to the turn from the backstretch, assumed command, but was under hard urging all the last quarter to outlast CLEAR SKY. The latter also raced under restraint till called upon, came wide entering the stretch, closed full of courage and was wearing the leader down at the end. WHEATSTICK, closer than usual in the early stages, raced down on the inner rail most of the trip, made game effort in the final drive and held SIR LEONID safe at the end.

REALIZATION TAKES HONORS IN FINAL.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and one-sixteenth. Purse, $1,300. For 3-year-olds and up; claiming. Start good. Won handily. Place driving. Went to post at 5:05. Off at 5:07. Winner, J. J. McCafferty's ch. c. (3), by Flittergold—Sweet Lady. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $900; second, $250; third, $150. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:48 3-5, 1:15, 1:40 3-5, 1:47 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—REALIZATION, $18.00, $10.00, $6.50; TAZEWELL, $5.90, $4.40; IZETTA, $5.30.

REALIZATION took command at the start, made all the pace to win in clever fashion. TAZEWELL, rated along till called upon rounding the turn, came to the outside to secure clear passage, closed gamely to outgame IZETTA. The latter followed the pace under mild restraint, but flattened out when called upon.

Foley's Pass Nets First Score

Circles Left End in 3d Quarter to Clinch Game.

By ARTHUR A. HEYWOOD.

RAY FOLEY, who out Brookland way they will tell you cuts quite a figure in the doings of the Catholic University Football Team, was running true to form yesterday. Hardly before the fans were settled in their seats to witness a game between Catholic University and St. John's, of Brooklyn, N. Y., Foley tossed a pass from the 20-yard line to Schmidt, for a touchdown and circled left end to add the extra point, later in the third quarter he cut through right tackle from the 20-yard strip, to give Catholic University a 13-to-0 victory.

The visiting St. John's Team was suffering from some sort of an anti-scoring complex. Badly outplayed in the first quarter, St. John's came back in the second period, and on two different occasions drove down the field to within a shade of the Catholic University goal, and in the last quarter duplicated this stunt, but all three threats to score were doomed to failure.

That St. John's, after a laborious afternoon of toil, was forced to accept the losing end of the score was in no small measure due to the excellent defensive work of Du Four, the Catholic University left tackle.

On the first serious threat of the visiting team to tally, the ball had been advanced down the field to the 1-yard line.

Reardon, the St. John's quarterback, got an idea that through the enemy's left tackle would be an ideal place to plunge through for a touchdown. His idea was only partly right. He failed to reckon with Du Four. Fourth down, one yard to go, but at that point Du Four stepped into the picture and he stopped the St. John's player before he stepped over the line of scrimmage.

Two brilliant spots in the St. John's offensive and defensive display were supplied by Gallagher and a rugged bow-headed back, by the name of "Speed" Margolies. Gallagher, at center, played a brilliant defensive game, while Margolies, a 19-year-old lad, just out of High School, with the team his first week, covered himself with glory in his first college game as he romped over the chalk marks like a demon. He was a constant threat to the Catholic University team, with his passing and brilliant open field running. Time and time again he would make a stab off tackle and finding no hole, would cut around end to add plenty of yardage. He dropped back to pass many times and finding no one open, he would reverse the field and dash for 15 and 20 yards.

It was a break of the game that gave Catholic University its opportunity to tally its first seven points in the opening minute of play.

Tierney kicked off to Reardon, of the visiting team and Reardon took but a few steps when he fumbled the ball and Harvey, of the C. U. team, fell on it. Valevitch, fullback, bumped through St. John's line to the 10-yard strip, which provided the proper setting for Foley to toss his aforementioned pass to Schmidt.

At the beginning of the second quarter, St. John's were in possession of the ball in midfield, the closest it had been thus far to Catholic University's territory. Reardon sneaked through the line for a long gain, but the visitors were held for downs and had to kick. Catholic University received the ball and kicked back on the first down. It was then that Margolies threw a 15-yard pass to Reardon, an 8-yard pass to Blie and a 15-yard heave to Gold. Margolies hit right tackle, putting the ball on the 6-yard line. An offside penalty on Catholic University, put the ball on the 1-yard line. It was at this point that Du Four stopped the final attempt to score and a second attempt a few minutes later, also from the 1-yard line, was broken up again by Du Four.

Foley's 30-yard return of a punt early in the third quarter, paved the way for the Brooklander's second touchdown. Foley added the touchdown, when he pushed through right tackle and cut back to the left for a 10-yard run.

The final quarter was productive of the most brilliant play of the game, a long pass, from Foley to Long, from the 48-yard line, which was called back because Long had stepped out of bounds before receiving it, and St. John's dying gesture to score. The latter occured when the visitors gained possession of the ball in midfield on a blocked punt, only to advance the ball to the 10-yard line, where a pass thrown over the goal line was knocked down by a Catholic University player.

Washington U. Crew Coach 24 Years Old

Seattle, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—By signing Alvin Ulbrickson for four years as varsity crew coach, the University of Washington has combined the distinction of having the youngest varsity crew in the major collegiate rowing world with that of having the youngest coach.

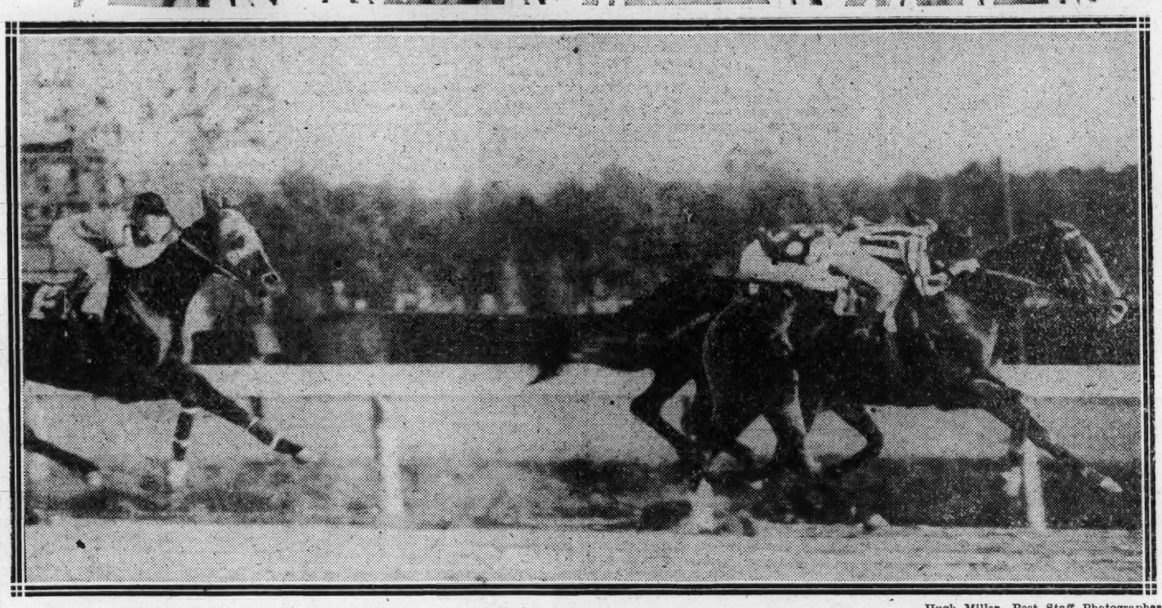

Ulbrickson is 24. He rowed stroke for the huskies last season.

MIDGETS TO PLAY.

The Plansky Midgets will play the Holy Trinity Midgets today on the Georgetown College field at 12:30 o'clock. Johnny Boyle, who has been out of the Plansky lineup, due to a broken arm, will be at his old post again. For games with the Planskys, call West 642.

Havre de Grace holds a unique place in the turf world. Besides claiming one of the finest racing plants in the country, this little Maryland town on the banks of the Susquehanna River has given to racing the Mergler clan—four brothers, who have made their mark on major tracks. At top the Merglers, left to right, are: Merrit, 17 years; John, 18 years; Donald, 20 years; Charles (steeplechase rider), 27 years. possession of the ball at the start of the fourth period by holding Navy for downs. With 2 yards to go on the last down, Bauer failed to make the distance in a run from punt formation and Navy surrendered the ball to Rochne's team on the Navy 45-yard line.

Then Niemic engineered the thrust that resulted in the final Notre Dame touchdown. Chevigney gained 7 yards by a slice off tackle. Niemic hurtled a long pass to Walsh, who was not downed until Navy's 15-yard line had been reached.

A shift play which culminated in a pass to Niemic gained 5 yards, placing the ball within 10 yards of a goal. Niemic hit the line for a yard. On the next play he skirted right end, flinging off three of the Navy secondary defense to make the remaining 9 yards to a touchdown. He kicked the point.

Bustitutes found their way into the game in droves thereafter, Ingram sending in his players in a vain attempt to find an offensive weapon and Rochne for no reason except to give all his boys a chance to play. Navy was never able to pierce Notre Dame territory again and Rochne's substitutes could make little impression upon the Navy defense.

Johnson, in 21 Years With Nats, Holds Host of Pitching Records

WALTER JOHNSON, who was born in Humboldt, Kans., on November 6, 1887, started his twenty-first season with the Nationals on August 2 last, when Washington fans turned out of pay him homage in no uncertain manner. In addition to receiving a large purse, made up by his admirers and the Washington and Detroit Clubs, any number of gifts, and having a monument erected at the Clark Griffith Stadium in his honor, the veteran pitcher was presented with the first "distinguished service medal" ever awarded by the American League.

The veteran mound ace has entered baseball's mythical hall of fame by two routes. On July 1, 1920, at Boston, he pitched the only no-hit, no-run game of the year by downing the Red Sox, 1 to 0, while at the end of the 1924 season, after his great work had done much toward giving Washington its first American League pennant, he was voted the "most valuable player to this team" of that season.

Johnson, known as the "smokeball king" while at the peak of his career, specialized in strike-outs, and for twelve seasons he led all other pitchers in this respect. Eight of these were consecutive ones, 1910 to 1919, inclusive, while he also topped the list in 1921, 1923 and 1924.

For six seasons, 1913-14-15-16-18-24, he led the league with most victories while he had the lowest earned run allowance in 1913 and 1924, during which years he also was first in percentage of games won and lost.

Among the other records established by him are:

1908—Won three games on successive days (against New York).

1910—Fanned three successive pinch hitters (Hauser, Hartsel and Lapp, of Athletics).

1911—Fanned four players in one inning (against Boston).

1913—Pitched 56 consecutive scoreless innings.

1915—Fanned Donie Bush, now managing the Pirates, and two other pinch hitters (against Detroit).

1917—Retired side on three pitched balls (against St. Louis).

Johnson has many other records to his credit. His long service has helped him in several respects, such as most years in the league and with the same club, most games pitched and most games won. He also is credited with the greatest number of strike-outs and the most years at the top in this respect. The only record to which he can not point with pride was hung up in 1910, when he was charged with 21 wild pitches.

Johnson did not get a chance to participate in a world's series until 1924, after he had been pitching for seventeen years. Then, after apparently having failed, he faced the Giants in a relief role and was credited with the victory in the game which gave the Nationals their only world's title.

He pitched exceptional ball against the Pirates in winning two games of the 1925 championship set, but, handicapped by bad weather and a "charley horse," suffered in a previous game, was unable to win the seventh and deciding game.

At the Tampa training camp last spring, a blow from the bat of Joe Judge laid the "Old Master" low, breaking his left leg and keeping him out of action until Decoration Day, when he performed brilliantly to beat the Red Sox. This appeared to be a mere flash in the pan, however, for he did not have much success thereafter, ending the year with a record of five victories and as many defeats.

COLLEGIANS SEEK GAMES.

a great one and he has been such a credit to the game that all, no doubt, will agree that he is entitled to his release under the circumstances.

Of course, if waivers were asked for some reason other than at Johnson's request, the magnates might balk at granting them.

The Washington club owner has acted impersonally in his prompt aquiescence to the Old Master's request, for he probably could sell the veteran pitcher for quite a fancy figure. His attitude, however, is that the Nats owe Johnson at least this much in view of his past services.

It is unnecessary to tell Washington fans just what these "past services" have been. Johnson has starred with the Nationals since he first joined them, in 1907. When at the peak of his pitching form, he had a consistently poor team behind him; otherwise he no doubt would have hung up many records which have stood forever. At that, he is credited with many, especially in connection with strike-outs, which will stand the test of all time.

Johnson unquestionably leaves the national game with more friends than any other athlete of the sports world. With all the glory that was his, he never lost his modest and unassuming manner and is the idol of fans and players alike. His private life has been the same open book as that on the diamond and his record, both as a citizen and a player, will stand as more of a monument to baseball than the one to be erected by the fans in the Griffith Stadium as part of his twentieth anniversary celebration, held last August in the great pitcher's honor.

Newark Club Will Offer Johnson Manager's Berth

Newark, N. J., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—The Newark Sunday Call will say in a copyrighted story tomorrow that Paul Block, publisher of a number of newspapers and recent purchaser of the Newark International League Baseball Club, will make Walter Johnson an offer to manage the team next season.

The paper quotes Mr. Block as saying he obtained a verbal promise tonight from Johnson through a mutual friend in Washington, that the pitcher would not consider any proposals for next season until he had conferred with Mr. Block. It was added that Block would confer with Johnson Monday or Tuesday.

Johnson Holds Phillies Hitless in Four Innings

Warrenton, Va., Oct. 15.—A crowd of 1,200 fans witnessed a closely-fought ball game this afternoon, the barnstorming Philadelphia National League team bowing, 4 to 2, to a picked Warrenton team augmented by Walter Johnson, Joe Judge, Sam Rice and Ollie Tucker. The Old Master went the first four innings for the locals and did not allow anything that resembled a hit, fanning six during his stay in the box. He struck out Cy Williams, the home run king of the National League, on his two appearances against him.

If there is anything wrong with Johnson it was not noticable, and he had the National League entry in the palm of his hand during his stay on the mound. Weaver and Pearson, of the local team, finished the game between them and pitched good ball, holding the heavy hitting Phillies to five hits, including a three-bagger and two-bagger by Mokam and a healthy two-bagger by Cy Williams.

period when, after taking the ball on their own 20-yard mark they marched down the field, only to lose the ball at the Rutgers goal line on downs.

In the final period, Tex Rosen, Rutgers' quarter back was forced out of the game by injuries, and Gordinier replaced him. With Rutgers in possession of the ball in mid-field, Gordinier launched an aerial attack. Several successful tosses, aided by penalties brought the ball to the visitors' 20-yard line, when Lopeman intercepted a Scarlet pass and raced 80 yards before he was downed on the Rutgers' 10-yard line as the game ended.

Penn Eleven Invades Chicago U. Saturday

Philadelphia, Oct. 15.—For the first time since 1901 the University of Pennsylvania football team will invade Chicago next Saturday to meet the University of Chicago in the first of two games to be played in the Windy City in successive seasons.

Pennsylvania and Chicago have met six times since 1898, and the Maroon has yet to register a triumph. Four games were played from 1898 to 1901. In 1925 and 1926 the series was resumed when Stagg brought his elevens to Franklin Field.

Last year Pennsylvania scored a 27-to-0 triumph over the Maroon and the year prior the count was 7 to 0.

APACHE CLUB OPENS WITH ABERDEEN

THE Apaches, challengers for the unlimited football title, will open their 1927 season today at Union Park, Fifteenth and H streets northeast, and may get a chance to show their caliber against the All-American players.

Elmer Oliphant, who won a national gridiron award while at West Point, will lead the Sixty-first Field Artillery Eleven, of Aberdeen, Md., against the Little Indians starting at 3 o'clock.

Providing Coach Ty Rauber decides to play, some lively action is promised. Rauber, who starred at Washington and Lee, may get into the competition if Oliphant plays. At least this was the report last night.

Regardless of whether or not Rauber is in the line-up, the Apaches will present what their followers term as their best team in history. With the largest squad ever to compete for positions, the Apaches have more than a month of hard practice behind them.

Rauber, who has heard reports that Aberdeen is bringing several officers, who starred at Army, is planning on starting his strongest combination.

$61,000 PAID BY GRAYSON FOR COLT

Brother of Call Boy, Derby Winner, to Be Imported.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—The British Blood Stock Agency concluded an important thoroughbred purchase at Newmarket today. Acting for the American sportsman, Admiral Gary T. Grayson, of Washington, E. E. Coussell purchased from the estate of the late Frank Curzon a 2-year-old chestnut colt by Grand Parade, out of Comedienne, dam of Call Boy, winner of the Epsom Derby this year for 12,000 guineas, or aproximately $61,000.

The colt will be shipped to New York at the earliest opportunty. He will be trained for the Kentucky Derby and then retired to the Grayson stud in Virginia.

Admiral Grayson's colt, as yet unnamed, started three times this season, winning two races and running unplaced in the other. In his first start he finished ninth in the New Stakes at Ascot, a 5-furlong dash. A short time after at Sandown Park he won the British Dominion 2-year-old plate at 5 furlongs by two lengths, and in his last start he was victorious in the Exeter Stakes, over the Exeter Course of 6 furlongs at Newmarket.

LAUREL RACE NOTES

Special to The Washington Post.

LAUREL RACE TRACK, Oct. 15.—At the conclusion of the Maryland meeting, Jockey R. Workman will report to Mose Goldblatt at New Orleans. Goldblatt is handling the Western division of the Harry Payne Whitney Stable. The stable will be shipped from New Orleans to Miami at the conclusion of the Jefferson meeting.

William Garth shipped the two-year-old Rooney to his farm at Charlottesville, Va., where he will be turned out. Two of the Samuel Ross platers came out of their recent races in bad shape. Lassa and Mariner both bowed and have been put away for the season.

Forty Love was not very long in the J. H. Shea Stable. The horse arrived from the Audley Farm yesterday and P. E. Fitzgerald, acting for Shea, disposed of him to F. M. Murphy. The latter raced Arascid with much success in Canada last summer, but lost him through the claiming route the final day of the Dorval meeting.

William Garth left for Charlottesville, Va., yesterday to try out the big band of yearlings he has at his farm. Jockey J. C. Mergler accompanied him. Mergler and Garth plan to return on Tuesday.

Harvey Boyle, who is at the Audley Farms, breaking yearlings, shipped a draft of horses up to Miller Henderson. There were ten in the lot, and four of them were at the gate yesterday morning.

After Bill Cosgrave ran such a disappointing race the other day E. R. Bradley sent Dr. Henry J. McCarthy over to the stable with instructions to unsex the son of Black Servant.

It develops that the plater Trapdale did not break his leg the other morning. Instead he tore the ligaments loose from his fetlock joint, and the injured member has been placed in a plaster cast. Sam Louis gave the horse to W. R. Midgley, and the latter had him transferred by van to his Melvale farm, back of Druid Hill Park, in Baltimore County.

Jockey D. Mergler has severed his connection with the M. J. Cremen stable.

Frank Capra, who was making the engagements of several riders here, left for his home in Texas yesterday morning, where he was called on account of illness of his mother.

The old rogue, Joy Smoke, was at the barrier yesterday morning wearing blinkers. He broke well and went six furlongs from the barrier in 1:17. Blinkers will be part of his equipment in the future. Tokio, in the Glenn Riddle stable, is another that will have blinkers on in his future races. He, too, was at the gate bearing blinkers and broke well. Eric refused to leave the barrier and will probably be put away for the remainder of the season.

of a racing car, but the body of a truck, assumed the burden of carrying the ball for Princeton in the early stages of the game.

The game was not many minutes old when Wittmer scored the first Princeton touchdown. Washington and Lee punted to its own 30-yard line and Wittmer practically took charge of the situation from that point until he scored.

With the exception of a short pass to Miles, he made all the gaining plays. Spotts jumped up and blocked Baruch's kick for the extra point.

The second touchdown came in the third period. Washington and Lee had the ball inside its 20-yard line and put off the evil day of kicking until the last moment fourth down. Then Lott could not get the ball in position to punt it and was forced to run. He was downed on the 23-yard line, where the ball went over. Owen took the ball from Baruch and ran 13 yards. Wittmer made five yards in two plays, and then Owen went over for the touchdown. The extra point was made when the Tigers caught the Generals flatfooted, and Baruch passed to Wittmer.

PLAY-BY-PLAY ACCOUNT NOTRE DAME VICTORY

BALTIMORE, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Navy, taking full advantage of the "breaks" of the game, crushed over a touchdown in the first five minutes of play. Taking the ball after an exchange of punts on the 30-yard line, the Middies pushed to midfield, when the Hoosier right end interfered with a forward pass.

Hannegan, flashy Navy quarter, dodged through left tackle for 15 yards, and Bauer, in a single smash, punched through to Notre Dame's 5-yard line. After Ransford thrice failed to break through center, Spring, a substitute halfback, raced around Notre Dame's left end for the score. The try for point after touchdown failed.

The sudden Navy assault brought the "shock troops" of the Rockne men back to the bench and the Notre Dame veterans took up the task of overhauling the powerful Middie crew. Wynne went in at fulback, Riley at quarter, and Dahman at left half. Niemic completed the quartet. The line also underwent several changes.

The smashing drive of Rockne's regulars carried relentlessly through the Navy forward line and through the air from midfield to the Middie 25-yard line before Bauer intercepted a Notre Dame pass. Niemic, Wynne, and Dahman had punched the ball almost to the Navy doorstep after a 17-yard pass, Riley to Voedisch, made Notre Dame's first down on Navy's 38-yard line. It was Navy's ball when the period ended.

When Navy tossed Lloyd, 200-pound back-field ace, into the fray to start the second period, Notre Dame sent Christy Flanagan, shining light of the Hoosier offense, to oppose him. Flanagan opened up with a 15-yard toss to Walsh that made a first down on his own 45-yard line. Three times Christy thrust at the Navy forwards and made another first down on Navy's 34-yard stripe.

After tossing three successive forward passes to his ends, Flanagan finally was stopped by the desperate Navy forwards on the Sailor 24-yard mark. Navy's punt to midfield checked the Rockne men a moment, then Flanagan slipped through tackle for 15 and, with Wynne, reached the Middie 25-yard stripe for Notre Dame's fourth straight first down of the period.

The sturdy defense of the Middies again prevailed, and Notre Dame was forced to yield the ball on the Navy 20-yard line. An offside penalty forced Lloyd to kick from his 15-yard mark to Notre Dame at midfield just as the half ended. Flanagan thrice failed to complete forward passes that would have carried over the Navy goal line.

Notre Dame tied the score shortly after the third period opened when Walsh, right end, scooped up a blocked punt and raced 42 yards over the Navy goal line. The attempt at drop-kick for point after touchdown failed. Poliskey, giant Notre Dame, blocked the kick.

The score came after a punting duel in which Lloyd slowly gained yardage with long hoists. The Notre Dame forwards, breaking through steadily, finally caught the Middie star before he could get his loft away, Flanagan taking the next kick-off on his own 32-yard line, raced almost through the Navy defense to the Middie 35-yard stripe before being downed and the Navy backs again were to the wall.

Again the try for goal failed.

Thrilling football sprinkled the remainder of the period, but neither eleven could score. Spring, gallant pony back of the Navy forces, led a Sailor bid that carried to Notre Dame's 32-yard stripe, during which he ran back a kick-off 32 yards, tossed a 35-yard pass to Smith, substitute end, and several times punctured the Rockne line. When the attack petered out, Niemic, Notre Dame speedster, provided the thrills with runs of 25 and 10 yards before close of the third quarter.

Taking the ball from Navy on downs at the Blue 45-yard line, Notre Dame smashed to another score on a series of line smashes aided by a 15-yard pass from Niemic to Walsh that brought the ball to Navy's 12-yard mark. Niemic then jammed through the Navy left tackle for the touchdown on three successive plays and ran the Notre Dame total to 19 by drop-dicking the point after touchdown.

The teams battled on even terms during the remainder of the period, Navy failing to penetrate the Notre Dame defense but once with a flock of passes while the Westerners' crushing line attack lost momentum through the appearance of many substitutes. One wild Navy toss of 40 yards brought the ball to Notre Dame's 36-yard line at the close of play.

Howard U. Eleven Beats Morehouse, 14-7

Special to The Washington Post.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 15.—Howard University's Bison eleven, showing a reversal of form, defeated the strong aggregation from Morehouse College this afternoon, 14 to 7. The game was featured by the playing of Capt. Milfred "Biff" Martin, to whom is attributed the recovery of the morale of the team following its recent disbanding after a controversy with university authorities.

NATIONAL PREPS DRILL.

National Preps, who have entered the 135-pound class of the Capital City League, sponsored by Bill Fiester, practice today at Twenty-second street northwest at 12 o'clock. All players are requested to report.

GRID LEAGUE IN OPENER TODAY

3 Games to Be Played in 135-Pound Section.

WHEN Bill Fiester conceived the idea of organizing a football league for teams in the District and vicinity, many aspiring elevens answered the call to meetings with the result that two sections were formed, schedules made, and playing fields secured.

That the success of the league is assured is indicated by the fact that some of the best outfits in the city will compete for honors. Such teams as the Wintons, Northerns, Fairfeldts, Seat Pleasants and Southern Preps are lined up for play in the 150-pound division, and they will see action on October 23.

The 135-pound section will begin activities today, with the Brooklands meeting the Marions on the Brookland Field at 3 o'clock, the Mohawk Preps and Mercurys on Tidal Basin Field, No. 3, at 3 oclock, and the Linworths engaging the Friendships on Fairlawn Field at 1 o'clock.

The promotion of this series by Fiester is a step to further popularize the sport, and the interest manifested so far by the players and fans alike will no doubt add greatly to the success of the movement.

Lavin Tops Swimmers In Meet at Y. M. C. A.

F. C. Lavin a new comer to Washington swimming circles, won first place in the inuagural weekly handicap meet staged in the Y. M. C. A. pool last night. Lavin amassed 10 points by taking first place in both the 220-yard breast stroke and the 25-yard back stroke.

Mark Coles was second among the field with 7 points by virtue of his victory in the 50-yard free style race and third in the 25-yard back stroke.

50-YARD FREE STYLE—First, M. Coles, time, 26 3-5 seconds; second, Carlton Meyers, 29 3-5 seconds; third, W. K. Mattson, 30 seconds; fourth, W. G. Stephenson, 31 4-5 seconds.

GEORGETOWN BEATEN BY SYRACUSE, 19-TO-6

late in the third quarter, when Nork intercepted a pass and ran to mid-field. A series of short passes, McCabe to Provincial and Nork to McCabe, placed the ball on the 5-yard line. On successive line plunges Nork went through center for a touchdown.

Mooney's attempt for the extra point was blocked.

Syracuse added to its scoring total late in the last quarter, when Winnick smashed through and blocked Mooney's kick and then recovered the ball on the 12-yard mark. From the kick-off following its lone score, Georgetown had been on the defensive throughout. Again, a pass from Maysinger to Goldman carried the ball to the 3-yard line, from where Sebo bolted over on two rushes off guard.

Even in defeat Capt. Grigsby, Carroll and Saur, the bulkwarks of the Georgetown defense, covered themselves with glory. By his all-around defensive play the Georgetown center vied with Barbuti for the hero honors. Carroll and Saur broke through often and brought down ball carriers in their tracks. Nork and Barabas were the outstanding players in the Hilltop back field. Nork's passing was not up to its usual standard, but his other brilliant plays more than overshadowed this fault.

Aerial Attack Turns Tide Of Battle

Barnes Thrills Crowd of 6,000 With 50-Yard Run.

V.M.I. Near 6-Pointer as Whistle Ends First Half.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Oct. 15.—Virginia Military Institute's Eleven, which two weeks ago lost by a lone touchdown to Georgia Tech, admittedly one of the strongest teams in the Southren Conference, was defeated by Virginia here this afternoon, 13 to 8, before a crowd of 6,000.

Both teams played cautiously during the first half, which ended with the score standing 2 to 0 in favor of "The Flying Squadron." Early in the second quarter, following a fine exhibition of putting by Barnes and McCray, the Cavaliers were twice forced to kind out from behind their goal line. On the second occasion Sloan, Virginia back, who had dropped back for a kick, fumbled the ball, but fell on it for a safety.

Virginia launched an overhead attack at the start of the second half, which aided by Hutter's line plunging netted 80 yards and a touchdown, Hushion scoring on a pass from Close. Receiving the kick at the beginning of the final quarter, the Cavaliers started another march down the field, covering 72 yards. A 16-yard pass, Hushion to Close, produced the score, and Capt. Cardwell added an extra point with a placement kick.

Midway the period the Cadet ace, Harnes, electrified the crowd by a brilliant 50-yard run for a touchdown. He had dropped back to make a pass, but, seeing his men covered, started around Virginia's left end. Reversing, he dashed through an open field, knocking off several tacklers.

Virginia attempted eight passes and completed six for a total gain of 93 yards. The longest netted 33 yards. The cadets were successful with one in ten for a gain of 9 yards.

Thornhill and Moss starred on the flanks for the cadets and Oberry put up a slashing game until he was injured.

Alexandria School Grid Teams Active

Alexandria, Va., Oct. 15—Alexandria scholastic teams face extensive schedules during the coming week. Episcopal High will entertain the Fishburne Military Academy on Hoxton Field next Saturday in what promises to be a real test for the Virginia eleven.

Next in line comes the Alexandria High School's meeting with the Fredericksburg High combination Friday. Although the Fredericksburg eleven is not as formidable as other teams met this season, Coach Wilson does not take it lightly and will drill his players all week to prime them for any necessary action. McMenimen and Capt. Travers will probably be out of this game due to injuries received in the Central game last week.

George Mason High School will play the Episcopal High second team Wednesday, and Friday the Washington-Lee High eleven will be met. Coach Camden will devote his entire time in building his defense during practice this week, to carry his team to victory in these two battles.

Pitt Crushes Drake In 32-to-0 Victory

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—The Pitt Panthers, opening up with a relentless offensive that could not be stopped by the Drake Bulldogs, won a 32-to-0 victory in an intersectional game her today.

The invaders charged down the field for two touchdowns in the opening period.

WARWICKS DRILL TODAY.

The newly organized Warwick Preps will hold their initial workout today on the Rosedale field at 10:30 o'clock. All players are requested to report. Games with teams in the 115-pound class are wanted. Write Sid Katznelli, 226½ Twelfth place northeast.

TIGERS VS. CHEVY CHASE.

Alexandria, Va., Oct. 15.—The Tiger A. C., of this city, a newly-organized 135-pound team, will open its season tomorrow in Washington against the Chevy Chase A. C.

CATHOLIC U. STAR IN PLUNGE AGAINST ST. JOHN'S.

Louis Johrden, Post Staff Photographer.

The Brooklyn College Team pounced in a heap upon the Catholic University back field star when he attempted to gain through the line in the second quarter of yesterday's game. Previously Schmidt had caught a forward pass to score one of his team's two touchdowns.

MARYLAND DEFEATS V. P. I. ELEVEN, 13-7

Frank Peake ripped off 12 yards in a jiffy by a beautiful run around end. Looney and McEver dove through for further gains, and it remained for the hard-driving Monk Mattox to tear across the line for the 3 yards which enabled the Tech men to balance the scales.

But the Virginians sought more than a tie score. They wanted victory. Hurriedly Coach Gustafson shot Scotty McArthur into the game in place of McEver. Tech rooters, worked up to a frenzy, gave way to their feelings with a thunderous outburst of cheers as Scotty kicked the extra point from placement that shoved the Gobblers ahead, 7 to 6, and gave Tech backers reason to believe that victory and nothing else was firmly in their grip.

The thrilling, daring comeback of Tech in the final period and exciting 75-yard run of Auggie Roberts were not the only brilliant features of the afternoon. Another dandy lad was Ed Tenny, second string quarter back of the Old Liners. The Maryland board of strategy elected to dispatch him to the scene of activities in the second quarter to supplement Kessler, and Tenny "did his stuff." With the accuracy of a rifleman he saved a pass, labeled 25 yards, to Half Back Smith Snyder, who galloped for all he was worth across the goal for the first touchdown while five Gobblers were pursuing him. It was a beautiful flip, well executed, well timed, and came with such suddenness that the Techmen felt as if they were knocked out by a mighty blow. That was midway in the second quarter. Tenny's try for extra point went low.

It was an irony of fate that Tech, after battling as hard as it did in the third quarter, in the fourth should fall by the way. The Gobblers were terrors in that third quarter. They registered seven first downs in that period and added three more in the fourth.

Maryland, playing "heads-up" ball from the start, was the most consistent and was conceded the better of the two in today's scrap. The Old Liners charged with power and had wonderful broken field runners. Maryland gained 105 yards, as opposed to Tech's 163, but most of the Virginians' gains came in the third quarter, whereas the Terrapins scattered their gains throughout the entire fracas.

The air was the most successful for Maryland. Through this route, the Terrapins played havoc with Tech, Kessler, Thomas, Snyder, Linkous and Roberts all being adept in either receiving or passing. The work of Adams and Capt. Bafford was great in the line for Maryland, while each and every one came in for his share of fine playing. Kessler romped over the field like a veteran, gaining almost at will at times.

"The Four Grenadiers," sometimes called the pony express—McEver, Mattox, Peake and Looney—are a great set of backs. They proved it against Colgate, but against Maryland today the quartet faced a tough assignment, although they elicited salvos of applause by their snappy playing. There is no greater guard in the South than Capt. Buck Miles, of Tech. He was here, there, everywhere. Owen Jones, Richmond boy; Bailey and Petty drove back the attack of the enemy on many occasions.

Today's 13-to-7 victory marked the first time since 1921 that Maryland has beaten the Gobblers in football. Not since 1921, when the V. P. I. lost, 10 to 7, had the Old Liners been successful. There was no Don Rutherford or Paul Robertson to win the game with a dropkick for Tech this afternoon. McArthur tried one, but he failed.

On the field today Maryland outsmarted Tech and looked the best team. Victory over South Carolina, a victim of North Carolina, Maryland came into its own against V. P. I. today.

The Sportswoman

By DOROTHY E. GREENE.

ALTHOUGH this year marked the second World Basketball Free Throw Tournament in which approximately 300,000 girls and boys took part, not a single Washington girl was entered.

The third tournament for the world and national champoinships will take place in January and local sportswomen will be given the opportunity to enter casting their shots on a local floor under the auspices of a local committee.

The present girls' senior championship is held by a girl from the earthquake area of Japan and contestants were entered from seventeen foreign countries and from nearly every State in the United States.

Rules for the tournament this year were translated into eight foreign languages and many countries held national tournaments and sent their scores here. These tournaments among young people of all nations have attracted much interest and are bringing about a wider friendship and understanding although the contests do not bring the players actually together.

Further information regarding the Washington Free Throw Tournament may be secured through this column, care of The Washington Post.

"W" CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS.

Rosalie Reed, a member of the senior class of Western High School, has been elected president of the "W" Club, the honor athletic organization of the school. Only outstanding students and athletes are accorded the privilege of heading the club, and Miss Reed is well qualified for the position.

Other officers selected to serve with Miss Reed are Jane Mapes, a senior, vice president; Patty Joyce, junior, secretary; Virginia Sheffield, junior, treasurer, and Edith Hamilton, sophomore, sergeant-at-arms.

The first activity of the club will be a welcoming tea for the freshmen to be given at the school in the near future, according to Miss Belle Meyers, physical director and faculty advisor of the club. Marion Lum was named chairman of the entertainment committee, and Jane Mapes, Evelyn Inman and Rosalie Reed were appointed on the refreshment committee.

HOCKEY PRACTICE TODAY.

The next practice of the Washington Field Hockey Club will be held this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock on the Ellipse Field and any one interested in the game regardless of previous hockey experience is invited to attend by Miss Miriam Faries, the president.

The club hopes to build its membership up to three teams which is required by the United States Field Hockey Association before a local association charter can be granted.

At the present time the Washington Club is working under an arrangement with the Baltimore Field Hockey Association by which the organization is known as the Baltimore-Washington Club. Under this plan local players are given an opportunity to work for position on the team known as the All-Baltimore which participates in the sectional matches of the national organization.

The plan works well but the local club wishes to receive national recognition and is therefore working to build its membership up to the required three teams.

The Sunday afternoon practices have been arranged for the convenience of teachers and business women and the club supplies coaches, sticks and balls for all players. Those interested in the game can obtain information from Miss Faries at 1920 S street northwest, or can attend the meeting at 3:30 p. m. Sunday and should come dressed for play.

SCOUT COURSES ARRANGED.

Girl Scout headquarters has announced that the parish house of St. John's Church, Sixteenth street between H and I streets, has been secured for the leaders' training course which will open next Wednesday under Miss R. Eleanor Lewis, local director.

Two courses have been arranged. Meetings are Wednesday mornings from 10 to 12 o'clock and Wednesday evenings from 6 to 8 o'clock, continuing for six weeks. The same activities are covered in both courses in order that those interested can select the time most convenient to them.

Games, hikes, nature troop leadership, troop management and the tenderfoot requirements will be covered. Further information can be obtained from the Girl Scout headquarters, phone Main 9429.

MISS PIGGOTT NET WINNER.

Marion Piggott, Marjorie Webster School junior, won the tennis singles crown yesterday, 6—3, 6—4, from Bernice Payne, who had eliminated all her senior sisters, to figure in the finals against her rival class.

The doubles encounter was won by the senior racketers, Josephine Misner and Jesie Reynolds, who defeated Helen Mason and Edith Onions, juniors, 6—0, 6—4.

TWO HIKES TODAY.

Today's program of the Red Triangle Outing Club opens with an early morning hike and breakfast party. The group will meet at Twenty-eighth and P strets northwest at 7:30 a. m. and the 2½-mile trail will follow through beautiful park land to Eighteenth street and Columbia road, where the hikers will breakfast at the Carleton Inn.

The afternoon hike will start from Nicholas avenue and Raleigh streets, Congress Heights, at 3:45 p. m., where an interesting three-mile circular hike will start to the Steel Plant and back to the camp fire for supper. Hikers should take lunch, flashlight, cup and spoon for coffee, which will be supplied by the club.

DAVIS-ELKINS BEATEN BY ARMY

Cadets Make Points in Last Period to Win, 27-6.

WEST POINT, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Army defeated Davis and Elkins, 27 to 6 today. The Cadets came from behind to win, trailing after the second period, 6 to 0, until after the beginning of the fourth quarter, when they rallied and rolled up four touchdowns, from which three extra points were added.

Close ran 40 yards for Davis and Elkins' only touchdown early in the second period.

Capt. Harry Wilson scored for the Army on a slice off tackle from the 5-yard line in the final quarter. A few minutes later Cagle, Army's shifty runner, dashed 50 yards for the Cadets' second touchdown. Anderson dashed into the Davis and Elkins backfield and intercepted a lateral pass, which he converted into a touchdown for the Cadets by a pretty run of 40 yards. Later O'Donnell, a speedy reserve back, skirted the visitors' left end for the final touchdown.

Woodberry Wins From S. M. A. 13-7

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 15.—Woodberry Forest Eleven defeated Staunton Military Academy on Lambeth Field this morning, 13 to 7.

Staunton fumbled in the first play of the game and Berry ran 40 yards for a touchdown. Several long forward passes gave Woodberry another touchdown in the second quarter, and near the close of the period substantial gains through Woodberry's line gave the valley eleven its lone score.

Staunton had the better of the third period. In the final quarter Woodberry rushed the ball to the Cadets' 3-yard line only to lose it on a fumble. So far this season Woodberry has a clean slate. Today's game was Staunton's first defeat.

W. VA. PLAYS LAFAYETTE TO TIE

Invaders Score When Hanlon Recovers Fumble.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Oct. 15.—The West Virginia University and Lafayette College teams battled to a 7-to-7 deadlock here today in a game that marked the return to form on the part of the Mountaineers sufficient to hold at bay one of the most powerful teams ever to play on Mountaineer Field. It also broke the string of successes for the Lafayette Maroons, which had stretched through parts of three seasons.

Hanlon scored the touchdown for Lafayette when, within three minutes after the game started, he scooped up a West Virginia fumble on the West Virginia 47-yard line and raced unimpeded over the goal line.

Keefer scored for the Mountaineers after catching a pass from A. Glenn and running 35 yards for a touchdown. Both attempts for the extra point were good.

Lafayette threatened oftener, but a stone-wall defense stopped them deep in Virginia territory on three separate occasions, and they were unable to break through with three attempted placement kicks.

Guest, Hanlon and Shellenberger starred for the Maroons, and A. Glenn and Larue proved to be the stars for the Mountaineers, although the lion's share of the glory goes to the light Mountaineer line, which was outweighed but not outfought, and proved to be the stumbling block for the Lafayette team.

Davidson Beats Elon, 27-0; Capt. Grey Stars

Davidson, N. C., Oct. 15.—Led by the superb playing of Capt. Dick Grey, the Davidson Wildcats won their fourth successive victory of the season here this afternoon when they trounced the Elon Christians, 27 to 0, and thus remain undefeated this year in defending their 1926 State title.

Capt. Grey alone gained 290 yards in the three quarters he played, making two of the Davidson touchdowns, drop-kicking two of the extra points, passing and doing most of the punting in addition. Davidson chalked up 26 first downs as compared with 8 for the visitors.

Massanutten Defeats Gettysburg Team, 20-0

Woodstock, Va., Oct. 15.—Massanutten Military Academy defeated Gettysburg Academy by the score of 20 to 0. It was Gettysburg's first defeat in two years. Neither team could gain through the line. Bliss, Heydrick and Vall starred for Massanutten, while Martin and Ross starred for Gettysburg.

Hampden-Sidney Beats Delaware U., 20 to 0

Hampden-Sidney, Va., Oct. 15.—Hampden-Sidney College defeated the University of Delaware today, 20-0, in a game interspersed with brilliant play and spectacular runs. The Northerners presented a formidable aerial attack and on two occasions reached the 10-yard line, but were unable to break through the Hampden-Sidney defense.

Cecil Jones, Hampden-Sidney right half, broke loose on the third play of the game for a 42-yard run, placing the ball on the 12-yard line. After Jones carried it for 11 more yards Ruffner dived over the line of scrimmage for the first marker. Nance kicked the extra point.

A 19-yard pass from Peach to Scott placed the pigskin on the 3-yard line in the second quarter, and Montgomery drove through guard for the second touchdown. In the closing minutes of the game Peach raced around right end 55 yards for the final marker.

Bucknell to Oppose Gettysburg Saturday

Lewisburg, Pa., Oct. 15.—With the Villanova game now past history, the Bucknell University Football Team is settling down to prepare for the invasion of the Gettysburg College Eleven at Lewisburg on Saturday. Although this game is not regarded as a set-up, Head Coach Carl Snavely plans to use it as a tune-up for Bucknell's clash with Army on the following Saturday. Comparisons as a rule do not give a true edge on combating teams, but the fact that Penn State had little trouble in downing Gettysburg, 34 to 14, and that they, in turn, were completely outplayed and defeated, 13 to 7, by the Bisons, tends to make Bucknell favorite in the coming game. However, if Gettysburg scored twice on State, it must have an offensive punch and is apt to prove dangerous.

The Bucknell aggregation is now hitting on all cylinders, and Snavely is going to ease up this week on the strenuous drilling which it has undergone to date. The team as a whole is inexperienced, and the Bison mentors are taking no chances on the men going stale.

TO PREPARE FOR GAME.

Friendship gridmen will drill on the Virginia Avenue Playgrounds this morning at 11:30 o'clock prior to their game with the Linworths at 1:30 o'clock.

Northwestern Defeats Ohio State in 19-13 Upset

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Persistent pounding of Ohio State's line by "Tiny" Lewis, fullback, won for Northwestern here today, 19 to 13, despite the Buckeyes' offense of mingled passes, runs and plunges.

Coupled with the driving power of Lewis' plunging was a 65-yard dash to a touchdown by Holmer, Purple halfback, and the brilliant passing and hard running-attack of Capt. Gustafson.

The longest run by Lewis was 19 yards, but his ability to cover the ground with 1-yard, 3-yard or 4-yard plunges, was sufficient to impel the ball goalward for two touchdowns and within a foot of another as the gun ended the contest.

The attempts of Eby and Grim to run the ends for Ohio State were stopped through failure of the Buckeys interference to clear a patch across the chalk marks.

Some success was scored by Ohio State in piercing the Purple line, Oshner, newly assigned full back, lunging the line, but not in the successive plays needed to start a concerted down-field drive. Once Eby got away for 34 yards through the center of Northwestern's line.

Eby was stopped cold in the second half after getting away to 65 yards from scrimmage in eleven attempts in the first half, in addition to returning the initial kick-off 49 yards through most of the Northwestern Team.

Northwestern's come-back in the third period fairly took the Buckeyes' breath, inasmuch as they had appeared to be the stronger in the first half, which had ended, 7 to 6, in their favor.

Northwestern gained 211 yards from scrimmage to Ohio State's 196. Northwestern completed five out of ten attempted forward passes for a gain of 35 yards. Northwestern made fifteen first downs to Ohio State's thirteen.

Camp Randall Field, Madison, Wis., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Michigan conquered Wisconsin for the sixth successive year in a Western Conference football game here today before 40,000 spectators. The score was 14 to 0.

The Wolverines pushed over touchdowns in the second and fourth quarters, Rich scoring the first marker with a plunge through the line and Louis Gilbert the second a few minutes before the game ended. Gilbert kicked both goals.

Iowa State-Illinois Fight to Tie Score

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Iowa State fought through a spectacular football battle here today to a tie score of 12 to 12, upsetting the favorite Illinois Team. Relying on straight football, the Iowans constantly smashed through the Illinois line in long marches down the field, led by the plunging Iowa State half back, Lindblom, who carried the burden of the Iowans' attack.

Presidents Are Victors Over Carnegie Tech

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 13 (A.P.).—Carnegie Tech's line could not stop Bill Amos' savage thrusts today, and the Tartans bowed to Washington and Jefferson, 20 to 6, before 20,000 spectators.

The Presidents scored in the first period. Harpster, Carnegie, fumbled a punt in his own territory, Washington and Jefferson recovering. Amos took the ball over. Carnegie tallied in the second period when Moorehead, a sub, returned a punt to the 1-yard line. Letzelter crashed through for the score. The Presidents were not to be denied, and Amos ripped through Carnegie's line in the third and fourth quarters for touchdowns.

Missouri U. Defeats Washington U., 13 to 0

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—The undefeated University of Missouri Tigers, held scoreless until the third period, opened up a brilliant charging attack against Washington University here today and won, 13 to 0. The victory was the third consecutive Missouri Valley Conference triumph for the Tigers and the first defeat of the season for the Bears.

Earle Diemund, Tiger half back, scored the first touchdown in the third quarter with a sensational 50-yard run through the line after intercepting a pass. Maschoff, Missouri sub, failed to kick goal.

The Tigers launched another attack shortly before the final gun. Harry Howze, who has been on the Missouri squad for three years without making a single touchdown, broke through for the second touchdown. On his second try Maschoff kicked goal.

Fumbles Beats Purdue In Game With Chicago

Chicago, Oct. 15.—Purdue, conqueror of Harvard, was defeated by Chicago here today, 13 to 0. Fumbles by Welch, star of the Harvard victory, were factors in both touchdowns.

The first Panther score came after a march down the field when Booth crashed across from the 5-yard line. Again he scored on the first play after the kick-off, when he cut through tackle, reversed the field, and ran 76 yards. He place-kicked both goals.

The third marker came on a drive by Welch, following a 37-yard gain by Booth. Guarino, Panther end, scored in the final quarter when he recovered a pass to Welch partly blocked by the Bulldog safety man. Parkinson, substitute, made the final score after another drive.

After the game Welch's teammates said his fumble on his first Big Ten play was largely due to a poor pass. The ball was far to his left, they said.

Washington College Victors Over St. Johns

Chestertown, Md., Oct. 15.—Washington College celebrated her resumption of athletic relations with St. John's College, of Annapolis, with a hard-earned victory over the gridiron warriors from the Maryland Capital. The score was 6 to 0, and the winning tally was due to a 15-yard end run in the second quarter by Ted Norris, full back and captain of the Eastern Shore eleven. He failed at a try for a goal kick.

CHERRIES VS. PENROSE.

GA. TECH WINS 13-0, FROM ALABAMA

Loss Breaks "Tides" Winning Streak Started in 1924.

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 15—Georgia Tech defeated Alabama here today, 13 to 0. Tech's victory over 'Bama broke a winning streak that has extended from 1924, when Centre Colonels defeated the Tide. In this time Alabama has been held to two scores, Louisiana State's scoreless draw with the tidesmen last Saturday being the second. It was one of the longest strings of victories by a major team in many years. The Tide's last conference defeat was in 1923, when Florida won a Thanksgiving encounter.

A missed tackle in the second period when the Tech tornado had the ball on Alabama's 30-yard line, and Stumpy Thomason dashed around his left end, pivoted once, changed his pace and then raced to a touchdown without even losing his balance.

It was a momentous time in the history of Georgia Tech. That piece of broken field running of Stumpy marked the first time the Yellow Jackets had scored on an Alabama football team in more than four years. It was the first Tornado score against Alabama since 1922.

This Thomason, a mere mite of a player in height, then calmly kicked the goal from placement for the extra point. Alabama still, however, loked far from defeat. Within the 40-yard lines the Crimson charged with unstopable power, but once their threat neared the Jacket goal their efforts went to naught.

The play of the Tide, when within scoring distance, constituted end running and line plunging, with no passes attempted to carry the ball over. In mid-field, however, the Crimson has flashed a dangerous aerial attack.

Just before the game ended, Mize recovered an Alabama fumble almost on the Tide goal line and on the next play he stumbled the 1 yard to go for a touchdown. Thomason missed goal.

Hagler Dye and Bowdoin formed the nucleus in the forward wall of the Crimson that opened gaping holes at times and on the defense this centered of strength smothered many Jacket plays. Waddey and Crowley, tornado ends, stood out for the Jackets in halting several ominous threats. Alabama although it was Thomason playing in the role of safety man, who nailed Taylor, Brown and Brasfield on less than four occasions when the Tide seemed gone for touchdowns.

In yardage gained the teams were well matched, both rivaling off frequent first downs although Alabama lost more ground from scrimmage than did the Jackets.

Balls Signed by Ruth, Gehrig School Prize

Asbury Park, N. J., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Baseballs autographed by Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig will be presented to the pupil who attains highest mark for scholarship in each of the eight grades of the public schools here.

Thomas F. Burley, jr., secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, who obtained the autographs from the heavy hitting stars, said the announcement had caused a great stirr in juvenile rank and file. "We've found a way to make them study," Burley asserted.

2 GAMES IN WEEK TO CLARIFY SCHOOL GRID SERIES

All Elevens Have Lost Stars, But Kelley Has Veteran Backs.

Business Is Mystery Team; Tech Meets Eastern Friday.

By ARTHUR A. HEYWOOD.

THIS week the high schools will be plunged into the midst of probably one of the hardest fights in recent years for the scholastic football championship, and it is interesting to conjecture who will be the stars and the goats of the impending title play.

Norman Hilleary was the star of Western's 7-0 defeat of Business in the opening game last year; the passing combination, Langhenry to "Buck" O'Brien, gave Eastern a 12-0 decision over Central; Mills, of Tech, tossed a pass to Kriemelmeyer in the closing minutes of the Tech-Western game to end it in a 6-6 tie; Charley May led a rejuvenated Business team to a 25-6 victory over Eastern; Blackistone, of Central, was outstanding in the Central-Tech 0-0 battle; Blackistone dropkicked Central to a 3-0 victory over Business; Ritter and Florence ran wild in Tech's 34-0 defeat of Eastern; Bobby Stevens was the hero of Western's 6-0 defeat of Central, and Mullen's brilliant runs for Tech snowed Business under a 34-7 score.

Western this year will be minus its Hilleary and its Bobby Stevens, Eastern its Langhenry, Central its Blackistone and Mullen is lost to Tech for most of the season because of ineligibility. But there will be heroes of 1927, as time will prove.

Arthur Kriemelmeyer,, full back; Ritter, a back; Oehmann and others of the Tech squad are being highly touted. Eastern High School is looking to Tom Nally, its big tackle, as one of its heroes, while Hoff and Reeves of the back field have flashed some class.

Central points with pride to its experienced back field of Simmons, Cross, Stevens and Ault, all of whom have the ability to heap glory upon themselves should the occasion present itself. Every one of the quartet is a triple-threat man and fast.

Western can well wish that it had Hilleary and Stevens back, but will look to Robert Wilson, captain and tackle, and Owens to carry the brunt of the responsibility this year.

The Business squad, which is keeping them all guessing, will have Charles May again calling signals, and a banner year is predicted for this brilliant player. Bernie Jones and Revelle Jones, when the latter becomes eligible, are expected to be stars of the Business eleven.

The respective players of four of the schools will be given their initial opportunity to enter the hall of fame this week. On Tuesday, Western meets Central and on Friday Eastern meets Tech. Central is expected to wipe out the defeat it suffered at the hands of Western last fall, while Tech is again the favorite to down Eastern.

Concannon in Series Of Cue Exhibitions

Joe Concannon, well-known pocket-billiard player, will give a series of exhibitions during the coming week at 2:30 and 7:30 o'clock every day at the Arcadia Billiard parlor.

This exhibition by Concannon will inaugurate the 1928 billiard season for the Capital. Maynard will be met tomorrow afternoon, while Abadie will be played at night.

Russels in Final; Defeat Lionels, 4-3

The Russell Insects closed a successful season yesterday by defeating the Lionels, 4 to 3, in a thrilling encounter.

After the Lionels had scored three runs in the eighth inning the Russells came back in the ninth and pushed over three markers on three singles and two sacrifice hits.

The Russells have won 37 out of 40 games this season, an average that can be boasted by few teams. They also won the Capital League Insect banner, which proves without a doubt their claim as the champions of their class.

Rosedale, Arcadia Booters In Feature of 6-Game Card

Former School Team Rivals Battle at Rosedale Today—Other Good Contests Booked in Capital City and Washington Leagues.

A 100 per cent Washington game will be a feature of the six soccer tilts which are listed for today in the Capital City and Washington Soccer leagues. Rosedale and Blick's Arcadians, composed entirely of former local elementary school boys, will meet in the "all American" game on the Rosedale playground at 1:45 o'clock.

Incidentally, the two teams have been rivals since early grade school days as in 1918-19 and 1920 the boys who now represent the Rosedale club played on the Pierce School team which battled furiously with Monroe School, whose players now form the Arcadians.

There is little to choose between the elevens now as was the case when the elementary school title was at stake, although Monroe triumphed more frequently in those days. Louis Bullicek will handle this game and this is looked upon as a wise selection, as Bullicek is a strong supporter of the youngsters. He is president of the Recreation League, which is composed of former grade school soccerists.

A worth-while game is looked for on the Rockville Fair Grounds, where British Uniteds will play Rockville at 3 o'clock. Rockville has been going well this season and has yet to meet defeat, while the Uniteds have met two reverses after hard battles. Both defeats were by one-goal margins. George Youngblood will call the fouls.

Army Medical Center and Germania will meet on the Walter Reed field at 3 o'clock. Neither the soldiers nor the Germans have gained a victory thus far in the schedule, but comparison of the teams on past performances gives the home team an edge. P. Bryden has been assigned to referee the match.

Clan MacLennan is expected to show the way to Capitol Soccer Club at Rosedale, but members of the latter team are confident that it will give the Scotchman more opposition than they are looking for. The Capitol Team is affiliated with the Concord Club.

The Concord-German-American tilt will feature Washington Soccer league games. Both clubs are composed of German players mainly and during the off season there was considerable changing about between the clubs which has intensified the natural rivalry. This match will be played at 1:45 o'clock on the Monument Grounds with Bill Castle tooting the whistle.

Concord showed its caliber in the first game of the season by holding Walford to a 2-to-2 score, while the Germans have earned a victory over Marlboro and lost to Walford, Marlboro in turn defeated Concord, so the contest today is hard to dope, but the critics are leaning toward the Concordians for their speed and teamwork.

Marlboro will play Walford on the Monument Grounds at 3 o'clock and Coach Castle claims that his Maryland boys are prepared to do what they failed to achieve last season, gain a victory over the champions. Edward Kruse is the referee.

The pairings for today's matches and every Sunday since the season opened has brought together evenly matched teams and the fans have been treated to better soccer than ever before. This is all very pleasing to soccer's well wishers but some of the pioneer promoters of the kicking game in Washington rumor a slight riffle in the usual calm waters of soccer administration here.

The Arcadians are heading the moaning society with what they claim to be a just complaint. They easily defeated the Germania Club in the season's opener, 5 to 0, but through a recent ruling of the Washington and Southeastern District Soccer Association, the defeated club will receive the two points in the standing instead of the victors. This action was taken because it was alleged that the Arcadians used Wingate, a player who played with the Arcadians last year but who signed with Walford before the present season started.

The Capital City League, in which the Arcadians play, ruled that circumstances surrounding the case justified replaying the game, but the Germania Club appealed the decision with the already stated result

The Arcadians claim that an injustice has been done them, as Wingate's status was brought up at a meeting of the Washington Soccer League before the season started, and the Walford representative at the meeting stated that Walford would not hold him if he desired to play with his old teammates.

The final outcome of the dispute is still a matter of conjecture, but all true friends of the kicking game in the District are hopeful that the difficulties will be ironed out with fairness to all.

Tad Jones' Successor Must Be a Yale Man

New Haven, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Although the Yale University authorities insist they have given no thought to choosing a successor to Head Coach "Tad" Jones, it is conceded here that a Yale football star of recent years will succeed to the post. The position pays $7,000 to $8,000 a year.

Pirates of 1927 Not Ranked With Club That Beat Nats

Griffith Declares Cuyler and Carey Were Better Combination Than Waners—Nationals' New Policy Is Secret.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

"THE Pittsburgh Pirates, which the Yankees so easily defeated in the 1927 world's series, were not the Pittsburgh Pirates against which the Nationals stacked up in 1925," said President Clark Griffith yesterday in discussing baseball's title clash which ended so disastrously for the Smoky cityans a week ago yesterday. And those who saw Bush's team perform can not help but agree with the Nat owner.

Without desiring to participate in the now-famous Cuyler controversy, Griffith contends that this player and Max Carey formed a better fly-chasing combination than do the "Wonderful Waners." "In baseball," said Griffith, "mechanical play is only half of the game, and there is no question in my mind but what Cuyler and Carey were largely responsible for the great spirit shown by the Pirates against us.

"This 1925 team simply would not be beaten. Due largely to the fire and playing of the Carey-Cuyler combination, it came from behind and copped the world's title by beating us three straight. Compare this with the low spirits which the Pirates showed against the Yankees in the series just ended.

"I think that the Waners are two exceptional youngsters, and I certainly would like to have either or both on my team, but they were unable to stir up their mates in this last series and, as a matter of fact, did not play the fine all-round games displayed by Carey and Cuyler against us."

Griffith also is of the opinion that Pie Traynor and Glenn Wright were not as good against the Yankees as they were against the Nats in that sad 1925 title set. "Both had just about found themselves then and were exceptionally brilliant and, as this is the most important side of the infield, the work of this pair had much to do with beating us. Neither hit or fielded up to par against the Yankees."

Another handicap under which the Bucs were working in the recent set was the illness of Joe Harris, former National. This veteran covered first base but he was half sick. Although charged with no errors, he was exceptionally slow afield and could not hit.

Griffith admits that the Yankees faced just about as good pitching as did the Nationals two series back, but, all in all, they were up against a team which appeared to be "all in." The Nat owner makes it clear that, in his opinion, the Huggmen would have won the series just the same, even if the Bucs were at their best, but he probably is right in his claim that the team which Bush trotted out on the field was about 50 per cent weaker than that which opposed the Harrismen in 1925.

Jumping from the past to the future, Griffith figures that this same Yankee aggregation of "sad news for pitchers" is the only team which the Nationals have to beat next season and he is now busily engaged in making plans for the coming pennant race.

He is working slowly, but already has scratched the names of Pitcher Hollis Thurston and Infielders Stuffy Stewart and Topper Rigney off his pay roll. If he and Manager Harris have decided upon a policy yet, they are not willing to let the scribes in on the secret, but indications are that some of the rookies are being figured on, either as possible regulars or as utility talent which gradually will be developed with the Nats instead of in minor leagues.

In selling Stewart and Rigney, Griffith stated that some of his youngsters could fill their places. Thurston was turned loose to make room for one of the several promising young flingers already signed, while fans need not be surprised if Sammy West and Ollie Tucker break into the outfield line-up frequently in 1928 if, indeed, one or both does not land a regular job—which is not outside the realm of possibility.

Griffith still has to cut loose two more players to get down to the player-limit of 40, and indications are that the next to go are a pair which never really arrived—Pitcher Joe Carroll and First Baseman "By" Biberg. The flinger failed after being sent back to the minors, while Biberg, a highly-touted free agent from semipro ranks, reported here, signed a contract, and then apparently suffered from "cold feet" and suddenly disappeared without even showing up for a trial.

Bill Lamar still is Washington's property, but, in view of his "Jesse James" stunt in trying to hold-up the Nats for a $1,000 bonus after having been obtained from the Mackmen via the waiver route, he is "in bad" and will be sold or traded during the off-season.

This will give the Nats one extra vacancy in case Scout Engel runs across any likely talent while barn-storming with the Altrock-Schacht theatrical company, while the chances are that Infielder Tommy Taylor, drafted from Houston, will never see Washington again. He made no pronounced hit while with the Nats in 1924 and was returned to Memphis.

Present plans call for all of the others on the list to report at the Tampa training camp next spring. On their minor league records, President Griffith and Manager Harris believe that they have rounded up some exceptionally promising talent and that, from it, they will be able to build up a punch—something that was lacking in the 1927 machine.

Renrocs to Engage Firemen Eleven Today

The Renrocs will drill on the Plaza at '10 o'clock, from whence they will journey to Seat Pleasant, leaving at 1 o'clock. All players are requested to report.

Railway Expressmen Plan for Basketball

The American Railway Expressman, having just completed a successful baseball season, are now making plans for the coming basketball campaign. Practice is listed Tuesday at the Terminal Y gym at 8 o'clock.

The team will be greatly strengthened by the addition of Eddie Colliflower, formerly of the Clovers, and Pepco Barry, well known in independent court circles. Members of last year's outfit expected to play are F. Engle, M. Engle, MacDonald, Devoe, Miller, Langhyer and Hughes.

Mohawks to Tackle Waverly Team Today

When the Mohawks stack up against the Waverly Eleven today at American League Park they will be making their first defense of the District title, held for the past three seasons.

That the Waverly Eleven is taken seriously is indicated by the fact that extensive drills have been undergone in preparation for the contest. The Indians expect to thrive on the showing of last Sunday against the Reina Mercedes, as their prey rivaled that of other years, when they were the class of the sandlots. Manager Patsy Donavon points out that his club scored on the Sailor Eleven despite the fact that such men as Hamilton, Wilson, Born, Cross, Gooche and Eddy were in the line-up.

With this condition the Mohawks will enter the fray confident of giving battle to the strong Waverlys. The latter combination is reported to have strengthened its front by the signing of several capable performers, many of whom have played with local colleges in the past.

Quakers, Lynchburg Battle Scoreless Tie

Guilford College, N. C., Oct. 15 (A.P.). Playing their first game of the season on home territory, the Guilford College Quakers battled the fast Lynchburg Eleven to a scoreless tie here today.

Both teams threatened several times, Guilford getting the ball to the 10-yard line in the second period and Lynchburg getting inside the 5-yard line at one time. Both, however, lacked the punch necessary to put over a score.

Winton Eleven Faces Soldier Team Today

Winton A. C., last year's champions of the 150-pound division, will engage the Marine Barracks eleven today on the Fairlawn Field at 3 o'clock.

High School Eleven Wins 4 Games in Day

Minot, N. Dak., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Establishing what Coach F. R. Prusha believes is a national record, football teams of Minot High School today won four contests, rolling up a total of 73 points to nothing for opponents.

The first team beat the Minor State Teachers College, 52 to 0, the reserves beat Rugby there, 12 to 0 and the second string outfit beat Glenburn there, 13 to 0. The minot coach also claimed a victory over the Bottineau Forestry Team for forfeit, 1 to 0.

Y QUINT TO PRACTICE.

Y. M. C. A. Basketball Team will practice Tuesday night at the "Y" gym at 7 o'clock. All players of last year's squad and any other new candidates are asked to report.

PASSON SIGNS WITH PRO TOSSERS

League's Split Schedule to Make Interesting Race.

MAGNATES of the professional basketball game have added a touch of the unusual to their efforts to build up the league this coming season by making the sport more attractive to the participating athletes as well as to the fans.

The club owners, in executive meeting last week in New York, adopted a plan whereby a greater chance will be given the weakest teams of the American Basketball League of competing in the world's series than heretofore, and this they accomplished with a simple change in the manner of compiling the standings of the teams.

With four clubs in the East and a like number in the West, the officials decided to group them geographically, thus creating two divisions in which first place will not be so far away from last, or fourth place.

With the league split up there will be an Eastern champion and a Western champion at the end of the season to fight for the national championship, which, as in baseball, amounts to the world's championship since no foreign opposition exists to dispute the title.

But to make it even more attractive to the players, the magnates decided that there will be divisional series between the first and second teams of each group to determine the competitors for the world title, so that a second place team, which might miss first place through some freakish bit of bad luck, will get an unquestionable chance to prove its ability.

The plan will be worked in this way: Regardless of the group it is in each team will meet the others eight times in a schedule of 56 games. Then each team's record of wins and losses will be segregated according to a group and consequently the team with the best adverage in the East will lead its division, while the same will hold true in the West.

As an example, Washington might have an average of victories and defeats as low as .400, but yet head the Eastern division if the other three clubs' averages are lower.

This situation even may obtain at the end of the season with the Eastern leader much weaker in the standings than the Western leader, or vice versa. Washington might lose most of its games to the Western clubs and win a goodly percentage of games with Eastern opponents to gain first place in its division.

To go deeper into the matter in order to show how much more attractive the new plan will be to the players, the officials pointed out that in a divisional series a second place team, having an average as low as .250 might win the series from the first place club having an average of .400, and then in the world's series meet the winner of the other division whose average might be as high as .800. The new plan will, according to the officials, certainly act to keep up the hopes of the weakest teams virtually until the very last game.

With all the teams playing to win throughout the schedule in the hope of winning world's series honors and gate receipts, the fans should not have to suffer any dull, listless games toward the close of the season when usually under the old oreder of things, a lowly team with no goal in view, plays its contests merely because they are on the schedule.

Owner George Marshall, of the Washington pro basketball team, has been doing considerable business of late. Yesterday he announced the signing of Chick Passon, one of his three hold-outs, who was obtained from the Philadelphia outfit in an off-season trade. Passon, a forward, was the third highest point-scorer in the league last year, and he and Rusty Saunders, who led in this respect, should give the locals a fine scoring combination.

With Harry Riconda and Stretch Meehan holding out, Marshall is trying to protect himself on the chance that this pair fails to come to terms. He has requested President Joe Carr to reinstate Roddy Cooney, forward, and Bob Grody, guard and center, with the minimum fines.

These two players jumped the Washington team and were declared outlaws when they cast their lot with the Brooklyn Visitation Five. If they are reinstated, they will be kept, in case Riconda and Meehan fail to come to terms; otherwise, they probably will be used for trading material.

A new bush league center also has been signed, and he will be given the "once over" during the preliminary season. He is Jude Baesman, who last season starred with the Columbus semi-pros. If build counts for anything, he should be of considerable help, for he is 6 feet 5 inches tall and weighs 205 pounds. While he is rather inexperienced, experts who have seen him in action declare that he is a comer.

Arlington Entertains Red Sox Nine Today

Arlington All-Stars will ring down the curtain on its baseball season today by entertaining the Washington Red Sox on the Arlington diamond, at 2:30 o'clock.

Red Sox players will meet at their club house at 12:30 o'clock to make the trip for the game.

William and Mary Beaten by Marines

Newport News, Va., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Quantico Marines won here this afternoon from the William and Mary Football Team, 20 to 14, in one of the most thrilling and colorful games ever seen on a local gridiron, with the advantage see-sawing from one team to the other to keep the 5,000 or more spectators on edge.

The Marines tallied in the first quarter after an advance from about mid-field on a mixture of line plays in which Shapley, former Navy half back, figured largely in gains, the former Navy back flipping a pass to Duncan for the score. Marines scored the extra point on a placement kick by Shapley.

William and Mary tallied twice in the second period and the Marines once. Capt. Meb Davis, of William and Mary, scored when Mike Maister flipped a 25-yard pass to him behind the goal line. The Marines scored in the final quarter when a penalty imposed on William and Mary had placed the ball on the 1-foot mark. Shapley carried the ball. He was smothered on an attempt at a placement kick.

Southern California U. Ties StanfordCardinals

Palo Alto, Calif., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—In a spectacular game the Trojans, of University of Southern California, and Stanford's Cardinals battled to a 13-to-13 tie here today. Led by a brawny substitute full back, Herb Fleishhacker, the weary Cardinals flung their greatest challenge of the game to crash over a touchdown in the closing seconds of play and tie their traditional rivals while some 60,000 persons looked on.

Fleishhacker, packing the ball seven times successively, ripped off a total of 21 yards, to bring the ball 3 yards from Trojan scoring turf. A short pass, Fleishhacker to Vincenti, sent the ball over. Murphy failed to convert the goal.

Drury, Southern California's captain and quarter back, carried the ball 41 times during the game to pound out the imposing total of 165 yards gained. Wilton ran 73 yards for a Stanford touchdown in the second period. Southern California registered in the first and third periods on touchdowns by Sanders and Drury. Stanford's aerial attack during the game netted 202 yards.

Northerns to Clash With Alexandria Team

The Northerns are out to give the Virginia eleven the battle of their lives today when they meet them on the Dreadnaught field in Alexandria. The Virginians took the measure of the Wintons, Northerns deadly rivals, on October 2 by a 12-to-0 score. To better the showing made by their rivals, is the aim of the Northerns, and then some. They have every confidence of offsetting the weight of the Virginia team by speed.

Hurd has been driving his players in an effort to get them in condition for this game and he is confident that he has a much better eleven than the one that faced the Marines last Sunday. It is very probable that Ady, Birtman, Worksman and Toler will be among the starters in the Northern line and the back field will be chosen from the fourteen candidates for positions. Hurd will probably start against the Alexandrians along with "Hooley" Gass, plunging back of last year's Northern team.

The big question in the offense of the Northerns today will be whether or not they can sweep around the Virginians end at which position "Rube" Hayman will be seen. It will be remembered that Hayman was All Southern Conference tackle with V. P. I. several years back and his work with the Alexandria Firemen last year was something to be rememberd.

Wisconsin U. Defeated By Michigan, 14 to 0

Madison, Wis., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Wisconsin's latest attempt to win a football game from Michigan failed today, as the Wolverines, living up to tradition, defeated the Badgers, 14 to 0, before a crowd of 44,000 spectators. Wisconsin has not won a game from Michigan since 1899, and has not scored a single point against Coach Yost's warriors since 1923.

The victory was costly for Michigan as Louis Gilbert, the back field ace, was injured when Wisconsin tacklers smashed into him after he had intercepted a forward pass in the closing minute of play. He was taken from the field supported by two of his teammates, suffering a leg injury.

The keystone of Michigan's offense was Gilbert. He was the power in the running game, accurate in his passing, and he outpunted Crofoot, the Wisconsin kicker, by almost 30 yards in each exchange. Gilbert scored one of the Wolverines' brace of touchdowns and kicked both goals from placement. In the first period the teams were deadlocked, the score standing 0 to 0, when the opening session ended. A few seconds after the opening of the second period, Capt. Bennie Oosterbaan, all-American star for two years, tossed a pass that, although falling into enemy hands, paved the way for Michigan's first score.

RICES CLOSE SEASON.

The Sam Rice Midgets will close their baseball season today with a game with the S. D. Emery nine on the East Ellipse at 3 o'clock. All players are requested to report.

CREDIT GIVEN SANDERSON BY AUTHS

Manager Largely Responsible for Success of Teams.

TO Bill Sanderson goes the credit of making the Auth Athletic Club what it is today. Through the tireless efforts of this organizer, both the Auth junior and senior teams have realized successes on the diamond that have been unparalleled in local sandlot history. As a reward for this faithful work by Sanderson, several championship teams have been molded.

Taking a brief account of the history of the club, it will be remembered that Sanderson started in 1923 with a midget nine under the name of the Southends. With this club he won the midget title of the city. The following year, business affairs kept Manager Bill from guiding the destinies of the club, but, in 1925, the team reorganized, and, under the name of the Auth Juniors, copped the banner in that class. It was also in this year that the free trip to the world series, offered by the Washington Post, was won and enjoyed by the Auths.

In 1926 the membership of the club doubled and two teams were put on the field. The Auth Juniors advanced to the senior class, while a midget club was started. Although the inception of this two-club idea meant added work to Sanderson, he did it for the boys, and, through their cooperation, was rewarded with two more banners, those of the midget and junior divisions.

Not to be outdone by this great effort, Manager Bill saw greater possibilities in his senior outfit and entered them in the unlimited series, started late in the season by the Capital City League. Once more the sun shone brightly for the Auths and another banner was added to their ever-growing list.

This year the Midget combination grew to junior proportions and, keeping up their work of the previous year, won the Junior flag in this division. The "elder" club went back to the senior class, where it still continued the class of the city by annexing another banner. It also beat out the Tremonts, champions of the Petworth League, in a three-game series.

All these successes on the diamond could not have been realized without players, and Sanderson is credited with developing several star performers.

Most noteworthy was the rise of "Shout" Taylor, diminutive pitcher, whose work on the mound aided the Senior club not a little. Taylor joined the club early in 1926—and during his reign was the mainstay of the pitcher's box, causing many opposing batters to weep from his deceptive delivery. His services were lost this season due to his moving out of town.

McGowan then sprang into prominence and, with the aid of Frager and Schwartz, carried the club over to glory already mentioned. Other luminaries of this senior club are Heaney, Morris, Wiltshire and Ruppert, infielders; Cappelli, Keefer and Enright, outfielders, and Shapiro, catcher. This last-named worthy has caught every game since organization and is likewise the oldest member.

The Junior Nine boasts of many clever performers, too Wiles and Raffo comprise a steady battery combination, while Faber, Raeder, Holtman and Cappelli form a speedy infield. Bussink, McLarney and D. Shapiro work the outfield and their batting and fielding feats have decided many a game. Of the utility men, Scherer, Katzman and Walter have performed ably whenever called upon.

Taking everything into consideration, it is well to say that Bill Sanderson has done his share in promoting sandlot baseball and it has been his fortune to handle boys that have appreciated his tireless efforts. Their records indicate that.

Good Scores Prevail In Weekly Club Shoot

The fourteen ardent trapshooters who faced the traps at the Benning range of the Washington Gun Club turned in some good scores in the regular weekly shoot. The effect of good weather in contrast to the poor shooting conditions which have prevailed during the past two shoots had the tendency to boost the totals.

The following are the scores:

Shelton, 47; Burrows, 42; Hunter, 41; Lyda, 39; Franklin, 39; Cain, 39; Blundon, 44; Green, 30; W. Wilson, 42; Livesey, 43; Wynkoop, 40; Britt, 44; Strowger, 44; Monroe, 43; Welsh, 44.

Hufty Defeats Dr. Taylor, 5 and 4

Diegel Is Expected to Play in Middle Atlantic Open.

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.

THE club championship tournament at the Congressional Country Club has now progressed through the first round, with the second round completed in the second sixteen. Page Hufty and M. E. Miller are semifinalists in the first sixteen, although in separate brackets, while R. C. Antrobus has reached the final round in the second sixteen. O. E. Eastwold, F. A. Dannemiller and J. G. Eason, jr., were three of the semifinalists in the third sixteen, although Eason has now advanced to the final round. It was expected that several of the unplayed matches would be decided yesterday but all of them were postponed until today. The results of the first round in each sixteen are as follows:

FIRST SIXTEEN.

SECOND SIXTEEN.

First round—O. K. Sadtler defeated William Krauss, 3 and 2; J. R. McCarl defeated E. B. Lyon, 1 up; J. E. McClure defeated Thomas Bradley, 4 and 2; E. G. Ellsworth defeated R. T. Moore, 1 up; J. E. Drinkwater defeated William M. Smith, 1 up; F. G. Johnson defeated G. G. Davis, 2 up; R. C. Antrobus defeated J. R. Hornberger, 2 and 1.

Second round—Sadtler defeated McCarl, 1 up; Ellsworth defeated McClure, 2 and 1; Drinkwater defeated Johnson, 1 up, 10 holes; Antrobus defeated Holmes, 4 and 3.

THIRD SIXTEEN.

First round—Whitney Leary defeated L. B. Chapman, 3 and 2; James F. Meegan defeated H. A. Coombs, 1 up, 19 holes; O. S. Eastwold defeated F. S. Lincoln, 4 and 3; T. L. Plant defeated Dr. M. Trowbridge, up. Clay Anderson defeated E. G. Borden, 2 up; F. A. Dannemiller defeated E. H. Van Fossam, 3 and 2; J. G. Eason, jr., defeated H. Clay Hickey, 4 and 3; F. L. Martin defeated Dr. John A. Dugan, 3 and 2.

Second round—Leary vs. Meegan, unplayed; Eastwold defeated Plant, 6 and 4; Dannemiller defeated Anderson, 4 and 3; Eason defeated Martin, 5 and 4.

Capt. J. R. DeFrees, United States Navy, yesterday won the President's Cup in the final round of the annual competition at the Chevy Chase Club. The winner reached the final round by defeating John W. Childress, 4 and 2, while Allison became a finalist by reason of a victory over H. C. Pratt. The summary:

Third round—J. B. Allison, 8, defeated C. Ashmead Fuller, 3, 2 and 1; H. C. Pratt, 11, defeated W. C. Gullion, 12, 5 and 4; R. R. DeFrees, 18, defeated J. D. Burnett, 12, 2 and 1; John W. Childress, 11, defeated P. S. Ridsdale, 9, 3 and 2.

Although no entry has yet been received for the Middle Atlantic open tournament from Leo Diegel, winner of the title last year, it is expected that he will arrive in Washington in time to participate in the opening round on the Indian Spring course next Thursday. The only out-of-town entries thus far received are from Wm. Leech, of the Overbrook Club, Philadelphia, and Tom Kerrigan, of the Siwanoy Club, who finished among the leaders in the British open last year. In addition to these names the entry list includes the following:

Tommy Armour, national open champion, Congressional Country Club; Alex. Armour, Congressional Country Club; Fred McLeod, Columbia; Eddie Towns, Indian Spring; Ralph Beach, Burning Tree; Dave Thomson, Washington Golf and Country; A. B. Thorn, Town and Country; Mel Shorey, East Potomac Park; Albert Treder, Manor; R. C. McKimmie, unattached; Page Hufty, Congressional; George S. Voigt, Bannockburn, runner-up last year; Robert T. Barnett, Chevy Chase; F. P. Reeside, Chevy Chase.

Members of the Argyle Club will participate today in the final round of the 36-hole handicap medal play tournament which began last Sunday.

BOWLERS SEEK ACTION.

Collegian A. C. bowlers are seeking matches with teams in Washington. The Manhattans are especially challenged. Write Don Grist, 1007 East Capitol street.

Whalen Is Convention Hall Star, Averages 127 Pins

Four Teams Are Tied for Lead in Masonic League; Lejeune Quintet Showing Way in Marine Circuit.

THE bowlers of the respective leagues have been toppling the pins the last week in a merry fashion, which is indicative that the majority are beginning to hit their stride. With all the leagues in full swing, some high scores are looked for this week.

DISTRICT LEAGUE ACTIVE.

After wininng six straight games Convention Hall struck a snag on the final night of the third week of the District League bowling campaign and dropped two games, bringing their margin over Government Printing Office down to a single game. Bunched back of Government Printers by a similar margin are the King Pin, Curb Cafe, Cornell's Lunch and Meyer Davis clubs.

Jack Whalen appears to be the outstanding bowler of the circuit at this stage, having turned in sets of 399, 371 and 371 for an average of 127. This mark easily gives him the leadership of the circuit at this time. Whalen is also well on his way in the matter of strikes, with twelve in the three sets rolled.

Next week will find the leaders and runners-up clashing on the Convention Hall Alleys on Friday. The schedule for the rest of the week calls for Stanford at Cornell's Lunch on Monday, Curb Cafe at King Pin on Tuesday, Petworth at Meyer Davis on Wednesday, Temple at Arcadia on Thursday.

Printed schedules for the season were distributed to the various alleys last night and bowlers may obtain them from the alley managers.

BOND MART CONTINUES TO DISPLAY HESITANCY

RAILS QUIET BUT STEADY

New York, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—The bond market, called upon to absorb more than $220,000,000 in new issues during the past week, displayed further hesitancy today. Payment of around $300,000,000 in interest and dividends, however, served to support prices, and there was no general selling movement in any group.

Announcement that the Government will buy second Liberty 4¼s at 100⅜ between October 17 and October 22 brought about a readjustment of quotations on those securities, which had declined to year's low figures following the expiration of the Treasury's conversion offer on the first of the month. Fourth Liberties also improved fractionally.

Polish 8s, after rising to new high ground on the completion of the new Polish loan, were subject to realizing. Several other foreign securities, including some of the French, Italian and Belgian, also lost ground.

Domestic railway lines were quiet but steady. Chicago & Northwestern 4½s were in demand, but Illinois Central (Chicago, St. Louis & New Orleans) 4½s were freely offered. Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit 6s were given good support, but other public utilities as well as some of the industrial mortgages, inclined to heaviness.

CITIZENS DROP FIGHT FOR PREMATURE USE OF NEW CRAIN ROAD

STATE COMMISSION TO IMPROVE DETOUR

Ritchie to Lead Parade and Five Girls to Compete in Beauty Contest.

The tumult of protest created by indignant residents of the little town of Upper Marlboro, Md., when they were prohibited from using completed portions of the new Robert Crain Highway was reported last night virtually subsided and elaborate plans for the formal opening of the highway next Saturday were announced.

As expressions of indignation against the edict of the State Highway Commission prohibiting use of any part of the road until after the ceremonies and forcing the use of a detour, angered residents tore down dirt barriers, used portions of the road and necessitated the service of a police guard. However, with the declaration of truce last night, attention was turned to the celebration plans for Saturday.

The commission had decided that vehicular traffic on the new highway would be hazardous until the completion of the thoroughfare, and, placing dirt barricades along the sides of the road, ordered the use of a mile detour about the town, a good road, but narrow.

Embankments Torn Down.

Certain residents disagreed with the commission and, led by James E. Binger, of Hall Station, which is a short distance from the blockaded highway, 100 irate citizens tore down the dirt banks so frequently that the services of two State motorcycle policemen were necessitated to assure safety on the road.

Binger is said to have admitted leading the mob to destroy the dirt barricade and declared his intention was because the detour road was not a good passage and no harm would result from use of portions of the highway. M. Hampton Magruder, chairman of the committee on arrangements of the celebration, declared that the road commission had agreed to better portions of the detour, which met with the satisfaction of the residents, and peace was restored.

Mr. Magruder said the police guard will be relieved of their vigil today and no further trouble is anticipated. Although here and there throughout the little town feeling against the road prohibition was still running high last night, the majority of the residents seemed contented with the commission's agreement to better the detour.

Miss Annabelle Diantha Lloyd, George Washington University senior, will represent Prince Georges County at the formal opening of the highway, it was announced by State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer.

Five Girls to Compete.

As "Miss Prince Georges County," Miss Lloyd will be one of five girls from Southern Maryland Counties. Her colleagues will be selected by State senators from Charles, St. Mary's, Calvert and Anne Arundel counties.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel B. Lloyd, of Buena Vista Farm and 1842 California street. Her father is an official reporter for the United States Senate.

Gov. Ritchie has invited 10,000 to attend the ceremonies opening the Crain Highway. At 11 o'clock Saturday morning he will lead an automobile parade from Priest Bridge to the scene of the exercises. Before the procession gets under way, however, the governor will break a barrier held across the road by Miss Margaret Crain, daughter of Robert Crain and Mrs. Crain, and by John M. Mackall, jr., chief engineer of the State Roads Commission.

"Miss Southern Maryland" will be selected by disinterested judges from the five young women representing Southern Maryland counties, following the road opening exercises. The winner will dance the minuet with "Lord Baltimore." Addresses will be made by Gov. Ritchie, Mayor Broening, of Baltimore; M. Hampton Magruder and Judge Joseph C. Mattingly. Archbishop Michael J. Curley will pronounce invocation.

FIGHTS FIRE

MISS ESTELLE COOPER.

Topeka, Kans. (A.P.).—A book of songs, games and stories intended to teach children how to prevent fires and how to escape injury in fires will be used in Kansas public schools during the coming winter.

"Keeping Safe From Fire," is a manual for teachers and is the work of a teacher, Miss Estelle Cooper, of the Topeka grade schools. It was printed by the State and mailed to all teachers.

Miss Cooper's book includes a play, entitled, "Dangerous Things," in which the children take roles personifying various fire hazards.

PEEPING PARIS TOURISTS DRIVE STAR FROM FLAT

BETRAYED BY CORK'S POP

Paris, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—The world's excessive curiosity about Cecile Sorel's beautifully decorated apartment on the Quai Voltaire has driven the famous French actress to take up her residence in Versailles.

Known in private life as the Countess de Segur, Mlle. Sorel has been much annoyed by the public desire to peep behind the doors of the apartment, which overlooks the Seine. Never since she made her debut in the columns of the Paris papers, which was simultaneous with her debut on the stage, has the actress been so upset by the attentions of the curious.

Recently she was enjoying a beautiful autumn evening before the open windows of her bedroom, being in negligee. Suddenly she heard revolver shots, apparently fired from the top of a giant crane moored in the river opposite her house and so placed that a person atop it would have command of her bedroom. She called in police.

Annoyance failed to describe her feelings when she learned that tourist guides, taking advantage of the crane's position and altitude, had been conducting a steady stream of visitors to it and helping to boost them up to its top to give them an intimate glimpse at the famous Sorel apartment.

But it was the popping of champagne corks and not revolver shots that Mlle. Sorel had heard. Paris newspapers, in describing the incident, declared the tourists were Americans and that the champagne bottles had been opened in the donkey engine booth of the crane. It was impossible to confirm that the peepers were Americans.

Mlle. Sorel has refused to give the address of her new home in the city of Louis XIV, but it is said to be a splendid villa.

French Women Hail Dog Racing Gladly

Paris, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—"Love me, play my dog," is a new saying in the French smart set.

Dog racing has been introduced and is receiving enthusiastic support from socially prominent women of sporting proclivities.

The most fashionable "Cynodrome," as the tracks are called, is situated in the southern part of the forest of Chantilly within easy reach of Paris. The profits from the betting machines go to extend the supply of electric current in the country districts.

RADIO COMMISSION ANNOUNCES MANY CHANGES IN LENGTHS

New Broadcasting Arrangement Designed to Reduce Interference, It Is Said.

IMPORTANT STATIONS HELPED IN PROGRAMS

WMAL, Washington, Given 1,240 K. C. 250 Watts in Place of 990 K. C.

(Associated Press.)

Scores of changes in radio broadcasting arrangements, to become effective November 1, were announced yesterday by the Federal Radio Commission. All are designed to reduce interference, the commission declared, and to give stations of greater public importance a better right-of-way in getting their programs to the largest number of listeners.

More changes may be expected later, it was added, as the commission reaches new determinations of what is better for the public service in radio. The reassignments of wave positions and power rating among stations under today's order, is as follows:

Silk Manufactured Out of Corn Stalks

Danville, Ill., Oct. 15 (A.P.)—Yellow-tasseled cornstalks of Illinois fields will emerge from the machinery of a newly-established plant here as the bases for a quality paper and for man factured silk.

A subsidiary of the Euroamerican Cellulose Products Corporation has been located near Danville, the plant covering 45 acres.

The corporation was formed to exploit the invention of Bela Dorner, a European chemist, whose research, officials of the concern say, makes it possible to manufacture from cornstalks the basic raw material for rayon, a quality paper, a dangerous nitrocellulose explosive, lacquers, artificial leather and celluloid film.

The Danville plant will turn out cellulose pulp for paper and the rayon basic material.

Breaks Closed-Car 2,000-mile Record

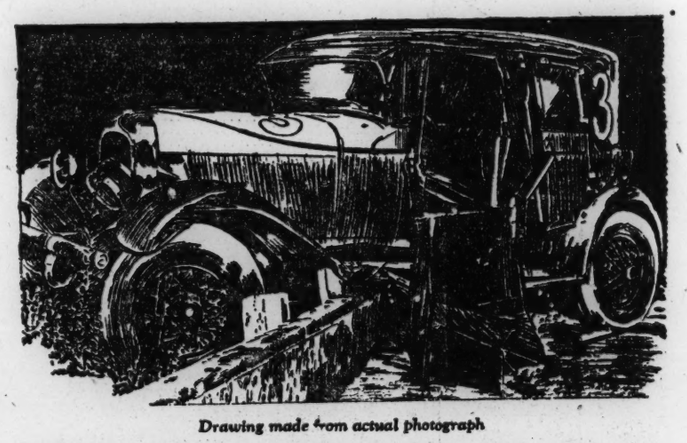

Then during night skidded in rain storm, turned over several times, received body repairs only

Then Finishes 15,000-miles at 62.709 M.P.H.

Drawing made from actual photograph

Drawing made from actual photograph

About the middle of the second night of this continuous run, when the track was wet as a result of a rain storm, the driver dozed. As a result, the car going at high speed skidded. It hit the guard rail and turned over. The sturdy construction of Auburn resisted this smash so well that only body damages resulted. The driver was unhurt.

Drawing made from actual photograph

Here is proof of stamina! After 7 hours for photographs and body repairs, this sedan went back into the endurance test, driven by the same driver, and finished the remainder of the 15,000 miles at an average speed of over 67 miles an hour for the net running time for the entire distance.

For more than 30 hours, averaging better than 65 miles an hour, this strictly stock Auburn Sedan had been whirling around the Atlantic City Speedway day and night.

Then came a terrific rain storm. Wet track. At 70 miles per hour the driver dozed, the car skidded and turned over. It slid 50 feet on its top, righted itself, and crashed into rail. Two doors were torn off. Three fenders, radiator and windshield damaged.

A photographer was telephoned for to drive over from Philadelphia to take a flashlight. Hours later a mechanic who had faith in Auburn's sturdy construction, examined the car and pronounced it mechanically unimpaired.

Then radiator and body repairs were made. Seven hours had been lost. But the Sedan went back into the test with the same driver. It caught up with the other two Auburn stock cars and finished the unprecedented distance of 15,000 miles.

After the accident, the car was declared non-stock, as it was no longer complete—exactly as sold, but its time continued to be officially recorded by the A.A.A. The longest, hardest and fastest official test ever given a closed car.

Unheard of as this performance is, it was only an incident in the 42,000 miles of official stock car test Auburn conducted, breaking all records for completely equipped stock cars from 5 to 5,000 miles, and establishing new stock car records from 5,000 to 15,000 miles.

The purpose of this extreme and hitherto unattempted stock car test, was to demonstrate by three times greater proof the supreme leadership of Auburn cars in speed, endurance, durability and efficiency. Your Auburn dealer has exact duplicates of the Auburn cars that made these phenomenal records.

NO RECOGNITION OF OBREGON.

The United States can not properly do more at this time than sympathize with the unfortunate Mexican people, who are subjected to terrorism by usurpers who control the machinery of government. A partnership formed several years ago between Plutarco Calles and Alvaro Obregon brought about a revolution in which President Carranza was assassinated and Obregon was "elected" president. He turned over the office to Calles, and now Calles is to turn it back to Obregon. By outwitting the American Commissioners Obregon obtained recognition from the United States, and in due time Calles violated the pledges given by Obregon. There is no reason why the United States should not withdraw its recognition of the revolutionary government of Calles, except that withdrawal would be construed as an attempt by the United States to stir up revolution in Mexico.

The Mexican people are doing their best to throw off the Calles regime. Outbreaks are recurrent in many of the Mexican states, and the nature of these outbreaks reveals unmistakably the fact that the people are willing to risk the danger of death in opposing the Calles-Obregon scheme of sharing the spoils of government. A peaceful election of Obregon next year is impossible. If Obregon is to succeed Calles it will be by force as well as fraud.

In that case the United States will not be bound to recognize the Obregon government; on the contrary, it will be morally bound to refuse recognition. Gen. Chamorro was refused recognition in Nicaragua because he had gained power by a coup d'etat. The United States has frowned upon other revolutionists asking for recognition. The criterion of recognition is supposed to be unquestioned acceptance of the government by the people affected. If Obregon should become dictator of Mexico it will be against the will of the people. The United States has no moral right to aid usurpers in fastening their clutches upon any nation.

An announcement by the United States that it will apply to Mexico the rule that was applied to Nicaragua will do much to convince the Mexican nation that the United States is their steadfast friend. When Secretary Kellogg advised the Chinese factions that he would be disposed to treat with any government possessing elements of stability as evidenced by popular support, he established a precedent that should be applied to Mexico. Obregon, even if successful next year in grasping power, will be unable to show that he enjoys popular support. His tenure will be bloody, and unless supported by the United States it will be brief. He will have no warrant for asking recognition from the United States. His part in the dealings with the American Commissioners in 1923 proved that his pledges were treacherously given and that his guarantees are worthless. The United States need expect nothing but treachery in dealing with him or Calles.

Secretary Kellogg has advised the people of China that he will deal only with a government supported by the nation. Why should not a similar intimation be conveyed to the people of Mexico?

STEEL FOR HOMEBUILDING.

Ready-made frame houses are no novelty in this country. It is possible to consult a catalogue and order a home "ready cut." Something new, however, was demonstrated recently in New York when a steel frame for a six-room dwelling was put together in less than half a working day.

The use of steel for small dwellings is now said to be as suitable as wood. It is the intention of the metal engineers to design several types of structures. The prospective home builder may then order the type most suitable. Fabricated steel will be shipped and upon delivery it need only be bolted together, or "buttoned up," as the technical expression goes. The initial cost of the steel frame will be greater than wood, but it is claimed that the labor charge is reduced so materially as to offset the added cost of material.

The arguments in behalf of steel for homes are that it is not only fireproof and capable of resisting heavy winds, but that it has a much longer normal life than any other material. Combined with concrete there would be little chance for fire to destroy such a dwelling. It can be finished in two months, regardless of weather conditions.

Since labor cost is now such an expensive item in home construction it may be that this new plan will be favorably received. Experiments with poured concrete houses did not quite meet the public fancy. But the steel frame may prove as effective in homebuilding as in skyscrapers.

A POLITICAL GHOST.

It is to be expected that at the present stage of the political cycle public men of Democratic persuasion should begin "to view with alarm." The affairs of the Nation may move on a fairly smooth keel for a year or two after a national election, but as the time for another appeal to the electorate approaches things just can't help going to the dogs. The evidences of artificial panic are increasing. Within the coming twelve months this frenzy will increase, and by next October it will be hard for the unsophisticated individual to understand how the country can survive unless it annihilates the Republican party.

Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, is one of the first to become disturbed. He displayed symptoms of an alarming character some weeks ago. The action of the Federal Reserve Board in forcing a reduction in discount rates upset him tremendously. He was extremely indignant until it developed that the board had done exactly the same thing while he was Secretary of the Treasury. In consequence Senator Glass now views with alarm the disclosure that the State Department acts in an advisory capacity over the flotation of foreign loans and has been doing so since 1922. The thought of what might happen under certain circumstances, which the Virginia senator is careful to say are not now present, fills him with horror. His imagination creates a terrible picture, and at the sight of it the gooseflesh shimmies along the senatorial spine.

Strange to relate, President Coolidge suffers from no such fears. The matter of foreign loans is viewed by him as an element of this country's foreign relations, which are conducted by the Chief Executive. The flow of American capital to other lands increases the obligations of this Government. Other nations keep a nominal if not a legislative check upon such operations. It is generally recognized that there must be some coordination between Government policies and private operations in foreign fields. The time may come in the life of any nation when unity of purpose becomes vital and if there has been no cooperation prior to that time between finance and the Government consolidation in time of danger will be all the more difficult.

The only criticism heretofore directed against the policy of the United States Government has been that the system in force lacked definiteness. Certain financial interests have asked for a clearer exposition of the administration's policy. There has not been a specific refusal to cooperate with the Government in what is, after all, a purely voluntary arrangement. There is nothing to prevent private bankers from proceeding without the sanction of the State Department. The first to feel the effect of the "terrorism" which Senator Glass suspects would be the bankers. They have no such misgivings, or the public would have heard of them long since. The ghost that Senator Glass raises appears to be a political spook, with strong partisan leanings.

A PLAN TO CONSERVE OIL.

Much can be accomplished for the oil industry and the Nation if the conference just called by Dr. Work, Secretary of the Interior, succeeds in agreeing upon a plan to limit the production of petroleum. The suggestion made by Dr. Work calls for the creation of a committee to draft a suitable bill, to be composed of three members of the minerals section of the American Bar Association, three representatives of the oil industry and three officials of the Government. The bar association and the Government already have expressed a willingness to act. The future of the plan depends now upon the producers and refiners.

There can be no question as to the wisdom of such a step. The oil industry during the last summer went through a period that approached demoralization. Rival companies in their eagerness not to lose their share of petroleum in the Seminole field of Oklahoma forced production up to a figure far beyond the normal demand. The flow of oil was so great that there was some question whether existing storage facilities could handle it. An appeal was made to the Government, but it was found that Federal action could not be taken for fear of violating the antitrust laws. The producers debated the question at length, and after some months reached an independent agreement that served to remedy the situation in the Oklahoma field.

Similar circumstances are likely to appear at any time. Discovery of another rich field would result in renewed competition and further waste. The visible supply of oil is such that the United States can not afford to squander its resources. The time may be at hand when every drop of oil will be of the utmost value. The public generally and most members of Congress realize the importance of taking some protective steps. The administration is willing to extend all possible aid and support. If the conference called by Dr. Work can agree upon legal safeguards, the probabilities are that Congress will give the suggested legislation sympathetic consideration.

WALTER JOHNSON.

The Washington Baseball Club, for that matter the American League, will not seem the same with Walter Johnson out of uniform. The dean of the game's pitchers, and in his time the best man that ever stepped into the box, has asked for his unconditional release. The diamond may still see him as the manager of a minor league club, but as a major leaguer he says that he is through. He retires voluntarily, modest in his own appraisal of the worth that he might still be to the Washington Club and anxious not to be treated as a pensioner after he has lost his effectiveness.

There is little that can be said in the nature of a farewell that has not been said about Walter Johnson in his day. In his case certainly praise was bestowed when it could be appreciated and always it was merited. Walter Johnson was not only a great ball player in that his arm and brain contained the skill and courage necessary for his task, but because at all times he lived and played cleanly. In the latter sense Walter Johnson was an inspiration to his colleagues in the game and to thousands of boys whose baseball days were limited to the sandlots. What Walter Johnson did was always worth emulating either as a player or a man.

The career of few men in baseball has covered the same span. There is not a man connected with the Washington team today who was here when Walter Johnson came from Idaho, a green, untutored youngster with the fastest ball possessed by any pitcher before or since. There are others connected with the club now who have grown gray in its service, but none dates back as far as Walter Johnson. It will be as many years and a few score more before the memory of his stay will be dimmed in the minds of thousands of Washingtonians, who have made him their hero. Their hope of success will go with Walter Johnson wherever he goes and their admiration for him will be as sincere as in the days when there was not a batter in the American League but feared him. Here in the city that became his home he will always be the "Old Master," greatest of them all.

PROGRESS IN AIR TRAVEL.

The Boeing Airplane Co., of Seattle, announces that construction has been started on three giant trimotored air liners, with buffet, washroom and seats for twelve passengers, as well as cargo space for 1,500 pounds of mail, express and baggage. Cruising at 125 miles an hour the ships will be put into service early next spring on the Chicago-San Francisco route—first experimentally on a week-end service and later, if the demand should warrant, on regular daily service.

The three motors develop a total of 1,275 horsepower and in case one goes out of commission the ship can be sustained by the other two. The factor of safety, therefore, is high. In addition, a system of individual brakes has been developed for each of the wheels, which adds considerably to the maneuverability of the plane in small landing fields.

Europe is far ahead of the United States in passenger air transports. It is only natural that the countries which saw the plane in daily use throughout the war should have adapted them to peaceful conditions. Europeans were used to airplanes. Americans were not. Public confidence has had to be built up to a point of accepting the plane.

American planes until recently were not designed to make a particular appeal to prospective passengers. The new ships, however, are to be most luxurious. Their 14-foot cabins will contain heavily upholstered chairs, the backs of which may be dropped to the reclining position. Forced ventilation and heating will be provided, as well as safety glass windows which permit of an unobstructed view and which may be opened at will. With safety, comfort and luxury combined in an airplane it will not be long before passenger air lines will prove popular and profitable.

Well, They Would Play With Him!

ARMY HOUSING.

The wretched state of housing conditions in the Army was a matter of public record prior to the speech of Maj. Gen. Charles T. Summerall on the West Coast. The chief of staff merely emphasized what had been told to numerous congressional committees, ever since the fight was begun to replace some of the war-time construction with permanent buildings. Washington residents are familiar with conditions at Walter Reed Hospital and Camp Meade, where replacements have been made or are under way. It was shown, however, before congressional appropriations were made available that at both these posts there were many buildings in a state of deterioration approaching decay.

President Coolidge, who announced immediately after Gen. Summerall's speech that the Army chieftain had been called home for a "budget conference," was quick to give the other side of the picture. The Chief Executive explained that $8,000,000 had already been appropriated for new construction and that $12,500,000 had been spent on repairs in the very recent past. There is in addition congressional authorization for $14,000,000 more, which has not yet been included in the budget.

There should be no conflict between the two statements of fact. It is only necessary to run over a description of present housing conditions in the Army to ascertain that as a whole they are pitifully inadequate, and of such character as may well affect the morale of the officers and enlisted men. War-time construction was of necessity hasty. Even with more generous appropriations than the Army obtained it would have been impossible to keep the cantonment buildings in good order. Despite much patchwork, time and the elements have served to make them virtually unfit for habitation. These are the conditions against which Gen. Summerall with propriety protested. The President spoke of the work that had already been begun to remedy this condition. When it has been completed the more flagrant cases of disintegration will have been eliminated. Congress is, however, extremely parsimonious with regard to such projects in time of peace. It is necessary to remind its members of the situation at its worst in order to obtain relief. It was this that Gen. Summerall, no doubt, had in mind. The President apparently has the same object in view. There is no reason to suppose that the two will disagree on a matter so vital to the Army.

LOCAL MERGER PLANS.

A document embodying the plan of Harley P. Wilson, owner of the Washington Rapid Transit Co., for a street railway merger has been received by the Public Utilities Commission. In keeping with the request of its author, the chairman of the commission has declined to divulge details of the plan, and it is said that they will not be made public probably until the latter part of November.

The policy of secrecy may be criticized, but it is a wise policy at this stage. Mr. Wilson has been working diligently upon a merger scheme, and is in a fortunate position because of his close connection with the North American Co., reputed to be a heavy holder of Washington Railway & Electric and Capital Traction securities, to influence its consummation. The plan as delivered to the commission is, of course, subject to modification. If it were made public while in a tentative state it might be impossible to secure modifications found to be indispensable.

The Utilities Commission knows that unless a merger plan promises better service or lower fares, or both, there would be little reason to complete the consolidation. Both the operating companies and the public have rights that must be respected. Both the public and the companies, however, are of necessity partisan, and publication of a partially completed plan probably would lead one side or the other to fear that it would be imposed upon.

The public will await with interest full details of the scheme as finally worked out. There will be full public opportunity to scrutinize the merger proposal if it should pass beyond the tentative stage. But in the meantime the project should be kept in a plastic condition, so that changes can be made without prejudice, looking toward the end that is desired by all parties concerned.

ANOTHER TRAIL BLAZED.

The South Atlantic presents as great a challenge to aviators as the waste which lies between North America and Europe. In 1922 two Portuguese fliers, Capt. Coutino and Cabral-Sacadura, were the first to cross the South Atlantic by air, although their achievement was marred by an accident when their plane was forced to descend at St. Paul rocks, in midocean. They finished their trip in a new machine taken to them by a warship. Commander Franco, of Spain; Commander de Pinedo, of Italy; Maj. Beires, of Portugal, and the Brazilians Braga and Barros have made the crossing, but in every instance the flight was broken by forced landing.

In May of this year Maj. St. Roman, of France, attempted a nonstop flight across the South Atlantic. Taking off at Senegal, he never was seen again. In June wreckage of an airplane was found near the mouth of the Amazon, but there was no trace of Maj. St. Roman or his flying companion, Lieut. Mouneyres.

There is, therefore, historic interest attached to the flight of Dieudonne Costes and Lieut. Joseph Le Brix who, starting from Saint Louis, Senegal, early on October 14, brought their biplane Nungesser-Coli safely to earth near Port Natal, on the tip of the Brazilian peninsula, late the same night. Theirs is the first nonstop flight between Africa and South America. Costes and Le Brix are engaged in pioneering a trail for a future Franco-South American air mail. Their first flight was from Paris to Saint Louis, a distance of 2,700 miles. The 2,150-mile flight across the Atlantic was the second stage. The third will be to Rio de Janeiro, and the fourth to Buenos Aires.

Costes and Le Brix should reach their destination without further difficulty. They have blazed a practicable trail and their names will be included with those of other brave spirits whose sacrifice and toil have advanced the cause of aviation.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Executions in Mexico in Reality Were Murders, Says Mexican, Who Declares Men Were Not Given Trials, and Challenges Representatives of Government to Prove Otherwise—Holds U. S. Is Responsible, to a Great Degree, for Conditions of Country.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The following lines are written solely for the purpose of fulfilling a patriotic duty and not in the slightest spirit of impassioned criticism or disrespect. As a Mexican citizen, I can not fail to see with deep humiliation the wave of indignation cast upon Mexico in general for the crimes and faults of the "governing group" now in power, not by the will of the Mexican people, but by a complication of facts in which the Government of the United States has played an important part.

A wrong impression has been given to the American press and people in reference to the official assassinations of Gens. Serrano and Vidal with thirteen civilians. I never met any of these men in my life; there was no friendship or partisanship that could linke me with them in any way or manner; but they were my countrymen, have been brutally murdered and I feel my duty to reveal the facts as they are, in protest before the civilized world.

In the first place, none of the 36 men publicly assassinated during last week by Calles and Obregon had started revolt. They were peacefully at Mexico City the night of October 2. A police force, led by Roberto Cruz, by orders of Obregon and Calles, dragged them out of their homes at midnight, murdered them at police headquarters in Mexico City and took their bodies to Cuernavaca.

Gomez, Almada and other Serrano partisans, to save their lives, fled from the city, taking with them about 6,000 men of the city garrison. When Calles announced the uprising and promised "to have those responsible punished within 24 hours," he had already murdered his victims. There was no such a thing as a court-martial ever held and I am going to prove it.

One of the requirements for a court-martial is that executions must take place 48 hours after sentence is given. From the minute that Calles announced the revolt to the moment he broadcast the "executions" not even 24 hours elapsed. I challenge Calles, Obregon and their "official" representatives in this country to prove the contrary by giving a record of Serrano and his covictims' courtmartial. I invite them to give the names of the parties forming said court, where same took place and at what time; what were the charges against each of the fourteen men, what proofs and witnesse were presented before said court; what were the answers of each of the fourteen defendants to said charges; how long each defendant was examined, and how many hours or days the court lasted.

All the bodies were found in civilian clothes, and that of Gen. Serrano barefooted. No one in Mexico goes to start a military movement wearing a city attire, much less Serrano, an old lieutenant of Obregon, his minister of war who for years was in the battlefield. Is it believable that such a trained man was starting a revolt and already in the field without even shoes?

The former minister of war, friendly to at least 60 per cent of the officers and chiefs of the army, after having moved three brigades of the Mexico City garrison out in rebellion, was found in the rebel field without a single soldier or officer. He had 6,000 men at his command, and was captured without giving battle, surrounded only by fourteen civilians never before in the army. Could that be believed even by a child?

As to the laws of Mexico, there is no death penalty for civilians even if found in open rebellion. Thus, how could the court-martial, if it ever was held, condemn thirteen civilians to death and order their immediate execution?

The only crime of these victims was to make an electoral campaign in favor of Serrano in preparation of the approaching elections for president. That they were having a tremendous success is clearly proved by the photographs published by a Mexican magazine on September 18. That success was not suitable for Calles-Obregon purposes, and the wholesale butchery was ordered. In doing so, they have only followed up their long-established system of elimination by crime. This practice has been in full swing in Mexico since 1914, when President Woodrow Wilson helped these brigands not only with arms and ammunitions, but by "notifying the other governments that not only would Huerta not be recognized by the United States, but that the influence of the American Government would be exerted against him" (Democratic Text Book, 1914). Unfortunately, not only the influence was used, but also the total power of the American Government. The embargo on arms was then raised, and Villa, Calles, Obregon and others were fully equipped to attack the last constitutional government that Mexico had.

Still unable to vanquish Huerta, the occupation of Vera Cruz was ordered by President Wilson because "he wanted to serve the Mexicans", . ."a war to serve mankind". . ."a war of service which is a proud thing to die for." (Oration at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, 1914.) The real object was to prevent delivery of a cargo of arms and ammunitions brought from Europe for Huerta on board the S. S. Ypiranga. This is the way in which the Wilson administration "showed Mexico that they were in earnest in their demand that Huerta must go." (Interview in the New York World, July 16, 1916.)

Huerta, of course, did go under such a powerful pressure; Villa, Calles, Obregon and others of the same type came into control of the situation, and the most terrific sweep of crimes and robberies raged all along Mexico in such a way that Mr. Lansing was compelled to send a note to the "Government de Facto" on June 20, 1916, from which the following passages are copied:

"The Government of the United States has viewed with deep concern and increasing disappointment the progress of the revolution in Mexico . . . the lives of Americans and other aliens have been sacrificed; vast properties developed by American capital and enterprise have been destroyed or rendered nonproductive . . . the lives of citizens of the United States who ventured to remain in Mexican territory or to return there to protect their interests have been taken—and in some cases barbarously taken—and the murderers have neither been apprehended nor brought to justice. It would be difficult to find in the annals of history of Mexico conditions more deplorable than those which have existed during the last three years."

Such conditions were taking place during the government of Carranza, already recognized by the United States. Carranza was unable to control his brigands, Calles and Obregon, and avoid such atrocities. When he tried to do it a few years later he was brutally murdered by his own creatures, Calles and Obregon, the latter being a few months afterward "elected" President of Mexico, climbing the presidential chair on the body of his predecessor, his hand still dripping blood of his victim.

Obregon, the murderer of a president in office, was, however, recognized by the United States, notwithstanding that the situation described in Mr. Lansing's note of 1916 was as bad or worse in 1922.

When Obregon started to impose his henchman Calles as his successor to the "presidency" the Mexican people again tried to get rid of their tyrants and started a new struggle, selecting as their leader Adolfo de la Huerta, until then connected with Obregon and Calles, but willing to start an orderly government; they thought that as he was known in the United States for his dealings and agreement to repay the Mexican debt and could be accepted by the American Government. How mistaken they were! The embargo on arms and ammunitions was tightened more than ever for the defenseless Mexican people, while Obregon was given without payment in cash, by the American Government, American arms and ammunition, airplanes and bombs in very large quantities. With such a powerful help the Mexican people were again enslaved and De la Huerta came to add the endless group of exiled Mexicans, while thousands of others were again brutally butchered in Mexico.

Now Calles is trying to place Obregon back in the presidency so that they can continue ransacking the country. The Mexican people intended again to make an electoral campaign and all those engaged in such enterprise are falling daily, murdered by the "government" bullets. At the same time that Serrano and his thirteen partisans fell in Mexico City, they "executed" in the same fashion and probably in compliance of "sentences" of the same "court martial" the following persons: Lieut. Col. Augusto Manzanilla at Torreon, 300 miles north of Mexico City; Carles A. Vidal, governor of the State of Chiapas, 300 miles southeast of Mexico City; Gen. Arturo Lazo de la Vega at Pachuca, 60 miles northeast of the capital; Norberto A. Olvera and Alfredo Rodriguez at Zacatecas, 250 miles northwest of the capital. Gen. Vicente Gonzalez and thirteen members of the Morelos state legislature also died a few days ago before firing squads of Obregon and Calles.

What would the American people say if one day thirteen members of, for instance, the Illinois State Legislature were placed before a firing squad and criminally murdered just because they were either Democrats or Republicans? How would the American people act in such a case? What could they do if tyrants and murderers had been imposed upon them as a "government" by a powerful nation, as, for instance, former Imperial Germany supplying said criminals with arms and ammunitions and on the other hand declaring a crime punishable with prison for any one acquiring arms to fight out such tyranny?

Undoubtedly every American in such a case would take the same attitude as we Mexicans now have taken to fight out our oppressors, as otherwise you would not be truly Americans, you would not follow the glorious traditions and examples contained in your Act of Independence, you would not be worthy to belong to "The Land of the Free and the Home of the Brave."

We have read with deep concern a telegram published in the New York Evening Post giving as the "position of the State Department" "that the United States has no right to interfere in the domestic affairs of Mexico." Certainly that is truthful. We do not want the United States to interfere, as we are fully capable of reestablishing constitutional order, the only way to restore for both Mexicans and foreigners all guaranties of life and property and all liberties of creeds and labor, if we are only let alone to do it. But inasmuch as the brigands and tyrants have been constantly armed while the suffering people have been deprived of such a right, it is nothing but just to raise now all the obstacles in our way. If that was done in 1914 to "serve the Mexicans, to serve mankind, a service which was a proud thing to die for," to serve the Mexicans, to serve mankind, we only ask that the embargo on arms and ammunitions be raised for the benefit of the Mexican people, who know how and are proud to die serving their country and serving mankind.

The same telegram published in the Evening Post of October 7 states that "the newly appointed Ambassador to Mexico continued his research into Mexican affairs in preparation of his leaving for its new post." A real statesman, and undoubtedly Mr. Coolidge is a very able one, will easily realize that in sending a new ambassador to deal with such cabal of criminals would be to sanction their latest murders, and America has never before sanctioned crime; it would show friendship to the murderers, and America has never lowered its standards in such a manner; it would show the uttermost disregard for the Mexican people; it would be nothing more than the consent and approval to the abject state of slavery to which they have been reduced, without experiencing any sense of moral responsibility at confirming the subjugation of 14,000,000 souls, without estimating his responsibility before the American people for his conduct, because his action could not help but provoke a fierce and inextinguishable hatred of Americans among the people whom he would help to enslave.

This attitude can not be taken by any man holding the same supreme magistrature that in glorious days was held by Washington and Lincoln and is th: compelled to follow their examples and traditions of independence and liberty. DR. E. P. HURTADO.

Minister Regards Charitable Organizations Request as Unreasonable.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a regular subscriber for The Washington Post since taking up my residence in this city, I am requesting space in your columns for this letter.

Being a minister, my rule is to encourage always every legitimate charitable effort, but I received a few days ago a request that seemed to me to be most unreasonable.

I was requested, over the phone, to buy tickets for an entertainment sponsored by a worthy charitable organization, which is to be held in a well-known local hotel. Thinking that a mistake possibly had been made in calling me, I asked the representative if she knew that I am ministering to a colored congregation, the Fifteenth Street Presbyterian Church. She replied that she did, but that her organization helps colored children, too. I then asked if the purchasers of these tickets, being colored, would be admitted to the concert. She replied that she doubted that they would. Then, of course, I could not do otherwise than respectfully decline to help in that way.

It is well known to me that charitable work for colored people would be seriously handicapped were it not for the generosity of white donors. Very little work of this character has been accomplished without the money of white people figuring largely in it. While white people have bought thousands of dollars worth of tickets for colored affairs that they neither used nor intended to use, but I have never heard of one who presented himself for admission, holding a ticket, who was not welcomed with becoming grace.

We should be willing to permit such an organization to present its appeal for support to our congregation, but certainly we should not be expected to stultify ourselves by purchasing admission tickets that will not admit us solely and only because God in His infinite wisdom decided to make us colored. We can not join with mere mortals in holding in contempt the results of God's sovereign will and good pleasure. H. B. TAYLOR,

Minister Fifteenth Street Presbyterian Church.

Woman Visitor to Devastated Areas in Belgium Deplores Destruction of Defenseless Cities During World War.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am quite sure that the writer of the editorial, "Louvain," in a recent number of The Post, has not visited the devastated areas of Belgium or he would sympathize with the American architect, who has insisted that the inscription which condemned the Teutonic fury should stand as written. The American architect knows whereof he speaks.

You remarked "It is a pity." One who has recently traveled through the ravaged Belgian towns can only say that the pity is that the German people would for 50 years, allow a military machine to be built that would perpetuate such horrors on defenseless cities; that they should have a machine whose military command would order horses to be stabled in the famous Louvain Library; that torches should be applied again and again to the building.

The "Spanish fury" under the Duke of Alva has been perpetuated for about 350 years in Belgium. Surely the Spaniards were no more to blame in the sixteenth century for this fury than the "cultured" Germans in this twentieth century.. After visiting Louvain, Malines, Durant and many other small villages, I feel that the time has not come or ever will to condone the cause of Germany in her rape of Belgium.

Georgia Mountain School Will Decrease Rapid Pace of Rural Folk to Cities, Reader Says.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs has established in the north Georgia mountains a school for mountain children that is being copied all over the country. There are 208 pupils in the school, but I dare say that 10,000 mountain folk could be called students of this great "light in the mountains."

It is causing the back woods to be the more attractive and will lessen the pace to the cities and, as a result, will lessen the ever-increasing demands for charity. For it is a fact that charity demands result largely by country folk, unskilled, without any means, who go to the city to live. They forsake the dearest gift of nature when they leave the great open spaces, with the pure air, free water, free, full and good fresh farm food.

It is hoped that the country will more and more learn of this school and copy its methods and work in every mountain and valley.

Slave Law and Prohibition.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The prohibition amendment has brought about a condition in our political life not unlike the condition brought about by the fugitive slave law. The politicians were then seesawing just as they now are. Then the general public was either damning or blessing the fugitive slave law, just as the general public now is damning or blessing the prohibition amendment.

The two great political parties were then attempting to keep the slavery question out of politics and political platforms, and both were looking for presidential candidates who could straddle the fence and ignore the question, just as the two great political parties are now attempting to keep the prohibition amendment out of politics and political platforms. But the public now, as then, will not be denied its favorite topic.

As one modern writer on our political history put it in his very brief chronological political history of the United States—"1849: The slavery issue gradually led to a process of change within the old parties," etc.

Whether Senator Heflin, or Norris, or Reed of Missouri, or Edwards, or Willis, or Glass, or ex-Senator Underwood, or McAdoo, or Gov. Ritchie—all outspoken men, either individually or severally—any one or group interpret the "will" of the people, time alone can tell. But that the parallel to date between the fugitive slave law and the prohibition amendment is most startling no one can deny. How much longer the parallel will continue and what the solution will be is in the hands of the statesmen of the near future. GROVER W. AYERS.

Religion and Politics.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "B. E. I." in your issu of October 11, quotes the late President Roosevelt as predicting the eventual election of a Catholic President. He who votes for a candidate because he is a Catholic has forgotten his Americanism; he who votes against a man solely because he is a Catholic has wandered far afield from worthwhile Americanism.

The United States is neither Catholic nor Protestant; it is a nation of American citizens. Religion is of the heart, not of the halls of Congress or of legislative enactment.

"Protestant citizenship" and "Catholic citizenship," savor of the "old order of things," when the state made profession of religion.

The old order was a curse to the race. It must not be restored.

Under the Stars and Stripes there is but one citizenship—"American citizenship."

Keep church and state apart in the heart and they will remain apart on the statute books. JOHN N. QUINN.

Religion in a Nutshell.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: From time to time there has been discussion in the columns of The Post as to what religion really is. I think the rules John Wesley laid down for himself cover the whole question as to what religion "pure and undefiled" really is. Here are Wesley's seven rules:

Do all the good you can,
By all the means you can,
In all the ways you can,
In all the places you can,
At all the times you can,
To all the people you can,
As long as ever you can.

To my mind, he who follows those simple rules will have the best sort of religion, for he will put in force the Golden rule. W. H. S.

While World Seems at Peace and Is Striving to Make It Permanent, There Is Great Restlessness Among the People, Constitution Is Attacked, Law Is Defied, Courts Held in Disrespect, Writer Says, Urging Appearance of a Strong Hand Is Need.

To the Editr of The Post—Sir: Practically all the world is talking of peace, and of finding some way to forever do away with war as a means of settling international disputes. More and more the minds of the people, and of those who are charged with the duties of government, are turned toward finding a solution for this problem. Arbitration, the League of Nations and the World Court have each in turn been discussed in the halls of Congress and of parliaments, on the platform and in the pulpit. Associations have been organized for the purpose of fomenting and directing such discussions, and yet we are all at sea. All admit the desirability of perpetual peace and amity between nations, in the interest of civilization and humanity, yet how is this much-desired end to be brought about?

There is a restlessness among the people of every nation. Even in Japan, where national amity has been proverbial since history has been available, this restlessness is making itself felt. Revolutions are springing up almost everywhere, and in those lands where revolutions are not resorted to this unrest is growing more tense. In our own United States this restlessness is making itself felt by attacks on our courts, by armed contests between union and nonunion labor, by the growing spread of bolshevism and all that term implies.

It is found in the halls of Congress, where the good of the whole people is sacrificed to selfish interests. The laws are no longer respected, and demands that they be rigidly enforced are met with sneers and contemptuous remarks. Class legislation is rapidly becoming the rule in Congress. The Constitution is forgotten, or intentionally ignored, in the demands made upon Congress. Attacks on the courts have been going on for almost 100 years. The attacks have been more systematic and more venomous in the present century. Many efforts have been made to induce Congress to limit the power of the courts, especially in the way of granting injunctions in labor disputes.

The late President Lincoln was one of the first to raise his voice in warning against these attacks on the courts. When he was a young man, in an address before the Young Men's Lyceum of Sprigfield, Ill., in speaking of the danger to our institutions, he said:

"At what point, then, is the approach of danger to be expected? I answer, if it ever reaches us, it must spring up among us. It cannot come from abroad. If destruction be our lot, we must ourselves be its author and finisher. As a Nation of freemen, we must live through all time or die by suicide. There is even now something of ill omen among us. I mean the increasing disregard of law which pervades the country, the growing disposition to substitute the wild and furious passions in lieu of the sober judgment of courts, and the worse than savage mobs, for the executive ministers of justice. This disposition is fearful in any community, and that it exists in ours, though grating to our feeling to admit, it would be a violation of truth and an insult to intelligence to deny. I know the American people are much attached to their government. I know they would suffer much for its sake. I know they would endure even long and patiently before they would think of exchanging it for another. Yet notwithstanding all this, if the laws be continually despised and disregarded, if their rights to be secure in their person and property are held by no better tenure than the caprice of a mob, the alienation of their affection from the Government is a natural consequence, and to that sooner or later it must come."

After pointing out this danger he gave the method to counteract it, saying: "To the support of the Constitution and the laws let every American pledge his life, his property and his sacred honor. * * * Let reverence for the laws be breathed by every American mother to the lisping babe that prattles on her lap. Let it be taught in schools, in seminaries and in colleges. Let it be written in primers, spelling books and almanacs. Let it be preached from the pulpits, proclaimed in legislative halls and enforced in courts of justice. In short, let it become the political religion of the Nation."

Grand, lofty admonitions, these. Yet we are drifting away from them. Are we not in great national danger? Look over the world—revolutions almost everywhere. Our neighbor on the South is in a continual state of revolution. No sooner is one suppressed than another rises. There is hardly a country on the continent of Europe that is not in this state of threatened revolution. Germany alone is most free from this unrest. Poland is a national powder magazine that may set all Europe in war. Spain, Portugal, Greece, the Balkan states, even Italy and France, are likely to burst into civil war at a moment's warning.

The strong hand is needed. The fires of unrest and revolt were spread by the conclusion of the World War. On the overthrow of European monarchies we thought universal peace had been won. How vain the thought! Nations that before were quiet at once broke into a fever of unrest. Instead of "making the world safe for democracy" we spread firebrands of revolt. The people everywhere broke into factions, each faction endeavoring to gain possession of the governments. In our own country, never in all its history has there been so much unrest as since the war; never has th: e been such disregard of laws, such disrespect of courts. What will be the end?

A Test Every Man Past 40 Should Make

Medical authorities agree that 65% of all men past middle age (many much younger) are afflicted with a disorder of the prostate gland. Aches in feet, legs and back, frequent nightly risings, sciatic pains are some of the signs—and now a well-known American scientist has written a remarkably interesting Free Book that tells of other symptoms and just what they mean. No longer should a man approaching or past the prime of life be content to regard these pains and conditions as inevitable signs of approaching age. Already more than 40,000 men have used the amazing method described in this book to restore their health and vigor—and to restore the prostate gland to its proper functioning. Send immediately for this book. If you will mail your request to The Electro Thermal Company, 178-G Macy Bldg., Steubenville, Ohio—the concern that is distributing this book for the author—it will be sent to you absolutely free, without obligation. Simply send name and address. But don't delay, for the edition of this book is limited.—Adv.

ACTIVITIES OF THE CLUBS

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

THE National Society Daughters of the American Revolution began its thirty-seventh year of existence last week, having held its formal organization meeting in Washington on October 11, 1890. The handful of patriotic women who answered the call of its founders have grown to an army of 160,000 strong. There are nearly 3,000 chapters of the D. A. R. in the United States and foreign lands.

The national board of management will meet in Memorial Continental Hall on Thursday next and State regents and other members will be present from all parts of the country. This is the quarterly meeting of the board and it is said that hundreds of new members will be admitted to the society at that time. The board meeting will be presided over by Mrs. Alfred J. Brosseau, president general, who is just completing a tour of State conferences of the society which has carried her into many States.

Last Thursday Mrs. Brosseau gave a notable address before the State conference of the D. A. R. in West Virginia, in which she stressed the vital principles for which the organization is standing at the present time.

Mrs. Brosseau warned the members of the organization to guard against any attempts to break up the American home.

The District chairman of the Federation Department of American Citizenship, Mrs. J. Jerome Lightfoot, recently sent out a call to the federated clubs of the District to emphasize their work in civic development and Americanization in their club programs this year. She asked that all club meetings open with a pledge of allegiance to the flag and a short prayer, and recommended that the clubs study the Constitution of the United States and observe all national holidays with special programs. The officials of the District Department of American Citizenship includes: Vice chairman, Mrs. Sarah E. Deeds; division of Americanization, Mrs. Jesse A. Cunningham; division of Indian affairs, Mrs. J. Harry Cunningham; division of civic development, Mrs. Mary Lamond White; committee on the flag, Mrs. M. S. Parke, and committee on patriotism, Mrs. Nancy D. North.

Interest in the federation's national election next spring grows apace, and the campaign committee of the Maryland Federation of Women's Clubs, which is working in behalf of Mrs. John F. Sippel, of Baltimore, as the next president of the federation, held a tea on Saturday at the residence of Mrs. Benjamin W. Corkran, in Roland Park, Baltimore, when the following members of the campaign committee were present:

Mrs. John L. Alcock, president, Maryland Federation; Mrs. Virginia White Speel, president, District of Columbia Federation; Mrs. John D. McCabe, president, Delaware Federation; Mrs. Albert Sioussat, honorary president, Maryland Federation; Mrs. Benj. W. Corkran, honorary president, Maryland Federation; Mrs. R. S. J. Dutrow, vice president, Maryland Federation; Mrs. A. Norman Ward, Mrs. Walter S. Sheppard, Mrs. Melvin Stewart and Miss Estelle T. Moore, District presidents; Mrs. J. Enos Ray, Mrs. John Work Garrett, Mrs. A. R. Lee, Mrs. W. W. Bride, Mrs. William F. Rogers, Mrs. George A. Hax, Mrs. W. W. Edmondson, jr., Mrs. J. Manning Parsons, Mrs. Page Edmunds, Mrs. Kerner F. Brown, Mrs. Isaac T. Parks, jr., Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, Mrs. Charles F. Behrens, Mrs. Charles O'D. Mackall, Mrs. Robert E. Delaplaine, Mrs. Henry S. Frank, Mrs. John Paul Troy, Mrs. Clarence V. Fowler, Miss V. M. Kellar, Mrs. J. Edgar Myers, Mrs. Irene Maloy, Mrs. Earl W. Chafee, Mrs. J. W. Avirett Thomas, Mrs. F. A. Taylor, Miss Anne Sloan, Mrs. George H. Wilson, Mrs. Edward E. Lamkin, Mrs. A. Lee Muse, Mrs. Charles R. Posey, Mrs. William A. McKewen, Miss Maria Baldwin, Mrs. John Kilduff, Mrs. Howard S. Kroh, Mrs. J. Hughes Murphy, Mrs. G. Abram Moss, Mrs. Ernest L. Bullard and Mrs. Rudolph S. Allen.

Mrs. Albert C. Gleaves, chairman of the surgical dressings unit of the District Chapter of the Red Cross is calling for more volunteers for work in that section of Red Cross activities. The surgical dressings and bandages are made for local hospitals and the Instructive Visiting Nurses' Society by volunteers of the District Chapter. This releases the nurses for strictly nursing duties.

The surgical dressing unit of the local chapter last year made more than 200,000 dressings.

No previous instruction is nedeed in order to volunteer for this work and application should be made at District Chapter headquarters, 821 Sixteenth street northwest, when full details will be given.

The District of Columbia Chapter, Daughters of Founders and Patriots of America, held its October meeting at the home of the president, Lillian A. Norton, 1840 Biltmore street, Tuesday. Reports of officers and committees were given. Yearbooks for the season 1927-28 were distributed. Six names were presented for membership in the chapter. The resignation of the historian, Mrs. Caroline Kirk, was accepted on account of ill health, and Mrs. Grace F. Meeks was elected to fill the vacancy. Mrs. Ellsworth A. Corbett was elected to fill the office of councilor, made vacant by Mrs. Meeks.

An invitation has been received from Dr. R. A. Pearson, president of the University of Maryland, to hold the semiannual meeting of the Prince Georges County Federation of Women's Clubs at the university, October 28.

Assignments are now being made to those who will assist in the pageant "The Spirit of Women in the Home" which the federation will produce in November. This pageant was written by Mrs. O. F. Cook, Lanham, and will be directed by Mrs. Charles B. Hanford. Mrs. Guy Meloy is chairman.

The Progress Club of College Park will hold its first meeting of the year Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Wirt Harrison.

The Political Study Club held its first meeting of the season yesterday afternoon at the Washington Club, 1717 Seventeenth street.

Mrs. Frank Morrison, the new president, presided. Mrs. Rose Yates Forrester was chairman of program. Houston Thompson spoke on "Public Welfare in Government." Miss Mary Apple, contralto, sang. The hostesses were the two vice presidents of the club, Mrs. Wallace Streater and Mrs. Sidney F. Taliaferro.

The Woman's Community Club of Kensington held its first meeting in the school auditorium Monday. A program of vocal solos was given by Mrs. Francis M. Shore. The club son, "Our Pledge," written by Mrs. C. B. Graham, was sung by the third grade pupils. Vacation sketches were given by Mrs. G. C. Shinn, Mrs. C. E. Miles, Mrs. W. S. Pratt, jr., Mrs. H. M. Milburn, Mrs. J. T. Lewis, Mrs. J. G. Schrivener and Mrs. Florence Wright. Refreshments were served by the hostess committee. The next meeting will be held Monday, October 24.

The literature department will meet at the home of Mrs. R. G. Merritt tomorrow at 2 p. m.

The Sodality Union had its regular monthly meeting Monday. The president, Miss Mary Mattingly, announced that Carroll Hall has been engaged for the annual bazaar, which will be held December 5, 6 and 7.

A plate supper will be served on each night of the bazaar, under the direction of Miss Bernice Knott. Miss Johanna Baumann is to have charge of the refreshment stand, and will also sell Christmas seals, cards and ribbon. Mrs. J. Floyd Maley will be in charge of the gift table; Miss Bernadette Dore, novelties; Miss Mamie Leonberger, Christmas baskets, and Miss Annie Hickey, fancy articles.

A card party will be given by the St. Patrick's Sodality at the New Willard Hotel, November 10 at 8:15 p. m., for the benefit of the Sodality Union.

Miss Minnie Mahler, chairman of the lecture committee, reported on the first lecture on Dogma of the Immaculate Conception and the Shrines of Our Blessed Lady, held in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Catholic University. These lectures are being given by the Rev. Bernard A. McKenna, D. D., under the auspices of the Sodality Union. The lectures are free.

Miss Sarah Walsh, chairman of the transportation committee, reported on the trip to La Plata, Md., with the Sodality Union October 23 for the dedication of the new Sacred Heart School. This school is in memory of the Rev. Brent Matthews, and will be dedicated by Archbishop Curley. Gov. Ritchie will attend, and will deliver an address. Mrs. Agnes Whalen McLaughlin will sing.

Delegates and alternates were also elected to the District State convention, which is to be held the first week in December. The applications of Mrs. Edna Lee Tidd, Mrs. E. P. Richardson, Cornelia L. Hamilton, Lelia Moncure Brown and Mrs. James E. Burns were presented for membership and accepted. Announcement was made of the card party, which is to be held at the home of Mrs. Maud Howell Smith, for the benefit of the chapter, the evening of Tuesday November 1. The annual rummage sale of the chapter will be held November 4 and 5.

The next meeting of the Clover Club will be held in the new Bradford Home School, Brookville road and Taylor street, Chevy Chase, Md., Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. Mrs. Harris Barnum, the president of the school, will be hostess.

Miss Helena Reed, president, presided at the business meeting of the Soroptimist Club held at the Lafayette Hotel Wednesday. Annual committee reports were read and recommendations were made for the following year. The nominating committee was appointed, Ruby Lee Minar, chairman, Rose Place and Margaret Gillespie. The election of officers will be held November 9.

The question of having an installation banquet will be discussed and voted upon at the weekly luncheon Wednesday, when Miss Mary Anderson, chief of the Women's Bureau, Department of Labor, will be honor guest and speaker. Nell Hysong will entertain the club members at her summer home this week-end at Hysong's-on-the-Bay. Helen Keller and her teacher, Mrs. Anna Sullivan Macey, who will be in Washington next week to speak at a meeting in D. A. R. Continental Hall, sponsored by the Lions Club, are honorary members of the San Francisco Soroptimist Club, and the local club expects to attend the meeting in a body.

The creative groups of the District League of American Pen Women are making plans for a literary festival to be given at the close of the club year. The festival will be under the direction of Dr. Anita Maris Boggs, president; Miss Elizabeth Mallott Barnes, second vice president and director general of the group activities, and the chairmen of the groups.

The music group will give the first of a series of Sunday musicales this afternoon at 4:30 p. m. at the clubrooms, 1108 Sixteenth street northwest. Mrs. Sade Catharine Coles and Miss Irene Juno will have charge of the programs. The musicales will be given every second Sunday hereafter.

Dr. Boggs has appointed Miss Edna Roberts as chairman of the membership committee. Serving with her are Mrs. Eugenie D. Saugstad, Mrs. J. Harry Cunningham, Miss Irene Juno and Mrs. Isabel Shepard. Miss Evelyn Sutton Weems has taken the chairmanship of the hospitality committee and Mrs. Ellis Logan will serve as chairman for the fine arts group.

During the past week three of the groups held their inaugural meetings. Monday the juvenile literature section met under the direction of Miss Ruth Forney, who gave an outline of the year's work. Mrs. Ida Donnelly Peters discussed the best markets for juvenile stories and the types most in demand. Mrs. Victoria Faber Stevenson conducted the special features class Tuesday. The parliamentary law group, Miss Bertha Frances Wolfe, chairman, met Thursday. Miss Alice Hager has taken the temporary chairmanship of the poetry section and will meet with the group at the clubrooms tomorrow at 8 p. m.

Mrs. Merritt O. Chance will be hostess at the Woman's City

SOCIETY

AROUND of festivities featured the visit of President and Mrs. Coolidge to Pittsburgh, where they went to honor the celebration of Founder's Day at Carnegie Institute. Their chief host was Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, who was eager to exhibit the attractions of his home city to the President and the first lady of the land. The first entertainment was a breakfast at Secretary Mellon's home. After this a motor trip of Pittsburgh and its environs followed and the party lunched at the residence of Secretary Mellon.

A picturesque incident was the visit to the famous Block House. President Coolidge is the first Chief Executive to inspect this landmark, although George Washington, as provisional colonel had been there several times before he became President. Accompanying the President were Mrs. Coolidge, Secretary Mellon, Secretary of Labor James J. Davis and several European diplomats.

BRILLIANCY was added to the week's social program by the presence in nearby waters of the Japanese training squadron. Official entertaining of its officers in the Capital occupied a good portion of the daily calendar. The functions began with the dinner by Secretary of the Navy Curtis D. Wilbur. President Coolidge entertained at breakfast in honor of Admiral Nagano.

The Ambassador of Japan, Mr. Matsudaira, gave a dinner. Covers were laid for 60, and in addition to Japanese and American naval officers other officials of the United States were among the guests.

Admiral Nagano in turn entertained at a luncheon on his flagship, Asama, in the harbor of Annapolis, and he also held a reception on the Asama in the afternoon which was attended by more than a thousand persons. All social roads that afternoon led to Annapolis, as the service atmosphere is one which is always greatly appreciated by Washingtonians where the Navy circles are so pre-eminent.

THE winter colony always gives added emphasis to our season, and the indications are that it will contain many noted hostesses from other cities and centers who have made it a practice in recent years to pass at least a part of the season in this Capital, just as those in England always plan for a few weeks at London during the season. This contributes a cosmopolitan atmosphere to the social affairs, which is another charm of Washington in the season.

A sisterly reciprocity between the leading debutantes of New York, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Richmond and Washington in the matter of dates for debut teas and presentations has made the debutante calendar a matter of intercity concern and will be so more than ever this year if all reports prove true.

Now that Washington debutantes have acquired the habit of beginning their year of years with a presentation at the Court of St. James if possible, it is interesting to note that two of this year's debutantes here, Miss Alice Davis, daughter of the Secretary of War and Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, and Miss Evelyn Walker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Walker, were presented to King George and Queen Mary of England at drawing rooms last spring.

Washington also looks with particular attention to see what are the dates announced for Baltimore and Philadelphia assemblies and the exclusive functions of like character in Richmond and New York. Of course, the debutantes with Southern affiliations look to be invited to the St. Cecilia ball in Charleston, S. C. It has been said that it is easier to be presented at the British court than to be invited to this old Charleston function unless you have the necessary connections with the conservative Southern city.

Another debutante custom often followed is for debutantes of other cities to be first introduced there and then make their debuts in Washington. These progressive debuts, as it were, have been quite the vogue for several seasons and form a happy means of additional friendships between the younger social sets of many cities, enhanced of course by the nation-wide activities of the junior league.

THE sport of kings lures many to the Laurel race track these beautiful October afternoons, which are, as Thomas Nelson Page delighted to call them, "veritable smiles of nature." Officials are often seen in the groups congregated to watch the feats of the thoroughbreds, and although congressional hearings have begun at the Capitol in preparation for the opening session of the Seventieth Congress, yet it is to be noticed several motors bearing the word "Congressional" swing out of Capitol Hill over the Maryland hills to the center of the racing excitement.

President and Mrs. Coolidge do not attend races, nor do the Cabinet members, yet in previous administrations before the Civil War Chief Executives have enjoyed this type of recreation from official duties.

Romance appears to have invaded the ranks of royalty within the last few weeks, and the announcement of engagements at several courts were much talked of in Washington's international colony. Among these was the engagement of the vivacious Princess Irene, 23-year-old sister of former King George of Greece, to Prince Christian Schaumbourg-Lippe of Denmark. Prince Christian is a nephew of the King of Denmark, and the young people have known each other for years. Another announcement was that of the betrothal of Princess Victoria of Germany, sister of the former kaiser, to M.

Dvorjanin Alexander Subkoff, a Russian student some years her junior. Prince Henry of Prussia, brother of the former kaiser and of the bride, was present at the bethrothal ceremony.

Twenty-one guns boomed out the joyous news to the Belgian people on Tuesday of the birth of a daughter to Crown Prince Leopold of Belgium and Princess Astrid, niece of the King of Sweden. Coincident with the announcement of her birth came official notice of her full name, which is rather a heavy burden for such young shoulders, it being Princess Josephine Charlotte Ingeborg Margaret Elizabeth Astrid of Belgium.

That the season is fairly under way is shown by the many affairs of the past week. The first one was the reception last Sunday night given by the Minister of Egypt and Mme. Samy Pasha at the legation. It was in celebration of the tenth anniversary of the accession of the King of Egypt.

Dr. O. C. Kiep, the counselor of the German Embassy, entertained at luncheon both Tuesday and Wednesday for the other members of the German delegation.

Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, widow of the former Vice President, who is the guest of Mrs. Thomas F. Walsh, had several entertainments given for her last week. Mrs. Walsh gave a luncheon for her on Friday, and last night she was the guest of honor at a dinner given by Judge and Mrs. C. C. McChord at the Willard.

The social program for this week will begin this afternoon with a tea at Fort Myer by Mrs. Charles P. Summerall, wife of the chief of staff. It will be for some of the officers and the ladies who were so helpful at the carnival held recently for the benefit of the Army relief.

Tomorrow night the Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Curtis D. Wilbur, will entertain at dinner in honor of Admiral Sir Walter Cowan, Bt., who is due in the morning at the navy yard on board the H. M. S. Calcutta. The ball given at the British Embassy Tuesday night will be preceded by a number of dinners. Among the hosts are the Acting Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. Henry Chilton, the Commercial Counselor of the embassy, Sir John Joyce Broderick, and Lady Broderick, and also several of the bachelor members of the embassy.

Another dinner Tuesday evening will be given at the Arts Club of Washington, when the Governor of Hawaii, Mr. Wallace R. Farrington, will be the guest of honor.

The Assistant Secretary of War for Aviation, Mr. Trubee Davison, will entertain at a dinner Wednesday night at the Willard for Sir Philip Sassoon, Undersecretary of State for Air of Great Britain. The following day the Minister of Canada, Mr. Vincent Massey, will be host at luncheon in honor of Admiral Sir Walter Cowan. That afternoon there will be a tea on board the H. M. S. Calcutta and the H. M. S. Cairo.

The first tea for the debutantes will be on Saturday, when Mrs. Helen Ray Hagner will entertain for them at St. Mark's Club. Out-of-town guests are expected to be present.

Our New

French Shop

long and short of the new mode—

—with conclusive evidence that correct skirts are adding inches—and dipping gracefully.

Down in Back---

Drecoll considers this version of the uneven hemline particularly adaptable to evening frocks—and Vionnet expresses it even in tailored sheer crepe—a frock that uses a network of tiny tucks to accent its tailored appeal.

Down in Front---

$195

Down at Right---

Down Both Sides---

Thus the uneven hemline fulfills its destiny in captivating "Autumn"—a sheer crepe dance frock by Miler Soeurs, that we have reproduced faithfully in autumn tones of sheer crepe and velvet for the debutante.

Two fingers below

Yes, two fingers below the knee is the correct length for smart skirts, according to no less an authority than Worth—and an uneven hemline points the way to even greater chic in gowns that make their appearance at dusk.

Jones—Sommerville Nuptials.

Miss Susan Randolph Sommerville, daughter of Mrs. Henry C. Sommerville and the late Dr. Henry C. Sommerville, of Five Oaks, Clarke County, Va., and Mr. Gwynne Harrison Jones, of Millwood, Va., were married on October 8 at 6 o'clock in Meade Memorial Church, White Post, Va. Preceding the entrance of the bridal party, Mrs. George R. Green sang "Perfect Love," with Mrs. Charles O. Dearmont presiding at the organ. Miss Mary Beverly Sommerville, sister of the bride and maid of honor, wore a gown of pink taffeta, and carried an arm bouquet of pink roses and blue delphiniums. Miss Florence Courtney Jones, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Elizabeth Lee were bridesmaids. They wore period frocks of blue taffeta, and carried pink roses. Ensign George L. Jones, U. S. N., brother of the bridegroom, acted as best man.

The bride entered the church on the arm of Col. S. Rolfe Millar, who gave her away. Her gown was of satin and lace with a court train. She wore a tulle veil, held in place by orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and roses.

Among the guests were Mrs. William Blackwell, of Northumberland; Mr. Lee Luquer and Mr. George Sherley, of New York; Mrs. Ada Sommerville Hatcher, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Sommerville, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bell, Mrs. W. C. Hunt, Miss Virgie Arledge and Miss Sophie W. Sommerville, of Washington; Mr. Edward Sommerville, of Albemarle; the Rev. and Mrs. John F. Coleman, of Pulaski, Va.; Mr. James Sommerville, of Newport News and Washington; Mrs. Florence Millar, Miss Elizabeth Millar and Col. S. Rolfe Millar, of Front Royal, Va.

A home wedding was celebrated at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Banham, 1310 Kearney street, on October 1, at 2 o'clock, when Miss Lillian M. Banham was married to Mr. George M. Rankin, and immediately after the ceremony they started on a motor trip to Tennessee to visit the former home of Mr. Rankin. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. Harvey Dunham, of the Western Presbyterian Church. The bride was attended by her cousin, Miss Evelyn F. Orr, of Philadelphia, as bridesmaid, and Mrs. Rodney Thomas as matron of honor. The bridegroom was attended by Mr. Samuel J. Orr, of Philadelphia.

Among those present were Mrs. William Erath and Miss Evelyn Erath, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Mr. and Mrs. F. N. Orr, of Philadelphia.

Warren—Daniel Wedding.

The marriage of Miss Ruth Adair Daniel, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Adair Daniel, to Mr. William Howard Warren, son of Mrs. George G. Warren, took place Monday evening at 8 o'clock, in Calvary Methodist Episcopal Church, the Rev. Mark Depp officiating.

Autumn flowers, palms and ferns formed an effective background for the wedding party, and a program of nuptial music was played by Mrs. Mabel Linton Williams and Miss Dorothy Reddish sang.

The bride walked to the altar with her father, who gave her in marriage. She wore a gown of ivory bridal satin, designed along old-fashioned lines with a close-fitting bodice and a bouffant skirt, short in front and graduated to the back, of rose point lace. A court train of satin edged with rose point lace and embroidered in pearls hung in graceful folds from the shoulder. Her tulle veil was held in place with a band of lace embroidered in pearls and caught on each side with a cluster of orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of bride roses, sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor was Miss Katherin C. Buynitsky, who wore a gown of canary chiffon and chantilly lace made on period lines, quite tight bodice and graduated bouffant skirt of lace falling over a chiffon skirt banded in silver ribbon and caught with French flowers, and on the left side of the bodice a large bow of silver ribbon with one long end falling to the floor and giving the effect of a train. She wore a Juliet cap of silver ribbon held on one side with a wreath of blue flowers, and carried an arm bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums and blue delphinium,, tied with yellow and blue ribbon.

The bridesmaids were Miss Ada Swigart, Miss Virginia Schmucker, Miss Mildred Hanson, Miss Pauline Burton. They wore dainty frocks of chiffon and lace with silver bows, one end of which formed a short train. The chiffon was in shades from yellow to deep orange, carrying out the autumn coloring. They had bands of silver ribbon in their hair caught with wreaths of yellow shaded flowers on either side of the head, and they carried arm bouquets of chrysanthemums in shades of yellow to match their dresses and tied with ribbon of the same shade.

Mr. Cashell Shoemaker was the best man and the ushers were Mr. Robert Graham, a cousin of the bride; Mr. Douglas Davis, Mr. Land Hess and Mr. George Shipley.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents, where quantities of autumn flowers, palms and ferns were used. Mrs. Daniel, mother of the bride, was assisted by Mrs. Warren, mother of the bridegroom, who wore a gown of dephinium blue brocaded velvet, made on straight lines with a slight drape at the left, which was caught with silver flowers. Mrs. Daniel was in a gown of coral chiffon velvet made along draped lines and trimmed in rhinestones, with a short train falling from the waistline.

Following the reception, Mr. Warren and his bride departed for a wedding trip to Florida, Mrs. Warren wearing a brown crepe-back satin gown with a two-tone brown sport coat trimmed in mink and a hat to match. They will be at home after November 15, at 1661 Newton street. The bride is a member of Sigma Epsilon Sorority and Zata Tau Alpha Sorority and many pre-nuptial parties were given in her honor.

Mr. and Mrs. Granville Brumbaugh and their daughter, Miss Mary Ann Brumbaugh, are visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Waldman, on Chesapeake street, Forest Hills.

Committees Named for Ball.

Miss Alice Mae Hines, daughter of Mrs. Mary Emma Hines and the late Reuben P. Hines, sr., and Mr. William M. Zeltman, of Elkridge, Md., were married last evening at Oak Grove, the home of the bride's mother, near Olney, Md., the Rev. Guy E. Kagey, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, Olney, officiating. Because of a recent death in the family of the bride, only members of the two families and a very few others attended the wedding and the reception which followed. The home was decorated with autumn leaves, ferns, cut flowers and potted plants.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. William J. Hines, of Brighton, Md. She wore a gown of white crepe, and her tulle veil was caught with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of sweetheart roses.

Miss Catherine W. Hines was her sister's maid of honor and only attendant. Her gown was of orchid georgette and she carried pink roses. The best man was the bridegroom's brother, Mr. Irvin R. Zeltman, of Elkridge, and his sister, Miss Ellen Zeltman, of Elkridge, played the marches.

Immediately after the reception Mr. and Mrs. Zeltman departed for a Northern trip. After November 1 they will be at home at Berwyn, Md.

Her shoes are simply stunning but she has old-fashioned FEET!

MODERN women would laugh if they were asked to don the ridiculous "hobble" skirts of a decade ago—but "hobble" shoes are still being worn by many—you know, the kind of footwear that is easy to look at but hard to walk in.

In this age shoes must be more than beautiful—they must be wearable as well, for nowadays feet are being used.

That is why The Red Cross Shoe is the choice of so many well-groomed women today. Not only are they charmingly modish but, thanks to the famous "Limit" lasts and the Arch-Tone arch-support, they fit the foot in action and repose so perfectly as to insure unbelievable ease at every step.

STEAM FOR HEAT—GAS FOR FUEL
Without a Central Heating Plant

Versus: Furnaces, Boilers, Stoves, Work
CLOW Gasteam gives you warmth and comfort quickly on chilly mornings. Just turn a valve and light a burner. There is no big boiler to fire—no piping system to chase steam through.
Also Clow Gasteam keeps you snug and cozy during winter's protracted cold spells—without worry, without work. Each radiator automatically maintains a steady steam pressure.
Clow Gasteam uses the cleanest, handiest fuel on the market—gas, and uses it effectively as well as economically.
Since each radiator operates independently, only used space need be heated. No heat is wasted on vacant rooms.
Convenient buying terms can be arranged.
Representative Installations
Clow Gasteam Radiators have a record of 20 years of use. They are installed in many buildings of all types in this vicinity, including:

Fashions of Capital Women

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

THE interest in the clothes of the ranking official women of the Nation never abates. Although Mrs. Coolidge has been First Lady of the Nation for more than five years, now, her clothes and those of official women attract as much interest as they did in the earlier White House administrations.

Even in the days of the very first mistresses of the White House, what they wore was noted with deepest attention by women generally.

The standard of neat and smart dressing by persons in official life was set in these first years of our National existence. Mrs. John Adams who, went to England with her husband in 1784, when he was made Minister to the Court of St. James, wrote in letters details of the prevailing fashions of the day.

In one of these letters she remarked that, at that time, with the exception of court dress, elaborate styles were less universal in England than in America. "I am not a little surprised," she remarked, "to find dress unless on public occasions so little regarded here. The gentlemen are very plainly dressed, the ladies much less so than with us. 'Tis true you must put a hoop on and have your hair dressed, but a common straw hat, no cap, with only a ribbon on the crown, is thought sufficient dress to go into company. I have seen many ladies, but not one elegant one since I came. There is not that neatness in their appearance which you see in our ladies."

Verified by Every Generation.

It is pleasing in the review of the history of costume and memories of leaders in American society to find this frank opinion of Mrs. Adams, in regard to the clothes acumen of American women, verified in every generation.

The testimony of Mrs. Adams was corroborated in Revolutionary times by a Hessian officer, who reported to his wife, in Europe, as follows, speaking of American women:

"They are great admirers of cleanliness, and keep themselves well shod. They fix their hair every day and gather it up on the back of the head in a chignon, at the same time puffing it up in front. They generally walk about with their heads uncovered, and sometimes, but not often, wear some light fabric on their hair. Now and then some country nymph has her hair flowing down behind her, braided with a piece of ribbon. Should they go out, even though they are living in a hut, they throw a silk wrap about themselves and put on gloves."

It is with a feeling of satisfaction that the Americans in London and Paris during the recent season bring back the news that American women abroad have kept up the precedent for being well shod and well dressed set by these colonial women.

Then, as well as now, the accusation of extravagance was sometimes raised and women were called strictly to account for spending too much on their clothes.

Dorothy Quincy Hancock, who could write her sentiments in regard to clothes in as large a hand as the one in which her husband, John Hancock, signed the Declaration of Independence, put good taste as the first essential of successful dressing.

Her judgment would have been as good in 1927 as it was in 1780 when she said: "I can not forgive a girl who is not pleased with dress and does not dress to please."

Washington Liked Good Clothes.

Washington, who loved fine raiment, fell under the spell of Benjamin Franklin's preachments in behalf of economy coinciding with Count de Rochambeau, who declared that the wives of American merchants and bankers were clad in the height of French fashions and spent too much on their wardrobes. Washington bravely preached simple clothing and set a good example by wearing native made and homespun cloth. His wife wore domestic products, many of them being spun at Mount Vernon on the busy looms there.

Washington's personal sentiments are probably best expressed in the following quotation from his rules of courtesy and decency of behavior: "In your apparel be modest," he wrote, "and endeavor to accomodate nature rather than procure admiration. Keep to the fashion of your equals, such as are civil and orderly with respect to time and place.

"Play not the peacock, looking everywhere about you to see if you be well decked, if your shoes fit well, if your stockings sit neatly and your clothes handsomely."

The autumn bride and her younger sister, the debutante of the season, and perhaps the young matron who is their mother, will not have to worry much about fabrics for the costumes for great events unless it is the bewildering array of fascinating materials spread out for their selection.

This may or may not be written down in histroy as the era of fine dressing but there is no doubt that it will be recorded as a high point in man's ingenuity in fashioning silks and velvets and woolen, chiffon and georgettes, crepes, romaines and the numberless variety of metal cloth and brocades.

The richness of the modern fabrics are really incomparable. Who in days of yore would have expected to get the elegance of velvet with the subtle swish of silk and the sheerness of chiffon or tulle.

Gowns of Gold and Silver Brocade.

While it is true that many a belle of olden days did have silver and gold brocade gowns with the metals beaten or woven into the gowns at great cost and patience, yet it was not possible to secure as many varieties of these as it is today, especially of the modern draped elegance.

When we were children we liked to read about Cinderalla and her gown of golden cloth of the princess who wore her state robe of silver caught from the moonbeams and studded with stars plucked out of the heavens. We have something of this within our own reach now, for many of the chiffon metal cloths appear as if they had been compounded of the golden rays of the sun or moonshine and are studded with such handsome prismatic rhinestones that they twinkle like stars.

The fabrics designed for evening wear and the lustrous creamy white velvets and satin and brocades lend themselves so well for the creation of picture and period costumes, which are the delight of the debutante and the modern bride alike.

Not only the robe de style and the quaint period gown hold their own but there is a new arrival in the ranks of the picturesque and unusual evening costumes founded, perhaps, on the clothes worn by a bride of the Moyen age. The full clinging long skirt and long bodice has a kindly tendency to soften and enhance the beauty of line of the feminine form and, incidentally, is becoming in some to young and old alike.

Earrings Traced to Men.

When we speak of revivals of types of muffs or earrings which will mark the sartorial displays of the winter we think of a revival of a feminine fashion. But to those who have dipped into the fashion history of the centuries it is possible to discover that while it may never happen again, let us hope, earrings and muffs have been outstanding vanities of men in the history of costume.

In the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries men of fashion, even army officers, carried muffs and wore tiny earrings. Of course, some dandies had muffs lace trimmed and the earrings were not tiny at all.

Any way, many of the costumes of this winter—it may be said in passing, designed entirely for the feminine trade—include muffs to match the fur trimming or puffed fur trimmed effects to match the high puffed collars of velvet and cloth.

Earrings in every variety vie for feminine favor. Of course, they include those of huge rhinestone or some kind of stone which looks like diamonds. No one would ever be expected to think of them as diamonds, which the fashion leaders of the world say are so chic this season. To go with them are enormous pins set with these large stones. They are artistic, despite their size, and it is the woman of wealth who has many real diamonds of ordinary size who will dare to wear them. They come in all kinds of colored stones as well, all so large that they flaunt their beauty and lack of preciousness to the world. While they do not cost what precious stones of even moderate size would, they are not inexpensive by any means. The woman who matches each of her daytime costumes to her jewel sets will spend a goodly sum on them this winter.

HARRIS & EWING

Brown Costume for Street.

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman was noticed on Connecticut avenue last week in a gown of dark brown silk figured in small design in white. With this she wore a brown fur scarf and a brown hat. Her pumps were of brown kid and had long straps wrapped Roman sandal effect about her ankles and buckled with tiny buckles on the sides.

Mrs. William Barrett Ridgeley is wearing a coat dress of gray woolen material made on modish tailored lines. Her hat is a high crowned done of grey felt and she wears a gray fox neckpiece with it.

Mrs. Roland Stebbins has a tailored suit of covert cloth in a mixture of gray and black made on simple lines. With this she wears a small black felt hat and a gray fox fur.

Mrs. Thomas Patton Cheesborough, formerly Miss Eleanor Davies, wore for a theater party last week a gown of silver beaded silver cloth. With this she wore an orange velvet evening wrap with a high puffed velvet collar. Huge brocade motifs enhanced the beauty of the wrap.

Mrs. Joseph Davies on the same occasion wore a gown of black velvet made on draped lines and her wrap was of black velvet.

Mrs. Basil Gordon, who came through Washington last week on her way back from Wakefield Manor, Va., the home of Mrs. George Barnett, wore a modish fall suit of African brown cloth with an organdie vest and small beige hat trimmed with grosgrained ribbon.

Mrs. Horatio Nelson Slater, of New York, has an ensemble costume of black satin trimmed with ermine. With this she wears a small black satin draped hat.

Mrs. James Crawford, who sailed for Europe last week, wore for a traveling costume a beige woolen sport suit and a beige felt hat and fox fur. She had a brown top coat to go with it.

Mrs. Legare in Gray.

Mrs. Alexander Legare has a fall costume of silver gray. The dress is of woolen material and made on coat dress effect. Her hat is a high-crowned gray felt one and she wears a gray fox fur with it.

Mrs. George Pulver, formerly Miss Grace Waggaman, daughter of Mrs. Legare, is wearing for the fall days a two-piece dress of dark green wool and a small green felt hat.

Miss Mary Montgomery had on at a tea at the Plaza, New York, last week, a dress of black satin crepe made with a diagonal sectional bodice and a skirt with pleats in the front. She wore a black velvet draped hat and carried a black velvet purse.

Mme. Simopoulis, wife of the Greek Minister, looked very smart at a luncheon last week in a beige costume. The dress was of wool crepe, made on plain tailored lines. Her hat was of the shade of beige to match her gown, and she wore beige footwear.

Mrs. Richardson Gibson, formerly of Washington, but now living in New York, wore at a luncheon there last week a black satin dress and black velvet hat and fox fur.

Mrs. Victor Kauffmann is wearing a dress of black satin, made on conservative lines. With this she wears a draped satin turban and a black fur scarf.

Mrs. Edwin Puller is also wearing a smart black satin fall costume, made with a two-piece dress and a long coat. Her hat is a high-crowned black satin one.

Mrs. Richard Porter Davidson had on at the theater recently a gown of silver cloth made without sleeves and with a round neckline. Her hat was a wrapped turban of silver cloth.

Jaunty Models Seen.

There is a jauntiness about the season's daytime clothes which appeals to every one. It is in direct contrast to the formal afternoon and evening gowns which have taken on dignity and severe smartness, softened by drapes and hanging or floating pieces at one side.

The morning affairs and luncheon see many women, young and old, most becomingly garbed in the modern version of the two-piece suit. There are as many varieties of this, however, as there are days in the season it would seem—Norfolk jacket, Russian blouse, Bell Boy eton, bolero and the attractive and fashionable little loose hip length coats with skirts pleated all around. Some of the best looking of the two piece suits seen at the places smart women congregate for luncheon are copied from the flannel cardigan jacket suits, they can be made of any material from velvet to satin and even chiffon.

One day last week, at a smart luncheon rendezvous there were at least three of the best dressed women out of a dozen wearing some kind of bright colored jacket of velvet or satin or woolen contrasting with a lighter or darker pleated skirt and blouse.

Little Lord Fauntleroy.

One young girl was for all the world like a modern feminized version of Little Lord Fauntleroy in a velvet suit with Lord Fauntleroy lace tirmmed frilled blouse and a jacket copied exactly after that juvenile type. Of course there was a skirt, but it was short and tight Lord Fauntleroy would never have worn the toupee of black velvet pulled down over one eyebrow, but it went with the suit, however, most happily.

The attempts to grasp the shawls from the backs of lovely women and put them into fashion's discard have signally failed. Not only the women of the diplomatic corps and the official women, but those returning from the fashion centers of the world have announced by wearing shawls at the first functions of the season in Washington that they are going to wear shawls for evening this winter, no matter how much Dame Fashion may frown. It must be said in passing, however, that the most successful shawls, from a sartorial viewpoint, are those which are handsome and unusual.

For the sake of warmth and variety many of the fashion leaders here are having nice triangulars of lamb's wool interlining fastened inside the shawl where it turns over. Many women are wearing handsome fur collars and neckpieces.

One woman at the theater recently had on a white velvet draped dress and with this she wore a heavily embroidered white shawl with deep knotted fringe fastened on the left shoulder with a large long diamond bar pin. She wore this shawl so well and handled its heaviness so gracefully that every one wondered if she had not practiced the art before her mirror. Perhaps she had.

Silver Cloth Worn.

Mrs. Joseph Crail, wife of the representative from California, has a gown of silver cloth made with a lattice work of the material forming a double neckline in front and outlining a V-shaped one in back. Mrs. Crail wears a large chiffon rose with velvet leaves on her left shoulder.

Senora de Perez, wife of the commercial attache of the Cuban Embassy, is wearing a satin crepe gown with the dull side of the goods forming inset bands. Her hat is of draped satin, both the glassy and dull side showing.

Mrs. James J. Davis, wife of the Secretary of Labor, wore at a dinner party a gown of white and silver cloth made with round neckline and no sleeves and a draped effect on one side and the other made on straight lines.

Mme. Prochnik, wife of the Minister from Austria, has a coat dress of black satin in a very heavy variety. This has a chiffon underblouse. With it Mme. Prochnik wears a draped hat of satin with a bow on the left side.

Miss Fannie Dial, daughter of former Senator and Mrs. Dial, is wearing a sport suit of knitted woolen material striped in soft colors in band effect about the skirt and bottom of the jacket. With this she wears a beige hat.

Mrs. William B. Hitt wore at luncheon recently a tailored dress of wool georgette crepe made with silk collar effect making the diagonal closing of bodice. Her hat was a glossy felt one.

Mrs. Robert Ash is wearing a dinner with the drapery held in place by a gown of periwinkle blue satin crepe draped on one side with hanging points, large bouquet of pink flowers.

Mrs. James R. Mann, who has returned to Washington from her nome in Illinois, wore at a luncheon last week a costume of olive green wool georgette made with a skirt and waist combined. The skirt had an inverted pleat in the front and was joined to the sectional blouse by a gold kid belt. The long sleeves had raglan shoulders. Her hat was green felt with gold applique.

Miss Hester Ann Lefevre wore at one of the dances a robe de style of lavender taffeta made with a loosely-fitted bodice and full skirt and two enormous purple velvet flowers at her waistline, ending in purple streamers. There was a deep band of purple velvet about the hem of the full skirt.

Mrs. Andrew Duvall wore at a dinner last week a dinner dress of black chiffon and satin. A large bow on the shoulder had ends falling down in the back and front.

Mr. John R. Fitzpatrick will conduct two free demonstrations in speedwriting. You are invited to come and bring friends to these lessons.

On Monday at 11 o'clock Mrs. H. E. Hull is calling a special meeting of the world fellowship committee to plan for the annual Sunday service on November 13.

An open swimming meet is announced for Saturday, October 29. There will be three events—free style races, strokes and dives for form and plunge for distance. Contestants must be at least 13 years of age and have had the required medical examination. Registration must be made at the health education office not later than October 25. No one who has at any time accepted money for the teaching of swimming is eligible.

It is still possible to register for gym classes. Morning classes for homemakers are being featured, meeting at 10 and 11 o'clock four mornings a week. On Tuesday and Thursday mornings the hour is devoted to straight fundamental gym. Wednesday and Friday mornings a combination of half hour of gym and half hour of swimming is given. Classes for the convenience of business women are held on Tuesday and Thursday evenings at 5, 6, 7 and 8 o'clock. Less strenuous work may also be taken in clogging, interpretation and social dancing on Wednesday and Friday evenings. For those not wishing to take class work, individual gymnastics are featured Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings and Tuesday and Thursday evenings.

Between the hours of 12 and 2 it has been decided to allow men visitors to use the bowling alleys. During the other hours men may use the alleys only when accompanied by women friends. The charge is 15 cents a game.

Clothing Is Sought For Flood Refugees

Winter clothing of all descriptions is sought by the District Chapter of the American Red Cross for the relief of Mississipp flood refugees, it was announced yesterday at chapter headquarters, 821 Sixteenth street northwest. Coats, dresses, underwear and stockings are wanted for the women and coats, suits, shirts, underwear and socks for the men.

An appeal also was made for the loan of a centrally located building, where the clothing might be collected, sorted and packed. Mrs. John Allen Dougherty volunteered to take charge of the work. The railroads have agreed to carry free of charge to refugees, carload lots of clothing. The chapter will not receive furs, shoes or hats.

THE PROBLEM

The sum total of the figures on each of the four elephants pictured herewith are all different, with the exception of two of the elephants. These two elephants weigh identically the same and they are twins. You can find them by adding up the figures on each of the elephants and the two with the same sum total are the twins.

The figures "1" to "4" in the circles in the upper left-hand corners of the elephants are simply to identify them. These figures have nothing to do with the elephants' weights. In submitting your solution you must identify the twins by their numbers and give the correct weight of each. Solutions to be properly classified to win must give the correct weight of each twin as well as to correctly identify them by their numbers. This is a game of skill and not a guessing contest.

There are no "ones" or "cyphers" in the elephants. There are no groups on figures—that is, the figure 9 is the highest figure shown. There are no "22s," "55s," "97s," or like groups. If you find a "2" and a "3" are written so closely together that it looks like a "23," it means that the "2" and "3" are to be added just as you would if they were an inch apart. There are no figures in the pictures except in the bodies of the elephants. The tops of the sixes are distinctly curved, and the bottom of the nines are straight or nearly so. There is no trick or illusion in the charts.

GENERAL RULES OF CONTEST

This contest is open to residents of the District of Columbia and the States of Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia. No one directly or indirectly associated with The Washington Post or members of their families will be allowed to participate in this contest.

Contestants may submit as many different solutions as they desire provided a payment of one of the amounts designated in the list of awards shall accompany each solution, but no contestant will be permitted to win more than one award. Once registered a solution can not be changed.

The Washington Post offers these awards for individual efforts. While it is proper for members of one household to work together, or several friends, it is not permissible for more than one of those working in unison to send in a solution of the puzzle. When in the judgment of the Contest Manager more than one member of the same family, or more than one of any number of persons he believes have worked together, send in a solution of the puzzle, the right is reserved to refund the amount of money paid for subscriptions and return the solutions he believes have been submitted contrary to the rules. The Washington Post reserves the right to reject any solution which it believes has not been submitted under proper conditions. The Washington Post also reserves the right to finally decide any other questions or points which may arise and those entering the contest agree to abide by such decisions.

In case of ties, as many awards will be reserved as there are people tied, before any awards are awarded for a less correct solution; that is, if three or more people should tie on the best solution, the first three or more awards will be reserved for them, and they will be awarded in order of the standing of their solutions of the second puzzle. That is, the best solution will be awarded the first award; the next best, the second, and the third best the third award, &c.

PARENT-TEACHER ACTIVITIES

All notices for this column must be in the hands of the publicity bureau by noon on Wednesday preceding the Sunday on which publication is desired. Address District of Columbia Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations, Publicity Bureau, 800 Eighteenth street northwest, apartment 31.

D. C. Congress Meeting

The session of 1927-28 of the District of Columbia Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations will formally open on Tuesday at 1:45 o'clock at the auditorium of the Department of Interior, Eighteenth and F streets northwest.

All car lines pass the building and parking space will be reserved on Eighteenth street between E and F streets.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, will give greetings and a short talk on the summer round-up. The State president will report on the convention of the national congress of parents and teachers held in Oakland, Calif., last May. All State chairmen will be introduced and several important reports will be presented.

The meeting will begin on time and close promptly at 4 o'clock.

The District of Columbia is fortunate in being able to hold these monthly conferences, which are really training classes where much information vital to the welfare of children in the District of Columbia is presented. In that way a comprehensive understanding of the needs of the entire District of Columbia is laid before the delegates from all sections.

Several of the smaller States are as fortunate as the District of Columbia in being able to hold monthly meetings. As these meetings are felt to be so necessary to the growth of the movement, in the large States, where it would take a day and a night for the delegates all to come to a central meeting, they are organized in county councils. That is, where there are a number of associations in one county they organize and meet once a month for conference. Then once a year all these groups of the entire State come together for the State convention.

Many of the States envy the District of Columbia in being so fortunate as to be able to call delegates from all sections of the State into monthly conferences.

Summer Round-up

The last lap of the summer round-up of children will be reached by the first of November. The State chairman, Mrs. Harold Smalley, and the local chairmen are working very hard to complete this work so that the District of Columbia's record will rank high with those of other States.

The State chairman has arranged to hold examinations at the following clinics and urges that all chairmen whose children have not had the second examination take them to the clinics:

480 E street southwest, Saturday, 10 a. m.

925 Twenty-second street northwest, Saturday, 10 a. m.

Parent-Teacher

The October number of the Parent-Teacher bulletin will be ready for distribution at the meeting on Tuesday. It is hoped that every president will come prepared to state how many copies her organization will be responsible for. This is the State bulletin, and at least every delegate should have a copy; and it is hoped that the time will come when every person in membership will be supplied with a copy of this source of information.

Middle Atlantic Council

At the meeting on Tuesday the delegates to the Middle Atlantic States Council will be elected.

The District of Columbia is entitled to five delegates and the president, but any number can attend the meeting, which is to be held in connection with the New Jersey State P.-T. A. Convention in Atlantic City on November 2.

Mrs. Ernest H. Daniel, of the District of Columbia, is the chairman for the council and it is to be hoped that a number will go from the District of Columbia.

It is planned that the delegates and others who attend will make the trip in automobiles.

The council will formally open on Wednesday, November 2, but the delegates are to be the guests of the hostess State, New Jersey, for the State banquet, which will be held Tuesday night, November 1.

Hubbard—Raymond

The Hubbard-Raymond Home and School Association will meet on Monday evening at 8 o'clock at the Hubbard School. There will be annual election of officers.

Barnard

The Barnard P.-T. A. will hold its first meeting of the season on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock at the school. The following officers were elected at the May meeting for the ensuing year: President, G. E. Hudson, jr.; first vice president, Mrs. E. C. Magdeburger; second vice president, Miss A. E. Hopkins; secretary, Mrs. J. S. Vance; treasurer, Mrs. F. Y. Donn.

Central High

On Friday, October 7, the international oratorical contestants were met at Union Station by a cadet band formed of members of the various cadet bands of the city, and were escorted to Central High School. A luncheon was served them in one of the art rooms of the school. The room was decorated in flags of the nations represented by the contestants. Roses and ferns were used in decorating the tables. The place cards were made by art students of the school. During the luncheon the guests were entertained by the Central High School Orchestra.

The contestants were Frederick Hotson, from Canada; James K. Watson, from England; George Quoit Guillain, from France; Artuco Jarcia Formenti, from Mexico, and Miss Dorothy Carlson, from Utah. The following school officials were present to bid them welcome: Dr. Ballou, Mr. Kramer, Dr. Barnes, Mr. Miller, principal, and Mr. Nelson and Miss Collidge, assistant principals of Central High School; Mr. Daniel, principal of Technical High School; Mr. Davis, principal, and Miss Bradshaw, assistant principal of Business High School; Miss Watts, assistant principal of Eastern High School, and Miss Howsen, principal of Western High School.

The president of Central Parent-Teacher Association, Mrs. Andrew Stewart, and Mrs. Pittman lent their assistance in making the luncheon a very happy occasion.

Brent—Dent

On Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock the first meeting of the Brent-Dent Parent-Teacher Association was held in the Brent School. The attendance was exceptionally large for the first meeting, and it was surely good to see all the old members and to welcome the new ones. Several songs were sung by Mrs. Abbie King, the fourth grade teacher.

Benning

The following officers have been elected for the coming year for the Benning P.-T. A.: President, Mrs. Frank E. James; first vice president, Mrs. Orton; second vice president, Mrs. W. E. Balderson; secretary, Mrs. L. M. Rider; treasurer, Mrs. Ada Peacock. The delegates to the District of Columbia congress meetings are Mrs. M. Taylor, Mrs. S. W. Hughes and Mrs. George Farr.

Cranch Tyler

The Cranch-Tyler P.-T. A. met Monday in the Tyler School. The new principal, Miss Knighton, was introduced to the association. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Pettit; vice president, Mrs. Devlin; treasurer, Mrs. Maguire, and secretary, Miss Lindsay.

Mrs. Joseph Sanders, the speaker, gave a talk on "Why Join the P.-T. A.?" She emphasized that the biggest purpose of the association is the welfare of the child. It also instills a spirit of cooperation among the parents and teachers.

The association expressed appreciation for the work done by the former president, Mrs. Davis.

LEADER OF UNIT

Mrs. CHARLES R. RANKIN, new president of the Ketcham-Van Buren Parent-Teacher Association.

Carbery

The Carbery Parent-Teacher Association met Tuesday with the president, Mrs. John W. Davis, presiding. The secretary, Mrs. Norman Sandridge, and Mrs. Helen Fox, treasurer, gave reports. Annual reports were given by Mrs. William H. Rowe, milk chairman; philanthropic work, Mrs. A. K. Wine, publicity, Mrs. W. L. Hagen; floral and visiting, Mrs. A. R. Grosskurth; reading circle, Mrs. Henry Fones; athletics, Mrs. John Rosson.

The annual report of the treasurer showed $1,525.87 received and $1,143.29 expended, leaving a balance of $364.82. Mrs. Davis gave a report of the year's work. Miss Gertrude Young, principal of the recently grouped Peabody-Hilton-Carbery schools, was introduced and greeted by the president and association. Miss Young, who was principal of Carbery many years ago, spoke of her pleasure at being with us again and of the advantages she hoped the pupils would gain by this grouping of the schools and also paid a tribute to the work of the Carbery parents. Mrs. Rowe reported from the Congress of P.-T. A. and Mrs. John Carter on the refurnishing of the teachers' room.

It was voted to give a card party on November 18 with Mrs. George Fox as chairman, also to hold a rummage sale in the spring. It was also voted to purchase sweaters for the girls' dodge team; geography notebooks for sixth grade; bookcases, mirroscope for kindergarten use; curtains for rooms; benches for second grade; two easels, window boxes and ferns and other equipment for the class rooms and pupils.

Mrs. Rowe, Miss Ruth Dick and Mrs. Hagen were directed to purchase additional equipment for the playground. A committee was appointed to see if better police protection could not be had at dangerous crossings near the school building when children are going to and from school. The executive committee will serve a luncheon to the teachers, also Miss Cornelia Mathis, former principal; Miss Patterson, former teacher, and Miss Young, on Thursday.

The following officers were elected to serve for the coming year: Mrs. John W. Davis, president; Mrs. Norman Sandridge, vice president; Mrs. Clyde Freed, secretary; Mrs. George Fox, treasurer. The banner for attendance was won by the fifth grade, Mrs. Blanche Lewis, teacher.

Curtis—Hyde—Addison

The P.-T. A. of the Curtis, Hyde and Addison schools held its final meeting for this school year Monday at the Curtis School. There was a large attendance of parents. Mr. H. W. Draper, newly appointed supervising principal of the first division, gave a talk on the seven cardinal points in education, listing them as health, citizenship, worthy home membership, vocation, worthy use of leisure, ethical character and command of the fundamental processes.

Arrangements were made to install blackboard eraser cleaners in each building from the proceeds of the moving picture show held recenlty.

The November meeting will be a reception in honor of H. W. Draper, which all parents are urged to attend. It will be held on Monday, November 7, at 7:45 p. m.

Force—Adams

The Force-Adams P.-T. A. has succeeded in establishing a lunchroom at the Adams School, under the same management as Force School, where the children and teachers can get well prepared hot or cold lunches at the noon hour at a reasonable cost.

Edmonds

Mrs. Andrew Stewart, membership chairman of the District of Columbia Congress of P.-T. A., gave a talk on methods to induce membership at the Edmonds School P.-T. A. A social hour was enjoyed, refreshments served and many new members added to the roll.

Next week the first issue of the Edmonds-Maury Gazette will be published. It will contain all news of interest from both schools, also athletics, and promises to be a great success.

Reports from the various committee chairmen, including preschool, summer round-up, reading circle, membership, old clothes, health, legislative, publicity, delegate to congress and others, showed an increased interest. The Edmonds P.-T. A. will give a moving picture benefit Friday at the Home Theater, Twelfth and O streets northeast. Materlinks' "Bluebird" will be presented. This program is arranged by the Stanley Co. of America, department of public service and education, Harriet Locher, director.

Fairbrother—Russell.

The P.-T. A. of the Fairbrother-Russell Schools had a well-attended meeting October 6 at the Fairbrother School. Plans were made for a successful year's work, including talks by prominent speakers, exhibitions of work and play by the pupils and follow-up of health and welfare work which has done so much good in past years.

Reports were made by the secretary, the treasurer and various committees, after which the election of officers took place, resulting in a unanimous reelection of last year's officers: President, Mrs. Etta Davis; first vice president, Mrs. Edward Altman; second vice president, Miss Clara Ulke; treasurer, Mrs. George Fraser; secretary, Mrs. Calvin Welty. These officers, with the principal, Miss R. G. Carraher, form the executive board. A social period followed, during which the parents and the teachers renewed old acquaintances and welcomed new members.

Fillmore

Fillmore Association will meet tomorrow at 8 o'clock in the Fillmore School. This is the first meeting of this school year and a large attendance is expected. The increased attendance over last year has necessitated the use of two portables and the addition of an eighth grade, over 450 pupils now being on the rolls of the school.

Lenox—French

The Lenox-French P.-T. A. will hold its first fall meeting in the Lenox School Building at 7:30 p. m. Tuesday. Election of officers will be held.

Parents and friends will be given an opportunity to see the many new facilities that have been installed for the wider educational program that the Lenox-French Vocational School has entered upon this fall.

Park View

The Park View Platoon School P.-T. A. was addressed October 6 by Miss Taylor, assistant to Dr. Lois Meek. Her topic was "The Organization of Preschool Child Study Classes for Parents."

Mrs. Walker, chairman of the preschool study class, is enrolling members. The first meeting will be announced in the near future.

The association indorsed a motion made by Mrs. Bannerman that the association go on record as approving the retention of married teachers.

A motion was carried that a booth be erected at the Park View Business Men's carvnival, October 13 and 14.

There will be a sale of home-made cakes at each of the monthly meetings.

Keene

The Joseph R. Keene P.-T. A. met at the school Tuesday for the first time of the season with a capacity gathering. Miss H. E. King, principal of the school, lauded the association for the splendid work accomplished during the last year. Mrs. Richard T. Wyche reported the results of the summer library started at her home during the vacation months. The association passed a resolution commending John C. Clark, letter carrier in the Chillum Heights district, for the services rendered by him. A gift will be made to Mr. Clark following his recent retirement.

The election of officers for the ensuing year followed, which resulted in the reelection of Mrs. Finis D. Morris as president, Cyrus T. Bright, vice president; Mrs. Joseph C. Brown, secretary; Arthur W. Clum, assistant secretary; Mrs. Cyrus T. Bright, treasurer, and J. C. Brown and Finis D. Morris as delegates to the school association.

The association passed a resolution to appropriate monthly $1 for the purpose of defraying in part the expenses for renting suitable quarters for the District headquarters. It was also augmented by a large number of members pledging a payment of 5 cents per meeting if the propect is approved by the District Congress.

Prizes were awarded to the children who entered the scrapbook contest during the summer months, as follows:

Older boys—First, Arthur Clime.

Small boys—Bernard Joy.

Older girls—Two of which were tied and awards were made to Annie Miller and Jane Sincell.

Small girls—Bernice Taylor.

The judges for the scrapbook work were Mrs. Oyster, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Gilfin and Miss Molette.

Miss H. E. King, teacher of the eighth grade and principal of the school, won the banner for attendance.

New members admitted were Mrs. G. A. McNeil, Mrs. H. A. Barnard and Miss Francis M. Harlan.

Mrs. Giles Scott Rafter and Mrs Franklin Jones addressed the association on the excellent work performed by the pupils of the school on the scrapbook work during the summer.

Reservoir—Conduit Road

The October meeting of the Reservoir-Conduit Road Teacher Association was held at the Reservoir School on Tuesday afternoon with an excellent attendance.

The officers for the present year are: Mrs. L. E. Stanford, president; Mrs. James Ready, first vice president; Miss Llufrio, principal of the Reservoir School, second vice president; Mrs. David W. Hibble, treasurer; Mrs. E. W. Burr, secretary. All were present and filled their respective offices with credit.

Mrs. Burr reported that an electric eraser cleaner had been purchased and would soon be in operation in the Reservoir School. A thater party at the Dumbarton Theater was planned for one of the October activities. Five dollars was voted to be contributed to the Conduit Road School for material for seat work. A report of the various small matters attended to was given by the secretary, and a short talk on organization by Mrs. Samuel Stebbins, chairman of organization.

Henry W. Draper, supervising principal of the first division, addressed the meeting. Mr. Draper was the first principal of the Reservoir School, and told of the early efforts to make it attractive. He commended the efforts now being made toward that same end, and his talk was very helpful and encouraging.

Mrs. Depue contributed a very enjoyable vocal solo, Mrs. Leger acting as her accompanist. Refreshments were served and a social time completed the meeting.

Whittier

The school board has improved the school property and added playground equipment; the commissioners have paved the block of Sheridan street, all of which are much appreciated by the organization.

The association has placed a new speedograph in the school for the use of the teachers. It is to purchase a pennant for the school, also pictures to be awarded the grade having the greatest percentage of parents attending the P. T. A. meetings. The third grade receives the picture this month.

A good percentage of the preschool children received examinations during the summer round-up; due to the very efficient work of Mrs. Whiteside. A reexamination was given to those children on Saturday at the hygiene center, 5327 Georgia avenue.

Wheatley

The P. T. A. of the Wheatley School held its first meeting of the season on October 6. The following officers were elected for the year: Mrs. Walter C. Jones, president; Mrs. Lillian Hall, vice president; Mrs. D. Hopwood Thour, secretary, and Mrs. James Everett, treasurer.

The kindergarten won the banner for having the most parents present. Miss Austin, the principal, explained the new ruling concerning birth certificates.

Stuart Senior High

The Home and School Association of the Stuart Junior High School met October 5 at the school building, with the president, Mrs. George B. Lady, presiding. This association, organized last June, meets the first Wednesday of each month and has officers as follows: Vice president, Mrs. John W. Davis; secretary, Mrs. Russell Holt; treasurer, Mrs. Trainor; chairman of publicity, Mrs. W. L. Hagen; chairman of membership and hospitality, Mrs. Davis; chairman of refreshments, Mrs. H. B. Schmidt; reporting delegate to P. T. A. Congress and chairman of Child Welfare Magazine, Mrs. Magruder, and delegate to Juvenile Protective Association, Mrs. Grover Koockegey.

The president extended greetings and urged all to work for the success of this new association. The secretary

By Dr. DANIEL R. HODGDON.

In a recent visit to a meat packing establishment, which was made on a morning when visitors were not expected, proved to be a real surprise to me. It was a packing house which maintained the highest possible standard in its preparation of food articles for human consumption.

An old standard which had been maintained for years back, building up through a conscientious and honest effort of its founder and promoted by his followers, a chief of honesty and a man among men, was the policy of this house. One look into his cordial rugged face and his clear blue eyes established confidence in his honesty. Under his leadership only the best products are selected.

A visit to the part of the plant which received the pigs further showed the care with which the products were selected. Trained buyers sent throughout the East were instructed and trained to pick from various pigs placed upon the market. A higher price was paid in order to offset the rejection of the second rate animal.

After careful Government inspection, under the famous No. 317 and after their own inspection and rejection, the pigs are prepared for market. Attention is paid to the possibilities of the trichina work, which almost invariably infects pork.

From these pigs bacon of a very high quality and standard is obtained, and with the usual thoughtfulness of this establishment the bacon is skinned and then smoked, after which it is placed in an appetizing package, covered with a transparent germ-proof, dirt-proof and practically air-proof cellaphame. This is a specially prepared transparent material, which is an unusual sanitary covering for a product of this kind. It keeps the bacon in good condition for market and provides the customer with an assured wholesome, clean and sanitary product—bacon in a sanitary package, which can always be seen.

Another product of these well-selected pigs was ham. Ham is one of the most digestible meat products known. When properly prepared it is a wholesome and useful food. In careful sanitary packages the prepared hams were shipped ready for the customer. There was no haste and no apparent neglect of the carefulness with which this product was made ready for market. After being prepared with hickory smoke, which gave it an appetizing odor and a pleasing taste, it was handled under the most sanitary conditions and placed in individual packages to keep it from contamination during the trip to the customer.

I have never seen better Virginia ham. Its appetizing preparation, its wholesomeness and its selectiveness was a credit to this concern. No one would have any fear of an unwholesome or of a cheap and unworthy table product.

It is unfortunate that the vast consuming public does not have an opportunity to view at close range the preparation of their food stuffs. To a great extent we must leave this to the honesty and policy of others. When a concern takes real pride in producing food materials and goes beyond the every-day requirements to prepare a wholesome food product they have no fear of a cheaper or inferior brand. In fact, there seems to be a general motto in this concern: "We fear no man who produces a cheaper product." That is a criterion which is a worthy governor of pure, clean, wholesome and honest products.

the motto "tell me what you eat, and I'll tell you what you are" is not literally true, what you eat and how you eat it does, to a vast degree, control your health and efficiency in life.

Those who would be honest with themselves and with their family will insist upon the selection of food material which has been carefully and honestly prepared. There is so much dishonesty in the preparation of food for the market today that it is necessary to guide people toward those products which are pure in every sense of the word.

TESTED RECIPES

Lorenzo Canapes.

One can lobster or crab meat
Salt and cayenne to taste
Few drops lemon juice
Half cup white sauce
Six or more slices of bread
Two tablespoons butter
Teaspoon egg white
Fourth cup grated Parmesan cheese
Parsley sprigs

The bread should be cut thin and cut in the shape of horseshoes. However, if you are not deft at cutting the suggested horseshoes, or have no cutter, it will not bring you bad luck to throw out the horseshoe idea and simply cut circular slices.

Assemble your tools and experiment with the canapes—bread board and knife, toaster, can opener, lemon squeezer, tablespoon, measuring cup, grater, knife, small brown, medium bowl.

First, cut your bread and then remove all the evidence. Next grate the cheese and set aside; wash the parsley and put on the ice. Now open the shellfish, crab or lobster, according to what you have on the emergency shelf or what the family likes best, and remove to medium bowl. Flake and season with salt, cayenne and lemon juice to taste.

Make the white sauce and cool—tablespoon butter melted and blended with one of flour a minute; stir in half cup of milk and cook until thick, stirring to avoid lumps. Naturally, the flame should be low for a milk dish. Season with salt, cayenne and a few drops of onion juice if you like.

That out of the way, we will moisten the fish mixture with as much as seems right. The fish should be nicely spreadable and taste wonderfully at this stage of the game. Now cream two tablespoons of butter with a teaspoon of egg white.

Toast the horseshoes or circles of bread a dainty brown. Keep hot. Spread each piece of toast with fish mixture, rounding the top. Cover with a spread of creamed butter, sprinkle with grated cheese and brown in the oven.

Serve on a napkin, ends toward the center (if they are horseshoes), garnish with crisp parsley sprigs and take the family's breath with your innovation.

Chicken and Waffles.

Wash well and joint the chicken; put into the kettle with cold water to cover; let it cook until tender, then season with salt and pepper. When done rub smooth a half cup of butter with two tablespoons of flour and stir into the gravy.

Waffles—
1 pint sweet milk
2 beaten eggs
A little salt
2 even teaspoons baking powder
Flour to make a stiff batter

Have the waffle irons very hot and well greased; fill nearly full with the batter and close the irons. Let bake a few minutes and turn the irons over. Remove them when a light brown. Lay around the platter. Put the chicken in the center and pour the gravy on the dish.

Chocolate Delight.

Two squares of unsweetened chocolate
Six eggs, beaten separately
One cup sugar
Teaspoon vanilla or dash of cinnamon

What could be made to order with better timeliness than this same sweet, requiring no cooking?

It's early in the morning and you've only fifteen minutes to get the dinner dessert out of the way. Assemble a small pan to hold a cup or so of hot water, bowl for chocolate, bowl for yolks, another for whipping whites, measuring cup, knife, teaspoon, egg beater, large spoon and six parfait glasses.

Cut the chocolate in small pieces and place in the small bowl; set this in the saucepan of hot water over a slow flame, taking care that no water gets into the chocolate. Beat the yolks of the eggs well and add gradually the sugar, beating until foamy. The chocolate should be melted by this time. Take from the fire; turn out gas.

Add the chocolate slowly to the beaten yolks and sugar. The heat will cook the mixture slightly. Whip the egg whites until very dry—and I don't mean maybe. More concoctions calling for stiffly beaten whites have been, ruined by half-hearted whipping than one dreams. Watch the average woman whip eggs and then you'll see the reason for this helpful hint.

Fold the dry whites into the chocolate mixture lightly; flavor with vanilla, adding a dash of cinnamon to bring out the vanilla richness. Or use your own ideas about flavoring for a chocolate goodie.

Pile the "delight" into the parfait glasses; don't attempt to smooth over the surface. Natural roughness adds to the appearance of a sweet. Place in the ice box until wanted. Since this sweet improves with age, reckoned in hours, not years, it may be made the day before it is served. An immediate scramble for the scissors that this formula may be clipped for the busy housewives' cookery files.

If you want to add a festive touch, a spoon of whipped cream is not out of order. But none for me, thank you.

Asparagus Tomato Cup.

6 ripe tomatoes
Half cup shredded pineapple
Lettuce
1 can asparagus tips
Best Foods mayonnaise

Scald the tomatoes and remove skin, cut a slice off the top of each and scoop out to form tomato cups. Stick three or four tips of asparagus into each cup, fill the crevices with shredded pineapple, chill and serve on lettuce leaves with mayonnaise. Garnish with strips of green pepper if desired.

Delicious Luncheon Salad.

1 small can asparagus tips
1 pint crab meat
2 hard-cooked eggs
1 pimento
Grating of onion
1 cup mayonnaise
Lettuce leaves

Shred the outer lettuce leaves and mix them with crab meat and onion. Line salad plates or bowl with remaining leaves and place half the asparagus on them, dotting it with mayonnaise and covering.

Chocolate Mousse.

1 cup milk
1 square unsweetened chocolate
Quarter cup sugar
Salt
2 teaspoons gelatine
1½ teaspoons vanilla
1½ pints cream, whipped

Melt chocolate over hot water, and add milk which has been scalded, sugar and salt, and gelatine which has been softened in one tablespoonful cold water. Chill, and when mixture begins to thicken, fold in the cream, which has been whipped stiff. Freeze from three to four hours in tray of electric refrigerator.

Roast Pork With Raisins.

Select a 5-pound roast of pork, wipe with a damp cloth and cut three slashes in it and stuff with raisins; season with salt and pepper. Preheat cooker for twenty minutes, place meat in cooker and cook on both heats for 30 minutes, then on lower heat for two hours and on stored heat for 30 minutes. Serve with candied sweet potatoes and apple rings.

Spanish Omelet Sauce.

2 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon onion, chopped
6 olives, chopped
Half green pepper, chopped
1¾ cups tomatoes
1 tablespoon capers
1 tablespoon sliced mushrooms
Quarter tablespoon salt

Melt butter, add onions, olives and pepper and cook three minutes. Add tomatoes and cook until liquid is nearly evaporated. Pour part of the sauce over the French omelet before folding it, and the remainder over the top after folding.

Strawberry Jelly.

(Seven to Nine Persons.)

2 envelopes gelatine
1 pound ripe strawberries
3 cups (1½ pints) water
2 whites of eggs
1 lemon
Three-quarters cup (6 ounces) sugar
1 tablespoon strawberry extract
Few drops red color
Cut strawberries in halves, add water, leave one hour, then add gelatine, whites of eggs, lemon juice and sugar. Beat mixture until boiling, remove beater, draw to one side of range, cover and leave ten minutes, strain through scalded jelly bag, add color and extract, pour into a wet mold, or individual molds, turn out when set and serve decorated with ripe strawberries.

Raspberries and loganberries may be used in the same way.

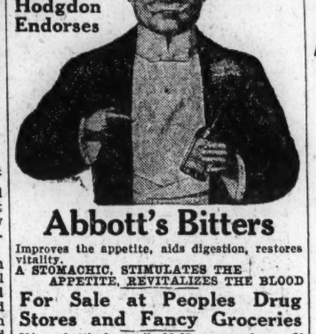

Chocolate Spanish Cream.

(Five to Seven Persons.)

1 envelope gelatine
1 cup (half pint) cold water
1 square (1 ounce) sweet chocolate, grated
2 cups (1 pint) hot milk
Half cup (quarter pound) sugar
2 eggs, separated

Mix gelatine with water. Melt chocolate in milk over fire, add gelatine, and when dissolved pour over the beaten yolks of eggs, add sugar, return to the fire and stir until it begins to thicken. Take from the fire, add vanilla, pour into a wet mold, or into individual molds. Turn out when firm and serve with cream.

If desired, cocoa may be substituted for the chocolate.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

By ELISABETH E. POE.

WASHINGTON lovers of Handel's music, and there are many who do care for the classic works of this master, have heard with delight the news that the music department of Smith College has revived "Julius Caesar," Handel's opera and recently produced it before a most appreciative audience, which included a number of critics from other cities.

Revivals appear to be popular this year, and they form pleasing variety in concert as well as operatic programs.

Several Washingtonians were enrolled as students in the Curtis Institute of Music last week, when it reopened in Philadelphia for the season.

Mabel Linton Williams, organist and choir director of Calvary M. E. Church, will begin a series of organ recitals this evening at 7:45 o'clock. She will play "Toccato" (Dubois); "Evening Star" (Wagner); "Capriccio" (Lemaigre). The quartet will sing "Break Forth Into Joy" (Simper). Contralto solos, "In my Father's House Are Many Mansions" (MacDernid). Organ postlude, "Fanfare" (M. L. Wiliams).

Musicians will be interested in the special meeting of the District of Columbia Chapter, American Guild of Organists, being called at 8 p. m. tomorrow, in the choir room of Epiphany Church, 1317 G street northwest. On this occasion Miss Katherine E. Lucke, F. A. G. O., of the Chesapeake Chapter, Baltimore, will give an improvisation demonstration at the piano, presenting thereby the principle of musical creation as brought out by Frederick Schleider, making it applicable to both piano and organ alike.

Miss Lucke is interested in forming an improvisation class in Washington. While Monday evening's demonstration is under the auspices of the District of Columbia Chapter, A. G. O., the meeting and classes are to be open to any who are interested.

High praise was accorded the United States Army Band at its last concert from the steps of the Capitol, before it left on its first public concert tour.

In presenting a silver loving cup to Capt. William J. Stannard, leader of the band, Dorsey W. Hyde, jr., secretary of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, said:

"The presence here of thousands of District residents during the summer concert season is ample evidence that Washingtonians love good music.

"Music is a force of the greatest power in the encouragement of good citizenship. It builds up community spirit, and it feeds the flames of national patriotism. Since the drums and fifes, which so admirably typified the "Spirit of '76," our country has been a leader in the encouragement of music and musical organizations. Our Federal Government has been a leader in this movement, and as a result Washington is rapidly becoming a national center of musical culture.

"The band which you have gathered to hear this evening is a splendid example of what Washington offers in the way of musical performance of the highest grade. Under the leadership of Capt. William J. Stannard, during the five years of its existence, it has achieved an enviable record of successes. It led the parade at the inauguration of President Coolidge; it played in celebration of the opening of the Sixty-ninth Congress, and, after leading the great procession in honor of Col. Charles Lindbergh, its concert was radioed from the Atlantic to the Pacific—thus establishing an unbroken record for long-distanec concertization."

A musicale will be given by the Nordica Mandolin and Guitar Orchestra, Walter T. Holt, director, under the auspices of the Beall Bible Class, Temple Baptist Church, Wednesday at 8 p. m.

On the program will be: Orchestra, overture, "La Forza del Destino" (Verdi), arranged by DeLoss; guitar solo, (a) "Irish Air from County Derry" (Londonderry Air), (b) "Love Song" (Holt), Charles A. Conrad; soprano solo, (a) "In the Dark, in the Dew" (Pelletier), (b) "Sylvalin" (Sinding), Miss Catherine Schofield; orchestra, "Songs of the Old Folks" (arranged by Lake); mandolin solo, (a) "Alla Mazurka" (Nemerowsky), (b) "Reverie" (Strauss), B. W. DeLoss; piano accompaniment, by Miss Lucy DeLoss; Hawaiian Guitar Trio, (a) "Le Chant du Gondolier" (Mezzacappo), (b), "Moon Song" (Sloane), Mrs. Douglas Tschiffley, Miss Annabel Bird, Miss Violet Macintyre; guitar accompaniment by Mr. Holt; soprano solo (a), "Bergerette (18th Century)" (Weckerlin), (b), "Chanson Revee" (Pesse), Mlle. Marguerite de Porry; tenor-banjo duet (a), "La Zingara" (Bohm), (b), "The Bee" (Schubert), Raymond A. Hart, William J. Hart; orchestra, "Boston Commandery March" (Carter).

ALFRED HEATHER, who plays the role of Filch in "The Beggar's Opera," the first musical comedy ever produced, which has its first local showing Friday afternoon.

In connection with the program for this season by the recently organized Community Institute of Washington, two musical events stand out, the appearance of Sigmund Spaeth, who will open the course on Thursday evening, November 3, in the auditorium of Central Community Center, and the Flonzaley Quartet, on the evening of Thursday, January 19, its only scheduled appearance in the city this winter.

Estelle Wentworth has returned from her month's vacation in Bermuda and opened her studio at 1432 Girard street northwest. Miss Wentworth is directing the Girls' Glee Club of George Washington University. Monday she gave a recital at the State Teachers' College at Fredericksburg, Va., with Jules Falk, violinist, and Kurt Hetzel, pianist, as associate artists.

The final open-air service on Temple Heights last Sunday was marked by the observance of Knights Templar day. Anne Fitz Hugh, soprano, was the soloist, singing "My Redeemer and My Lord," by Dudley Buck, and "The Voice in the Wilderness," by John Prindle Scott.

The Kenneth Nash Post of the American Legion gave a program at the Gavel Club Auditorium Wednesday night, when it featured the "Lackey Sisters," Miss Irma Von, dramatic soprano, and Mrs. Collis Huntington Allen, lyric soprano, in a cycle of duets from the operas.

Devotees of opera in Washington will recall Sigurd Nilssen ("The Viking"), who is featured in the elaborate and spectacular "Roxy" prologue augmenting William Fox's "What Price Glory," shown at the Fox Theater. Mr. Nilssen sang with the Washington Grand Opera, and has many admirers in this city as in Philadelphia, where he sang with the Civic Opera of Philadelphia.

Mr. Nilssen is a Scandanavian. At an early age he showed great talent in art. He studied painting with the famous Von Evan and has several first prizes for his landscapes. Painting is still his hobby. He originally studied piano, but subsequently evidencing natural vocal talent, went to Paris to study with the renowned Jean de Reszke, who, together with Mme. Weinshenk, prepared him for the opera. He made his operatic debut in Monte Carlo, at the Salle de Musique, in 1923, under the baton of the late Louis Ganne, before a distinguished audience of royalty. He then went to England at the command of royalty, singing at St. James Palace in May, 1923.

The Rubinstein Club announces that Genia Zielinska, coloratura soprano of the WEAF Grand Opera company, already well known to Washington radio fans, will be heard in person at the first concert on December 13.

Another star of the WEAF Grand Opera company, Devora Nadworney, prima donna contralto, will appear at the second concert on March 6. Miss Nadworney, as well as Giuseppe Martino-Rossi, guest artist of the May 1 concert, has been called back by popular demand for a second appearance with the Rubinstein Club.

A concert will be given at the Mount Vernon M. E. Church for the benefit of the Y. W. C. A., direction of the Princeton Chapter, on Wednesday at 8 p. m.

The program will be: "The Heavens Are Telling" (Haydn), the chorus; "Didn't It Rain" (Guion), Elvina Neal Rowe; "I'm a Rolling" (Burleigh), the chorus; "Walking in the Garden" (Andrews), Ruth Kobbe; "Deep River," the chorus, (Burleigh); "When Blossoms Come" (Grey), Mrs. Hiram Johnson (president of Princeton Chapter); "Dig My Grave" (Burleigh), the chorus; "Hear My Cry, O Lord" (Wooler), John L. Mitchell; "Swing Low Sweet Chariot" (Nelson Page), the chorus; "Son of the Desert Am I" (Phillips), Thomas N. Leef; "The Twenty-third Psalm" (Shure), the chorus.

On Thursday evening at 8:30 o'clock the City Club will stage "Chrysanthemum" with a cast of 40 people, the lyrics and music for which were written by Edward Muth, and the cast is being directed by Paul Bleyden.

The title role is to be sung by Helen V. Harper, who is the princess. James A Barr, her sweetheart, and the cause of the trouble which untangles itself in one long act is the commoner. Selma Klein plays the part of the girl who makes every wish come true, and Mary V. Doyle is the girl with the fan. Other principal characters are Frances Fallon, Marguerite V. Venables, Margaret Morgan, Mildred Brashears and Leona Anthony, the latter playing the part of governess. The chorus is made up of unusually pretty girls who attend to their stage business well indeed.

MR. SASHWEIGHT HAS A SICKNESS

By THEODORE TILLER

The weekly interview with J. Lester Sashweight, Mount Pleasant sage and commentator, does not appear in its customary place in The Post this Sunday When the interviewer called at the Sashweight home he was met on the front porch by the devoted wife of our neighborhood philosopher. With arms akimbo and broom and dust pan nearby, she came to the point at once.

"Mr. Sashweight can not be interviewed this week," said she. "He is upstairs with a fever thermometer stuck in his mouth and couldn't talk if he wanted to. My husband has the flu."

"How did he catch it, or how did it catch him?" asked the would-be interviewer.

"By being careless like most men and disregarding my advice about going out into an October rain with a summer suit," said Mrs. Sashweight.

"Has he suffered much?"

"If he hasn't I have," moaned Mrs. Sashweight. "He's as much trouble as a whole ward of incurables when he gets sick."

"Do you know what topic he probably will discuss next Sunday?" asked the departing interviewer.

"Probably the open season for flu," responded Mrs. Sashweight, regaining possession of her broom. "And he doubtless will attempt to put over an alibi for his many derelictions and present illness."

At 8 p. m., the music will be given by the Evening Choir; Claude Robeson, director. The program follows: Anthems, "Praise Ye the Father" (Gounod), "God Shall Wipe Away All Tears" (Field); quartet, "Sun of My Soul" (Chadwick); contralto solo, "Evening Prayer" (Costa).

The music at the morning service at 11 o'clock will be rendered by the solo quartet under the direction of Mr. Murray.

St. Mark's Lutheran.

The music under the direction of Lucy H. Paul, organist and director, will include the following numbers: Morning—Organ prelude, "Idyll" (Kinder); anthem, "How Beautiful Upon the Mountains" (Buck); tenor and bass duet, "O Saving Host" (Wiegan), Ira Krider and Gilbert C. Clark. Evening—Organ prelude, "At Twilight" (Friml); anthem, "The Lord Is My Shepherd" (Rogers); tenor solo, "The Good Shepherd" (Van de Water), Mr. Krider. The choir is composed of Laura Hayes, Anne Borjes, Selma Trode, Marie Trede, sopranos; Catherine Gross, alto; Ira Krider, tenor, and Gilbert Clark, basso.

National Baptist.

The music for the service this morning will be: Prelude, "Intermezzo" (Mascagni); quartet, "Lead Me, Lord" (Wesley); anthem, "Hark, Hark My Soul" (Shelley); Postlude, Moderato (Smart). At the evening service the program will be: Prelude, Canteleve (Mailly); tenor solo, Dr. Anderson, "Come, Ye Blesse'" (Scott); quartet, Dreams of Galilee (Morrison); postlude, Festival Postlude (Seibert).

Gunton Temple Presbyterian.

There will be a special musical service at 8 o'clock.

Mr. Klein will be assisted at this service by a well-known violinist and cellolist. The program will consist of several trio numbers, organ, violin and cello a cello solo and tenor solo by Mr. Klein and treasurer reported and Prof. Schwar reported on by-laws, which were adopted. It was voted to purchase an attendance banner for the section room having the most parents present at monthly meetings and a prize at the end of the year for best average attendance, also supplies for the secretary and a gavel for the president. Mrs John W. Davis was appointed chairman of a Hallowe'en party to be held for the children of the school October 28. Subchairmen are: Cakes, Mrs. Hammer and Mrs. Kelly; candy, Mrs. Schmidt and Mrs. Hagen; Ice cream, Mrs. Koockegey and Mrs. Rosson.

A resolution was adopted requesting that the south side of Stanton Park be made one-way traffic, because of the menace of congested traffic to school children. The parents were asked to use their influence in hastening the completion of the approaches to the Stuart Junior High building and the improving of its grounds. Temporary approaches are still being used with an ever-present fear of accident.

Miss Charlotte Hammer sang several solos and Miss Lee Effenbach played several piano solos, both being pupils of Stuart.

Each section room has a representative mother on the executive committee, and the following have been appointed in this capacity:

Mrs. L. W. Thomas, Mrs. Charles R. Dodge, Mrs. Lipscomb, Mrs. H. O. Mackey, Mrs. Schmidt, Mrs. Magruder, Mrs. Pitcher, Mrs. Trainor, Mrs. Hagen, Mrs. John Rosson, Mrs. Hammer and Mrs. Koockegey.

West

"In a time of crisis, will your child choose the honorable or the dishonorable way out? You as parents must decide, for it is by your training and example that your child gets his moral teaching." This was the theme of the talk given to the West P. T. A. on Friday, October 7, by Miss Jessie LaSalle, assistant superintendent of schools.

A musical program was enjoyed by the association. Miss Anna Patterson soprano; Miss Bertha Leonard, contralto, and Mrs. G. H. Fahrenback, gave vocal selections, accompanied by Mrs G. C. Sterns.

Mrs. Webber played a selection on the piano and Mr. William Eichner, violinist of the Marine Band and the husband of one of the West teachers, was well received by the association.

Mr. Wolfe, president, opened the business meeting by telling the parents of the needs of the primary schools for painting easels and building blocks. To show the use of the easels, several large pictures done in free time by 1A students were exhibited. The vote to give $45 toward this work was unanimous.

West P. T. A. expressed itself as satisfied with having married teachers in the schools and also gave its support to any attempt to reduce car and bus fare for the students.

Mrs. Steers was appointed chairman of the nominating committee for a set of officers for the coming year.

After Miss Fowler's class was awarded the flag for the largest attendance of parents, the meeting adjourned.

Realty Board Elections.

The annual elections of the Washington Real Estate Board held at Wardman Park Hotel last Monday night are again indicative of the ability of the realtors of Washington to choose men of standing and ability in the community to guide their organization.

The board founded on the very principles of ethics, reliability and competency, and by requiring these characteristics in its members, has throughout its history consistently demonstrated to the public its desire to enhance and maintain these requirements. That this has been maintained is shown by a glance at the membership roster of the organization and is particularly reflected in the character of those who in the past and present have constituted its officers.

Realizing the confidential capacity, the great importance and seriousness involved in real estate and investment transactions, the Washington Real Estate Board has stressed the importance of having capable members and men of integrity, not only as leaders, but throughout its entire membership. The newly elected officers of the board are well-known men in the community whose high ideals and accomplishments in the advancing of the National Capital is supported by ample material evidence.

The organization, with a splendid record of meetings and accomplishments during the past year, which even outranked those of other successful years, is confident of even greater attainments in the future under the leadership of its new officers and directors.

REALTOR

A realtor is a real estate broker who is a member of a local board having membership in the National Association of Real Estate Boards, an organization incorporated for the advancement of the interest of real estate brokers and the protection of the public from the unprincipled agents or brokers.

PHILADELPHIA MEN TO VISIT WASHINGTON

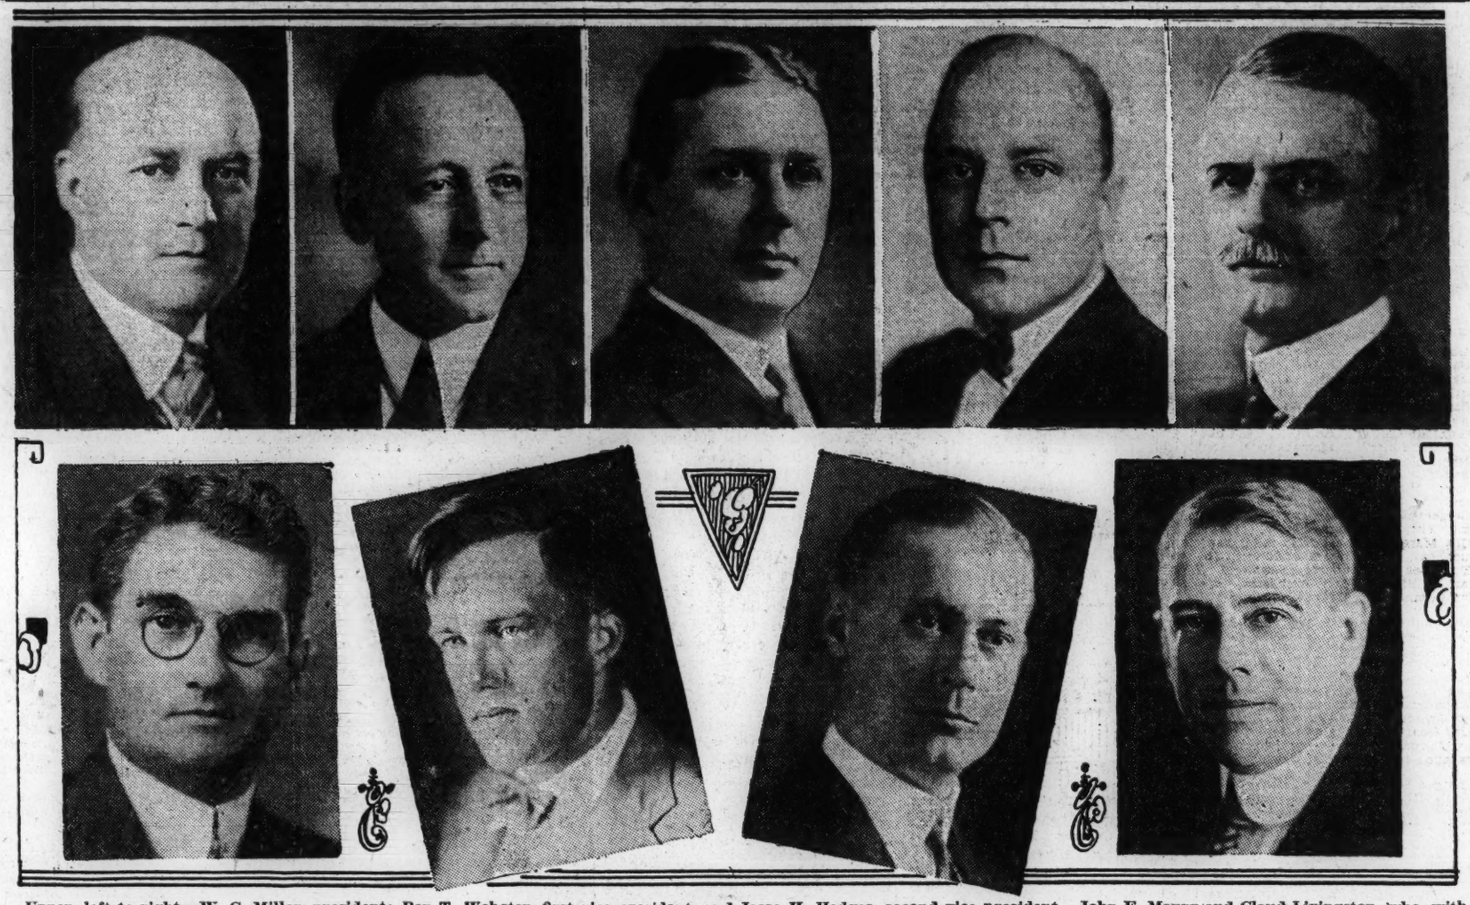

Realtors Will Be Guests of the Capital Board on Saturday.

Members of the Philadelphia Real Estate Board will visit Washington Saturday to make a tour and inspection of apartments and subdivision developments in the National Capital. They will be the guests of the Washington realtors during their stay here. A meeting of the special committee in charge of the visitors indicated that every effort will be made to place every available service at their disposal. This committee consists of Clarence F. Donohoe, chairman; Thomas L. Phillips, W. W. Taylor, jr., H. L. Rust, jr., Lloyd F. Gaines and C. H. Hillegeist.

The Philadelphia board regards Washington as one of the outstanding cities of the country for a proper study of subdivision and apartment house development because of the particularly desirable character of these achievements here. The Washington realtors will make every effort to conduct the Philadelphia visitors thoroughly through every detail of the problem which they desire to study and will assist them in making as complete an examination of the situation here as possible.

Special automobiles will be at the disposal of the visitors and the committee will give them full data and information. In addition to the business end of the visit the Washington men will be hosts of the Philadelphians at luncheon.

NEWLY ELECTED OFFICERS OF THE WASHINGTON REAL ESTATE BOARD

REAL ESTATE BOARD ELECTS W.C. MILLER AS NEW PRESIDENT

Webster and Hedges Chosen, Respectively, First and Second Vice Presidents.

At the annual election of officers of the Washington Real Estate Board, held Monday night in Wardman Park Hotel W. C. Miller, of W. C. and A. N. Miller, was elected president, to succeed John F. Maury. Ben. T. Webster and Jesse H. Hedges were elected first vice president and second vice president, respectively. The following members of the executive committee were elected, the first three for a term of two years and the last three for a term of one year: John F. Maury, Claud Livingston, Horace G. Smithy, Monroe Warren, Alfred H. Lawson and A. C. Houghton. These together with the officers form the governing body of the board.

The annual election was well attended and a great deal of interest was manifested by the members in the retiring president's address and the report of the executive secretary and the treasurer, James P. Schick. The president stated that "the Washington Real Estate Board has now reached a position in the community where it is looked up to and respected for its desire to not only advance the interests of real estate brokers, but for its higher goal, that of the protection of the public from unprincipled agents or brokers.

Predicts Future Power.

"We must earnestly endeavor to keep that regard and esteem because in the years to come I predict the Washington Real Estate Board will become one of the most powerful organizations in the city, representing as we do, the material wealth of the city through our clients, who own valuable property, from which the majority of the District of Columbia revenue is derived. In view of this fact, there is no reason why we should not accomplish great things and make our influence felt throughout the city, but it can only be accomplished provided we keep our own skirts clean and show by our actions that we have the city's and the public's interest at heart before our own.

"Right here let me suggest that if any member of our organization does not conduct himself in a manner that reflects credit on the Washington Real Estate Board, let's get rid of him, let us show the public and our members that the term Realtor and the code of ethics does mean something."

"Sell Washington," Maury Urges.

He stated further that "we all know that Washington is the capital of the wealthiest nation in the world and that it has not yet really begun to grow, so let us start to sell Washington, not only to ourselves but to the entire country."

John G. Graham, president of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce, extended an invitation to members to participate in the trip throughout Arlington County on October 20.

Autos Depreciate; Mule Tax Keeps Up

Westmoreland, Kans., Oct. 15 (A. P.). A motor car depreciates in value each year on the tax books, but a pair of mules, like Tennyson's brook, runs on forever. When Randolph Schurr, tax assessor for 37 years, demanded of a farmer the valuation of a pair of mules which had been listed on the tax rolls for 25 years, the farmer replied: "You've taxed them mule out of existence already." They went down in the books just the same.

SCHOOLS SHOW INTEREST IN BUILDING EXPOSITION

Special Arrangements Will Be Made for Children at the Auditorium.

VIRGINIA TO TAKE PART

A considerable amount of enthusiasm and interest is being displayed by many of the teachers and children of the District Public Schools in the second annual Better Homes and Building Exposition to be given at the Washington Auditorium under the auspices of the Washington Real Estate Board during the week of October 24.

Special arrangements will be made to accommodate the school children and it is understood that they are very eager to participate in the demonstration, particularly in the domestic science features of the show. Not city be given ample opportunity of attending the show, but the general public will also be invited to participate. Through the medium of the telephone company, the gas light company, &c., tickets will be forwarded to householders with bills, communications, &c., so that every householder will be invited to attend the exposition.

In addition to the individual interest a number of organizations will encourage the show and special booths are expected to be set aside for the Board of Trade, Chamber of Commerce and Merchants and Manufacturers. The organizations in northern Virginia are particularly keen about attending the affair and on October 27 the Alexandria, Arlington County and Fairfax Chambers of Commerce will cooperate with the Real Estate Board in putting on a northern Virginia evening.

Much more space has been sold and many more booths and exhibitors will participate this year than last. Special booths have been designed and all the decorations and electric lighting will be uniform so as to present an interesting appearance. Tickets will be sent to the suburbs and all encouraged to attend. Besides the American Institute of Architects and the Public Library, the Fairchild Aerial Service will show a new gallery of aerial photographs of the National Capital. Entertainment will be given by New York artists and local orchestras. Experts in domestic science, interior decorating, landscaping, &c., will lecture during the course of the exposition.

The model home which has created considerable interest is now in process of construction on the first floor of the Auditorium. This will be presented in complete form together with interior decorating, landscaping, electric lighting, &c. The Electric League of Washington will give an interesting display at the exposition.

The committee in charge is composed of A. N. Miller, Horace G. Smithy, Wilmot W. Trew, Thomas L. Phillips, J. Curtis Walker and A. C. Houghton.

KNOW YOUR WASHINGTON

A series of articles by officials, business men and civic leaders on subjects of interest regarding the National Capital.

WASHINGTON'S PARKS

By LIEUT. COL. U. S. GRANT, 3d, Director of Public Buildings and Public Parks of the National Capital.

PART II.

In considering the adequacy of any park system and the amount that can properly be expended on expanding it, one must stop to appraise its value to the community and the extent to which its provides for the particular needs of the community, for which the inhabitants naturally I justly look to it. The amount of public funds that can justly and economically be appropriated for supplying any wants discovered can then only be determined by comparing the urgency of park needs to that of other needs and the rate at which the cost of supplying each is increasing. For instance, if for a new subdivision the need for improvements in urban facilities, such as pavements, electric lights, &c., and for parks should be considered approximately equal, it is evident that it will be best to buy the property needed for parks first, because its value is increasing more rapidly than the cost of the other improvements and because the government's expenditures on the latter would themselves materially increase the value of the land.

On the other hand, the improvement of the park property might be left a year or two, because its improvement is less necessary as long as only a part of the homes are occupied and so the other improvements will be of more practical benefit at first.

Our cities have grown so large and the real country's edge has been pushed by this urban growth so far from where the majority live, that the park in the city is no longer merely an ornament, but has become a necessity and an indispensable le.. n of community life. Various classes of parks must be distinguished, according to the different sorts of facilities they afford for recreation and the enjoyment of the air and sunshine.

Playgrounds for Children.

First, playgrounds for small children. While it can not be said that Washington is amply provided with these, still some progress has been made in their development, usually in connection with the public schools, and under the efficient management of Mrs. Rhodes certainly the most has been made of what playground space there is.

Second, municipal facilities for the major sports; for which reasonable provision has been made in Washington with the baseball diamonds, tennis courts, four golf courses, two polo fields and various other grounds in the larger parks under the director of public buildings and parks.

Third, community recreation centers; of which Washington is in direst need, so that in each community the larger children and young people will find a place for all sorts of play and sport and will be removed from the dangers and temptations of the street. The sport facilities of such centers would be near at hand and available for persons having neither the time or transportation to go to more distant places, like Potomac Park, where the more expert and the more nearly professional athletes take possession and the beginner has but a hard time of it. The Park and Planning Commission has given special attention to this need and is trying to acquire several sites suitable in various communities having least access to exi.. ing public sp.. t facilities.

Parks for Education.

Fourth, parks which attract the public to take the air; and at the same time offer educational possibilities and points of interest by containing special landscape features, museums, public buildings and points of historic or scientific interest, pleasant drives and walks, trees and flowers of special or seasonal interest. Washington is fairly well provided with these, especially the grounds south of the White House, the Mall system, the Capitol grounds, the Potomac parks, &c. Even so, one great project of this sort is so important and has such unusual possibilities that it deserves special attention, namely, the Fort Drive. This would be a great circumferential drive about the city, joining a series of attractive and interesting local parks, built up about the remains of the old Civil War forts with a splendid sylvan boulevard system. These old forts not only have a historic connection and picturesqueness, but they occupy such high commanding points that they naturally contain all the best views of Washington and the region about it. From each of these hills one can enjoy beautiful distant views of a varied rolling country, and some times at sunset or sunrise catch sight of where

"* * * Some tall weather-vane
Or tapered spire shines in a special beam,
Like the last vague reluctant dream
Of childhood in a dying brain."

Fifth, we should distinguish the usual small city park, a circle or square where trees and grass invite the tired business man or working woman, or the older persons of the neighborhood, to steal a few moments' quiet o.. of the glare and hurly-burly o.. the street, and where, in hot weather, the poor and those who live in small, crowded rooms ca.. find a place to rest and cool off. Here handsome trees, the smaller animals, like birds and squirrels, and flower beds, supply the "harvest of the quiet eye."

Triangles Are Useful.

Even a small triangle, insignificant in size and inadequate to furnish isolation from the street, may bring a sense of relief from a hot pavement and afford a pleasant place for munching a portable lunch or taking a breath of air before returning to the routine o.. an office. Washington is unusually well supplied with such parks in the old city, not so well outside the limits of the L'Enfant plan, but their value is not fully appreciated, except by travelers passing through, and encroachments upon t..em are already constantly being attempted by selfish interests, such as the search for free automobile parking space at public expense.

Finally, there are the parks of considerable area, islets of country preserved against encroachment by the urban tide. Here the call of the wild may be, to some extent, at least, answered by the city dweller who has but an hour or so to himself. The tremendous value of such a park must be seen to be appreciated. A warm spring or summer afternoon in Rock Creek Park will be evidence enough. But Rock Creek Park is already crowded; it sufficed for a city of 100,000 inhabitants, it is crowded now with 500,000 to fall back on it, in spite of the great crowds who can now go to parks of other kinds in the same city, and if the healthy and normal growth of the last quarter century is to continue, the fullest practicable development of all the land not well fitted for use as home sites will hardly be adequate.

The region about Washington is unusually rich in possibilities for such development. For those who like automobiling, the handsome old homesteads of olden days, landmarks of special historic or architectural interest, the view and use of broad bodies of water, sailing and motor boating, the Potomac valley below the Key Bridge can not be excelled. For those who like the woods, torrential streams, rocks, mountain lakes and pools, the physical effort of overcoming natural obstacles, whether walking, riding or canoeing in rapids, the accidents of a rough and varied terrain or the seclusion and quiet and picturesqueness of an old canal, all these may be found in the Potomac gorge between the Chain Bridge and Great Falls.

PROGRESS IS SHOWN IN ANNUAL REPORT OF REALTORS' HEAD

Active Members of Board Increased and Finances Are Greater Than Ever.

A year of outstanding achievement and progress in every function of the Washington Real Estate Board was outlined in the annual report of James P. Schick, executive secretary and treasurer of the organization, at the annual meeting held Monday night at Wardman Park Hotel. Not only does the report show a year of great progress, but it indicates bright prospects for the future.

Not only have the active members of the board increased, but the finances of the board are far greater than ever before. Evidence of the interest and cooperation of the members and the organization's effort to be of use to the profession in the community is shown in the fact that 252 meetings and discussions have been held by the organization during the past year and 173 committee assignments have been made.

The board has been actively interested in legislation, and one of the bills of particular interest was that relating to the reorganization of the office of the recorder of deeds. This bill provided for changes in the organization and administration of the office. Our committee organized a joint committee of representatives from all the civic and trade organizations in the District of Columbia and this joint committee made a careful study of the proposed bill and made a number of recommendations in regard to the legislation. The views of the board and this joint committee were presented at a hearing of the House committee on District affairs. The bill, however, failed of passage and it is expected that the bill may be reintroduced at the coming session of Congress.

Aided on Insurance Code.

In addition to this the board has been active in legislation regarding the insurance code.

"We are advised," the report says, "that the bill to create a new insurance code for the District of Columbia will again be presented to Congress at its next session. This code may contain many provisions which are of vital interest to persons engaged in the real estate business and it will be well for the board to make a careful study of this proposed legislation," and it continues:

"The board has been called upon during the past year to pass upon a number of bills which are proposed by the Park and Planning Commission and which will likely be introduced at the coming session of Congress. These bills relate to the supervision of the design and plans for buildings which are to face upon public parks or public buildings, the closing of existing streets which are no longer beneficial to the community and others. Among these suggested bills are two of large importance. One provides that the Treasury Department shall advance to the Park and Planning Commission $10,000,000 in annual installments of $2,000,000 for the immediate purchase of property desirable for park purposes. This amount is to be repaid out of District funds, including interest at the rate of 3.65 per cent in annual installments of $560,000.

"The other bill of importance is one which provides for a new method of condemnation of property for public purposes and which contains a number of provisions believed to be unsatisfactory. These bills have been carefully studied and at a conference with the Park and Planning Commission the

ARLINGTON COUNTY MEN TO ENTERTAIN CAPITAL REALTORS

NEARBY VIRGINIA TOUR SLATED FOR THURSDAY

Large Number of Washingtonians Are Expected to Make Visit.

The Washington Real Estate Board members will be the guests of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce and the Alexandria, Arlington and Fairfax Real Estate Board on a tour through Arlington County on Thursday, which will be concluded with a supper at the Washington Golf and Country Club.

The realtors of Washington have manifested a great interest in this trip, as they feel developments in northern Virginia will be closely allied with the prosperity of the National Capital.

Arlington County is a part of Greater Washington, sometimes spoken of as the metropolitan area. Its citizens realize that Washington, so beautiful now, is destined to be the most magnificent capital in the world, and they are ready and willing to help those forces which are planning to develop the ten-mile square which was first laid out for the Capital of the United States.

What is now Arlington County is a small territory with an area of less than 30 square miles and, as most folks know, was a part of the District of Columbia until 1846. For what were good reasons then the land was retroceded to Virginia and the name Alexandria County was adopted. Later, in order to avoid confusion with the city of Alexandria, the present county name Arlington was chosen, and within the last few years other changes undreamed by the older Virginians have taken place.

Two Miles from White House.

Arlington County is only 2 miles from the White House at its nearest approach, and 5 miles from its most distant point, which virtually places it in the heart of the metropolitan area and gives it the advantage of being the logical place for home lovers who are in the Government service in Washington or for the business people who have their offices or other establishments in the District of Columbia.

Busy people no longer measure distance by miles, but measure it by time, and those people who have been foresighted enough to make Arlington County their home know the advantage of living in a community of beautiful homes, only 15 to 20 minutes away from their places of business.

There is probably no section of the United States or even in the world, with an area so valuable, but so long neglected as was Arlington County. Here was virgin territory of 20,000 acres within the bounds of the county, of which 2,000 acres were already in use by Fort Myer military reservation, the United States Agricultural experiment grounds, and Arlington Cemetery, all bordering on the Potomac.

Strides in 10 Years.

But in the past ten years an awakening has taken place and home lovers by the thousands have come to Arlington County. Since 1920 over 4,000 homes have been built in Arlington County. With the coming of the home lovers, the need for schools arose and today Arlington County points with pride to its new modern schools with an enrollment of nearly 7,000. The school population today is greater than the entire county population in 1900. By 1920 the census shows Arlington County peopled with 18,000 and today the estimated population is over 30,000.

If Arlington County had been open for development in the past with the same conditions existing as in the District, the population at this time would be over 100,000, instead of little over 1,000 to the square mile, as it is at the present. This, however, should be an incentive to the home lover who wishes to build a home in a place beautiful, for in Arlington County the future is assured and the home lover who buys or builds now need have no fear of his real estate decreasing in value.

Those who are familiar with suburban development point out the strides made by such communities as Covington, Ky., Camden, N. J., Brooklyn, N. Y., and even more nearby places, such as suburban properties near Baltimore and Richmond.

Men who study real estate values declare that Arlington County property will be of immense value in Arlington City of the future.

Credit to Developers.

Much credit must be given to those developers of real estate who have restricted unsightly speculative houses in Arlington County, and the home lover who really wants a home with all modern improvements and conveniences, will find it within his means to acquire a home in Arlington County.

"The future of Arlington County does not depend entirely on its present inhabitants. Its future depends for the most part on the people now coming in from every State in the Union," was a statement made a few years ago by one of the realtors of this section. This has held good and now the new people of five or six years ago are ardent supporters of Arlington County.

Each year sees improvements going on in a scale almost unbelievable. The chamber of commerce and civic organizations are back of a five-year plan to improve and hard surface all streets and to build more hard-surface roads and add to the goodly number now in the county. In a few weeks water from the same system used by the City of Washington will be turned on from the Del Carlia reservoir, across the Potomac from Arlington County. The present sewerage system will be augmented and these with other improvements planned make Arlington County a place worth while for the person of vision be he home owner or capitalist who can picture the near future city of Arlington.

BOARD ANNOUNCES NEW ASSIGNMENTS OF NAVAL OFFICERS

COMMANDERS IN FLEET RECEIVE NEW ORDERS

Rear Admiral H. V. Butler Becomes Chief of Staff to Admiral Wiley.

Admiral Mark L. Bristol, commander in chief of Asiatic fleet, while making a tour of inspection in the Yangtze River, has shifted his flag from U. S. S. Pittsburgh to U. S. S. Stewart and thence to U. S. S. Gen. Alava, and upon completion of the tour he will go back to the Pittsburgh, which is awaiting at Shanghai, being of too much draft to go far into the river.

Formal orders have been issued by the Navy Department to carry into effect the changes in fleet command and office of chief of naval operations announced sometime ago; namely: Rear Admiral Henry A. Wiley, from duty at Navy Department as a member of the general board, to assume duty as commander in chief of the United States fleet, with the rank of admiral, on November 8; Admiral Charles F. Hughes, from command of that fleet to duty as chief of naval operations, November 14, relieving Admiral Edward W. Eberle, who then reverts to his permanent rank of rear admiral and goes to duty as a member of the general board.

Returns to Navy Office.

Rear Admiral Henry V. Butler, who has been on temporary duty with the general board since relinquishment of duty with the new aircraft carrier Saratoga, has received orders to duty as chief of staff to Admiral Wiley.

Rear Admiral Julian L. Latimer, who the other day was assigned to duty at Navy Department as president of the naval examining board and member of the naval retiring board, probably will be assigned to duty as commandant of the third naval district and of New York Navy Yard, relieving Rear Admiral Charles P. Plunkett, when the latter goes on the retired-for-age list February 15, next.

Capt. John M. Enochs, commander of South China patrol, has shifted his flag from U. S. S. Helena to U. S. S. Asheville.

Commander William P. Purnell, from duty as flag lieutenant on staff of commander in chief of Asiatic Fleet, has reported for duty in the fleet training office, Navy Department, succeeding in the gunnery section Lieut. Comdr. James C. Byrnes, who some time ago went to duty as gunnery officer on the staff of Rear Admiral Frank H. Clark, commander of the destroyer squadrons of the scouting fleet.

Commander Herbert A. Jones has been ordered detached from command of U. S. S. Scorpion, formerly station ship at Constantinople, which is being decommissioned at Philadelphia Navy Yard, and to duty at that yard.

Commander Thomas Withers, jr., commander of submarine division 4 of the control force, has shifted his flag from the submarine S-1 to the submarine S-19.

Changes Are Announced.

The following now serving on the staff of Admiral Hughes have been ordered to accompany him to duty in the operations office, Navy Department: Commander Felix X. Gygax, flag secretary; Commander William T. Smith, fleet gunnery officer; Commander Patrick N. L. Bellinger, fleet aviation officer, and Commander Hugh P. LeClair, fleet radio officer.

Comdr. Emory A. Bryant and Lieut. Comdr. William L. Darnall, dental corps, will represent their corps at the annual meeting of the American Dental Association at Detroit, October 24-28.

Changes in stations and duties of officers of the dental corps will be made as follows: Comdr. Leon Martin, from Philadelphia Navy Yard, to duty in charge of dental department of Naval Medical School in this city, relieving Lieut. Comdr. Darnall, who is under orders to U. S. S. Lexington; Lieut. Comdr. Alfred W. C. Handler, from Naval Medical School to U. S. S. Saratoga; Lieut. Comdr. Albert Knox, from Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, Navy Department, to U. S. Mercy; Lieut. Comdr. Clemens V. Rault, from Naval Dispensary, this city, to Naval Medical School; Lieut. Leonard M. Desmond, from U. S. S. Relief, to Naval Hospital, San Diego, Calif.; Lieut. George H. Rice, from U. S. S. Seattle to Naval Dispensary, this city, and Lieut. Gunnar N. Wennerberg, from Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill., to U. S. S. Maryland.

Comdr. Major C. Shirley, supply corps, recently on duty as supply officer at Naval Air Station, Lakehurst, N. J., will go to duty as supply officer of U. S. S. Shawmut and of Mine Squadron 1, relieving Comdr. Raymond E. Corcoran, of the corps, who on November 1 will report for duty in the supply department of Boston Navy Yard.

ARLINGTON COUNTY ENTERTAINS REALTORS

Out in the hills of Arlington County the home lover has the advantage of fresh air, plenty of light and places for the children to play. A big asset is the favorable health conditions, for according to the figures taken by the United States census, Arlington County has the best health record of any section of the metropolitan area.

There are so many things to be said about Arlington County that a short article like this can hit only the high spots. Not a word has been said about the new Memorial Bridge which the U. S. Government is building, nor of the proposed Mount Vernon Boulevard; nor of the county road straight from the bridge through Arlington County to Falls Church; nor of the Lee Boulevard; nor of the internal county improvements such as the new courthouse which is contemplated not many months hence. Space will not permit further details. A booklet with a full account of Arlington County showing figures on population, tax rate and other information of value may be had from the Chamber of Commerce of Arlington County. Phone, write or call and say, "I want a copy of the Hills of Northern Virginia, the booklet published by the North Virginia Bureau."

The booklet is well illustrated and it is distinctive in character. It is not only readable but it is an ornament for any library. It will be sent free of charge to any person interested in Arlington County, the Gateway of the South.

A great many reservations have been coming in from members of the Real Estate Board and it is expected that a large number will participate in the tour. Reservations are constantly being made.

Navy Planning Legislation To Be Urged on Congress

New Promotion and Retirement Law Planned and Measure Granting Full Pay to All Retired Officers on Active Duty Is to Be Pressed.

Besides advocacy of enactment of the Britten bill changing the laws governing promotion, elimination, and retirement from the Navy, and extending the principle of selection for promotion to grades lower than those to which the system now pertains, which failed of passage at the last session, it is understood that the Navy Department will submit several other proposed legislative projects relating to the personnel to Congress when it convenes in December.

Among them, is one to authorize transfer to the line of a number of naval constructors, who are engaged in the design of aircraft and are specializing in that branch. Such a bill would be beneficial to the officers concerned, as it would remove them from the limit of one-half of one per cent of staff officers that may be detailed to duty involving flying and thereby enable them to become qualified aircraft pilots or observers and receive 50 per cent additional pay while on a flying status.

It also is the intention of the Navy Department to submit a proposed bill to permit all retired officers to receive full pay and allowances of their grade when performing active duty. Some years ago, Congress enacted a law that prevents retired officers, above the rank of lieutenant commander, from receiving full pay and allowances while on active duty. It is understood that this legislation was enacted to prevent officers of high rank from being assigned to active duty in preferred positions to the detriment of those on the active list.

The accounting officers have construed this law so as to prevent any retired officer above the rank of lieutenant commander from receiving other than the retired pay of his rank while on active duty; and, consequently, only a few retired officers of high rank went on active duty. The pay law of June 10, 1922, somewhat relieved the situation by providing that retired officers below the rank of commodore should receive full pay and allowances while on active duty, but the restriction continued with respect to rear admirals.

The situation has been embarrassing, on several occasion, to the naval authorities, when they found it necessary or expedient to assign some rear admiral to active duty for particular purposes. Such a case is that of Rear Admiral Hugh Rodman, retired, who was assigned to duty with President Harding on his trip to Alaska.

A similar situation may arise in the case of Rear Admiral Hillary P. Jones, who was one of the delegates to the recent tripower naval conference at Geneva, and who goes on the retired list for age on November 14. If there is another such conference, and it is desired to send Admiral Jones (or any other rear admiral on the retired list) to it, the law as it now exists would not permit them to receive active duty pay while on that service.

QUANTICO BUILDING PLAN WAITS CONGRESS ACTION

Funds Are Expected When the New Deficiency Bill Passes in December.

WILL COST $8,000,000

Legislative authority having been given for construction of permanent buildings at Marine Barracks, Quantico, to cost $2,205,000, preliminary work, to the extent permitted by current funds, is going on in the preparation of plans, and specifications, so that the projects may be placed under contract as soon as possible after the appropriation is made.

An item of $1,650,000 for the project was in the second deficiency appropriation bill, which failed of passage at the close of the last session of Congress, and it is expected that the same item will appear in the urgent deficiency bill to be introduced on convening of the Seventieth Congress in December, leaving $555,000 to be appropriated later as required by progress of construction.

The approved project, estimated to cost $2,205,000, includes one regimental group of barrack buildings (three one-battalion barracks), $850,000; grading lawns, pipe lines, sewer lines, sidings, &c., $100,000; power and heat distribution, $380,000; prison, $30,000; three concrete storehouses with new railroad siding, $225,000; commissary, bakery and cold storage and ice plant, $150,000; apartment houses (to accommodate about 42 officers) and mess for student officers, $370,000, and garage, $100,000.

These items are only a little over one-fourth of the estimated cost of the entire project considered necessary for development of the station at Quantico on a permanent basis for satisfactory accommodation of the East Coast expeditionary forces and other personnel of the Marine Corps, and it is estimated that the entire project will cost in the neighborhood of $8,000,000.

Everybody that has been to Quantico realizes the urgent necessity of furnishing safe and livable accommodations for the personnel at that station, which has been housed in the make-shift temporary buildings constructed during the World War. Several months ago a lieutenant was burned to death when his quarters—not much more than a shack—were destroyed by fire. The other day, when officials from the Navy Department visited the place in connection with preparations for permanent construction, they found that one of the frame barrack buildings had just fallen down.

BILL TO ALTER MARINE PERSONNEL IS REVISED

Report Is Being Prepared for Gen. Lejeune by Board of Officers.

REPLIES ARE RECEIVED

The board of officers of the Marine Corps, which convened a year ago to study the situation pertaining to stagnation of promotion of commissioned officers of that corps, and to make recommendations for remedying the conditions, and which reconvened on September 15, has completed a revision of the proposed bill submitted with its report of March 10, last, and a report explaining the changes made now is in course of preparation for submission to Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune, commandant of the corps.

Copies of the original bill and the report were furnished to all officers of the corps, with invitation for them to submit constructive criticisms; and, as a result, many replies were received and referred to the board, which was reconvened to receive them. While some of the replies were prompted merely by individual and group interests, others contained valuable comments and suggestions for alterations in the terminology of the proposed legislation, and they have been taken into consideration in revising the measure. Members of the board believe that the method followed has resulted in the production of a draft of a bill that is a great improvement over the original one.

After, and if, the commandant of the corps approves the draft in its revised form, he will refer it to the judge advocate general of the Navy for comment; it will go thence to the Bureau of the Budget for report as to whether it interferes with the administration's financial policy, and thence it will be submitted to the Secretary of the Navy, who must approve the measure before it can become a part of the departmental legislative program.

The board consists of Brig. Gen. Ben H. Fuller, Cols. Harold C. Reisinger, assistant paymaster, and Douglas C. McDougal; Lieut. Col. Richard B. Creecy, assistant adjutant and inspector; Majs. Ralph S. Keyser and Edwin H. Brainard, and Capt. Charles Ubel, assistant quartermaster, with Capt. Eugene F. C. Collier as recorder.

BUREAU OF BUDGET SNAG TO BLUE ARMY UNIFORM PROPOSAL

$1,500,000 Necessary in Special Appropriation by Congress to Outfit Soldiers.

RETURN TO OLD COLOR FAVORED BY OFFICERS

Changes in Design Seek a Method to Designate Branches in Service.

Apparently, the project to authorize the readoption of the blue uniform for the Army, which was discarded when this country entered the World War, has struck a snag in the Bureau of the Budget.

Although the War Department refuses to make any announcement on the subject, there is a persistent rumor to the effect that the blue uniform will not be authorized for the Regular Army because the Bureau of the Budget holds that the money involved in equipping the enlisted personnel with the blue dress attire is not in conformity with the administration's financial policy.

There is no question but the Army at large favors return to the blues, and the fact that both the Navy and Marine Corps are authorized to wear blue uniforms makes the demand more insistent than ever that the Army likewise be equipped.

Studied by Department.

A detailed study of the subject was made by the War Department, and plans for readopting the blue uniforms were drawn up, it is understood. A vote taken among corps area commanders and other general officers meeting at a conference in the War Department last spring, it is said, was overwhelmingly in favor of returning to the blue uniform.

The study had not gone far, however, when some changes were suggested in the design of the blue uniform, if it were to be readopted. One of the main points of discussion was the method to be used in designating the various branches of the service, the outstanding suggestion being that a stripe down the outside of each trouserleg, of the color of the branch of the service, be the identifying mark.

Another point of discussion, which invoked some lively comment, was what color would be authorized for warrant officers, who now have no official color. It was suggested that these officers wear the color of the branch of the service to which assigned, and in changing their duty from one branch to another to replace the color of the old branch with the color of the new. Nothing definite was decided on this question, as about that time the entire question of readoption of the blue uniform was more or less dropped.

Officers Provide Themselves.

It is estimated that something in the neighborhood of $1,500,000 would be required to equip the enlisted personnel of the Regular Army with the blue uniform. As members of the commissioned personnel equip themselves at their own expense with their uniforms, it would necessitate a considerable outlay for officers to acquire the blue attire.

As no definite announcement has been forthcoming from the War Department on this subject, the Army generally is more or less uncertain as to what will be the eventual outcome of the blue uniform discussions, but, with the persistent rumor that the Bureau of the Budget would frown upon the project, due to the cost involved, it is extremely doubtful that the blue uniform, for some time at least, will be adopted. The only way, apparently, for the Army to be equipped with the blue uniform within the next few years is for Congress to authorize specific funds sufficient for outfitting the enlisted personnel.

BIGGER NAVY PLANS EXPECTED TO HOLD STAGE IN CONGRESS

POSITION OF WILBUR REMAINS IN DOUBT

Considered Certain House Committee Will Give Subject Prominence.

With members of the next Congress arriving in Washington, there are increasing indications that construction of additional ships for the Navy, particularly cruisers and submarines, will hold a prominent place in the discussion of naval legislation at the Capitol, and the prospects are bright for authorization of and appropriations for those classes of vessels.

Before the beginning of every session the Secretary of the Navy and his advisers arrange a priority schedule of bills in the order of their relative importance, according to their judgment, and doubtlessly that will be done this year before Congress meets in December. It is a formality, however, that in the past has had but little perceptible influence, probably because, as the session advances, the Navy Department has found it necessary to revise the statement of priority. Moreover, the House naval committee frequently has taken the situation in its own hands and ignored the recommendations of the department.

Wilbur's Plans in Doubt.

It is not known what recommendations Secretary Wilbur, governed as he is by the wishes of the President and the limitations imposed by the budget, will make concerning new naval construction; but, whatever those recommendations are, it appears to be certain the House naval committee, irrespective of any departmental priority schedule, early in the session will take up the shipbuilding project with emphasis upon cruisers and submarines. There will be insistence by members of that committee that additional cruisers shall be authorized as soon as possible in the session beginning in December. If these plans meet with the support of the House, there is expectation they will be received with equal approval by the Senate.

The intention is to make provision for additional cruisers the principal issue of the House naval committee activities in preference to any other subject, even those projects pertaining to the naval and Marine Corps personnel.

Opposition Expected.

Nevertheless, there are indications, also, that opposition will be encountered when this committee program for ships is presented in legislative form. There is evidence in both houses of Congress of indorsement of, and adherence to, the presidential policy that appears to discourage authorization of more ships, based on the expectation of another international conference on naval limitation. If renewal of discussion of naval limitation occurs during further sessions of the international disarmament body at Geneva in December it evidently will not be possible for the naval committee to acquire the information respecting the late session at Geneva possessed by Rear Admirals Hilary P. Jones and Byron A. Long, who were naval advisors to the United States representatives. Both officers are putting into documentary form their observations and views, which will be of considerable importance in the development of the situation at the Capitol. Even if these documents are not made available to the committee it is expected that Admirals Jones and Long will be called before the committee, in executive session, to explain the situation as it developed at Geneva.

It evidently is hoped by members of the naval committee that the cruiser project will be helped materially by their testimony.

Consequently, there is prospect of a lively contest in Congress over this vital issue of more ships for the Navy initiated by the House committee, which must proceed without the assistance of the Bureau of the Budget in the matter of estimates beyond what is required for ships already authorized and under construction.

COL. ROBERT T. OLIVER TO ATTEND MEETING

Dental Officer Is Selected as Delegate to Association Sessions at Detroit.

Col. Robert T. Oliver, Dental Corps, on duty at University of Pennsylvania, will be the delegate from his corps to the annual meeting of the American Dental Association to be held at Detroit October 24-28. The Association of Military Dental Surgeons will hold its annual meeting at the same time and place. Maj. Neal A. Harper, Dental Corps, on duty at Ohio State University, has been designated as alternate to Col. Oliver. In accordance with recommendations of the surgeon general of the Army, other officers of the Dental Corps, whose services can be spared, will be permitted to attend the meetings at Detroit at their own expense.

Lieut. Col. Rex. H. Rhoades, Dental Corps, head of the dental division of the surgeon general's office, went to Carlisle Barracks, Pa., October 10 for a two months' course of instruction at the field medical school.

The retirement of Capt. H. Leon Hogan, Dental Corps, on September 24, on account of physical disability, created a vacancy in that corps, which has been filled by appointment of First Lieut. Harold G. Ott, of the Dental Reserve Corps.

Film of Rural Life By Prince of Siam

Berlin, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Prince Rangsit of Siam, a brother of the reigning king, has produced a film here which has the merit of dealing with an entirely novel subject: Rural life in Siam.

The prince has studied in Heidelberg and is married to a German woman. He conceived the idea to show the western world how the eastern world really lives. Avoiding hackneyed scenes and pictures of palaces and temples, he has chosen as the central figure of his story Kru, a Lao peasant. Kru's hard struggle for life in the jungle, with wife and children constantly menaced by wild elephants, tigers and snakes, is faithfully portrayed. The film is shown under the name of "Chang."

"Kru is the typical Siamese tiller of the soil, and he stands as the symbol of Siam," the prince says.

AMONG VETERANS

AMERICAN LEGION.

Henry C. Spengler Unit.

The unit will give a Halloween party October 31 at Chestnut Farms Auditorium, Twenty-sixth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, and plans are well under way for the success of the party. There will be dancing and cards, with a five-piece Rambler Orchestra. Committee designations to date are: Patronesses, Mrs. Anton Stephan, Mrs. Mamie Palmer Dorsey, Mrs. Paul Twyman, Mrs. Douglas White, Mrs. Hortense T. Fuller and Mrs. Daniel B. Miller; dance hostesses, Miss Alma Moore, Mrs. Roy Hughes, Mrs. Dale Drain, Mrs. Josephus Trimble and Mrs. Thelma Patterson; card section, Mrs. John Spengler, Mrs. Thomas E. Fawcett, Mrs. Ethel Fowler; decorations, Miss Rosina Warren, Mrs. Albert E. Warren and Miss Emily Warren. Other committees will be announced later.

The next meeting of the unit will be October 26, at Thomas Circle Club, and will be in the nature of a homecoming for the members who have been in Europe. Members who will attend the national meeting of the auxiliary in New York City Tuesday are Mrs. Dorothy B. Harper, Mrs. Ethel Fowler, Mrs. May D. Lightfoot, Mrs. R. S. Jones, Mrs. Katherine Lewis, Mrs. Carl Brown and Mrs. Paul Twyman.

Mrs. Irene Arnold, past department president, will extend the greetings from Washington at the past presidents' parley dinner at the Pennsylvania Hotel, New York City, and Mrs. Gertrude Lyons will participate in the memorial service with taps.

VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS.

The detailed arrangements for the sixth annual armistice Day military ball of the Veterans of Foreign Wars were completed at a meeting presided over by Department Commander Joseph F. Beattie, Tuesday evening.

The ball, as in the past, will be held in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Willard on Armistice Night, November 11, and as usual the department commanders of the various veteran organizations in the District of Columbia have been invited to participate.

Those invited as guests include President and Mrs. Coolidge, members of the Cabinet, the ranking generals of the Army and Marine Corps, admirals of the Navy, District Commissioners and prominent members of the Senate and House committees.

Capt. Grover E. Moore, of the Federal Post, was confirmed as chairman of the ball committee, with Capt. Frank N. Lockhead, of the Militia Bureau, as assistant chairman. Capt. William L. Thomas, of Equality-Walter Reed Post, will be chairman of the floor committee, and will be assisted by Commander John J. Allen, National Capital Post; Commander E. J. St. Jacques, Equality-Walter Reed Post; Commander Grover E. Moore, Federal Post; Commander Thomas F. Fawcett, Potomac Post; Commander Victor C. Guillermaine, Front Line Post; Commander John Fleming, Columbia Post, and Commander H. J. Davis, Admiral Robert E. Peary Post.

The invitations and publicity will be under the chairmanship of Capt. Edwin S. Bettelheim, jr. Past Department Commander Charles H. Reilley will head the reception committee. The ticket committee will be headed by Maj. Edgar H. Hale, of Columbia Post, assisted by the quartermasters of the various posts. Maj. Thomas E. Fawcett, of Potomac Post, will head the committee on music, while Capt. Grover E. Moore, assisted by T. E. Lawless, of National Capital Post, will have charge of the decorations, and Maj. W. Lawrence Hazard and Lieut. Frank E. Heise will be in charge of the door committee.

The ball will be along the general lines of last year's, with the hall profusely decorated with the flags of allied nations that will add color to the uniforms worn by the military and naval attaches of the various legations.

SPANISH WAR VETERANS.

The District delegation of Spanish War Veterans reports the following resolutions adopted at the recent national encampment at Detroit:

A resolution indorsing the joint resolution introduced in the National House of Representatives by Representative Charles Brand, of Ohio, providing for a National Flag Code, and urging the national body to lend its efforts toward securing the early passage of this legislation.

A resolution memoralizing the national Congress to enact legislation that will give the medal of honor men of the Army the same gratuity that is now paid to men who served in the Navy.

A resolution urging Congress to pass legislation granting travel pay for troops who enlisted for the Spanish War and were held in the Philippine Islands, beyond such period of enlistment to participate in the Philippine insurrection, and also troops of the regular establishment discharged under General Order No. 40, or for the convenience of the Government, to accept civil appointments or commissions in the volunteer forces, Philippine Scouts or Constabulary, and who did not receive travel pay, the pay to be from the Philippine Islands to points of original embarkation for the islands, and where land transportation was allowed, to point of enlistment.

Harden Camp.

Herman A. Finke, of St. Louis, national historian of the Spanish War Veterans, at the regular meeting of Richard J. Harden Camp, delivered an address on recruiting and discussed the importance of the national encampment to be held at Havana, Cuba, next year. Other speakers of the evening were Quartermaster General James J. Murphy, Past Department Commander William L. Mattocks, Past Department Commander James E. Maynard, Commander James E. Smith, of Col. James S. Pettit Camp; Senior Vice Commander George V. McAlear, of Gen. Nelson A. Miles Camp; Daniel Griffin, of the Department of Wisconsin, and George W. Kingsbury.

Joseph J. Harvey presented a resolution petitioning Congress to amend the retirement act so as to retire veterans after 30 years service or at 62 years of age. The resolution was adopted.

Mitchell Hanson, of Company L, Second Regiment Alabama Volunteer Infantry; Thomas M. Colley, Company B, Thirty-third United States Infantry, and Tom D. Binckley, Company A, Seventh Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, were mustered in as active members of the camp.

Gen. Miles Auxiliary.

Department President Margaret Burns, of the Ladies' Auxiliaries, designated Past Department President Edna R. Summerfield to present the charter to the Gen. Nelson A. Miles Auxiliary at its recent meeting. Mrs. Summerfield instituted the Miles Auxiliary. A large number of the members of Gen. Nelson A. Miles Camp were in atttendance at the ceremony, and Commander Lorin C. Nelson made a short talk.

The members of the Gen. Nelson A. Miles Auxiliary are requested to meet at the main gate of the United States Soldiers Home at 2 o'clock this afternoon for the purpose of visiting the hospital of the home.

The meetings of the camps and auxiliaries for the week are: Col. John Jacob Astor Camp, tomorrow night, Stanley Hall, United States Soldiers Home; Gen. M. Emmet Urell Camp, Wednesday night, Pythian Temple, 1012 Ninth street northwest; Richard J. Harden Camp, Thursday night, Pythian Temple; Admiral George Dewey Naval Auxiliary, tomorrow night, 921 Pennsylvania avenue southeast; Gen. M. Emmet Urell Auxiliary, Wednesday night, Pythian Temple; Col. John Jacob Astor Auxiliary, Thursday night, 921 Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

Society of Veteran Officers.

The seventh annual dinner of the Society of Veteran Officers of the Third District of Columbia Infantry was held Monday night at Picardi's.

This society is composed of those officers of the regiment who served on the Mexican border and in the World War until merged October 11, 1917, into the Forty-first Division at Charlotte, N. C. This division was composed of the National Guard of Oregon, Washington, Montana, North and South Dakota.

Upon arrival in France the Forty-first Division became a replacement division and the officers were then sent to different divisions in the line. On the occasion of the dinner held after return to the United States, October 11, 1921, it was ascertained that one or more officers of the old Third District of Columbia Infantry had served with every combat division in France. The guests were Col. Winfield Scott, Commissioner of Pensions, and Col. Louis C. Brinton, recently appointed adjutant general of the District of Columbia Militia, succeeding Brig. Gen. Lloyd M. Brett, who was an honorary member of the society.

Ringing Church Bells Is an Athletic Art

Paris, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Ringing the bells in the Church of St. Germaine l'Auxerrois is so much of a he-man job that the bell ringer, M. Maxime Bigarelle, strips to the waist when he tackles it every Sunday morning. When M. Bigarelle breaks loose with the Marseillaise, he gives an exhibition that combines some of the more strenuous features of punching the bag, punting footballs, and giving some one a good swift kick.

The ancient keyboard, the same used on St. Bartholomew's bloody day in 1572, requires heavy punching and heavier footwork to make the wires pull the clappers. M. Bigarelle, a pupil of the famous Belgian bell ringer, Jef Benyn, is thinking of inventing another one that will require less labor. He doesn't get paid for his bell-ringing. He just does it for the love of it—and for the exercise.

CHEVERLY PROPERTY OWNERS ANNOUNCE NEW OFFICIAL STAFF

E. C. Dutton, Attorney, Named President; Capital Stock to Be Doubled.

COMPANY PLANS PAVING FOR ENTIRE SECTION

The Washington Suburban Realty Co., developers of Cheverly Properties, announce the election of new officers in the company, which is now headed by Edwin C. Dutton, as president; R. K. Le Blond, of Le Blond Machine Tool Co. of Cincinnati, is vice president, and O. R. Yagle is secretary and assistant treasurer. J. C. Libbert will serve as treasurer and Robert Marshall, Edwin L. Latimer and Capt. C. G. Calhoun are directors. Each of these officers is a well-known business man and will carry on the affairs of "The Suburb Beautiful" in a manner assuring the future of the development.

Mr. Dutton, the new president, is perhaps one of the best known of Washington attorneys. He is a member of the law firm of Jeffords & Dutton and is also president of the Washington College of Law.

Mr. R. K. Le Blond, one of Cheverly's principal stockholders, is a financier of national importance. He is the owner of the Le Blond Machine Tool Co. of Cincinnati, Ohio, and is also director in three of the leading banks of that city.

At the election of these new officers it was decided to double the capital stock of the company. Plans were also made for the paving of the entire Cheverly property.

Cheverly Paving Plans.

Paving of Woodland avenue, in Cheverly, has already been started by the Harris Construction Co., and as soon as this is completed work will go forward on the other sections of the development. It is planned to pave each section until the entire property is paved and curb and gutter installed. Paving, curb and gutter is included in the purchase price of every lot in Cheverly, guaranteed to the purchaser without further cost. Citizens of Tuxedo, adjoining Cheverly Properties, are planning to devote the entire proceeds of a carnival to the paving of Tuxedo road from River road, near Kenilworth, D. C., through Tuxedo to Cheverly.

Commissioners of Prince Georges County have already appropriated $1,250 toward surfacing this section with macadam. The District road commissioners have agreed to contribute $250 toward this project. The improvement of the Tuxedo road will provide an excellent thoroughfare from Fifteenth and H streets northeast to Tuxedo, and it is probable that a new bus route will be inaugurated at the completion of this section of the highway, providing Cheverly with half hourly bus service in addition to the regular bus service now operating between the development and Washington.

A water tower of 1,000,000 gallons capacity is shortly to be erected in what is known as "Section 10" of Cheverly Properties, one of the highest points in this suburban development. This spot was chosen by the sanitary commission, as it is the highest land in the entire area from Capitol Heights to College Park, the section wherein the tower is designed to increase the water pressure.

Hand in hand with these improvement activities, building goes steadily forward in Cheverly. A score of new homes are now nearing completion and many are being started that will be occupied before the winter months. These houses, which are being erected in various sections of the property are houses of charm and distinction, modern in every detail, and attractively landscaped in their settings of native trees.

Petrie Home of Stucco.

Alexander Petrie, of Kenilworth, D. C., is the owner of one of the attractive homes now practically completed. It is located in Purcell avenue, and is a two-story house of stucco construction. Claude A. Metcalf, of Washington, will soon occupy his new home in Belleview avenue, a two-story eight-room house. Another house recently completed in Belleview avenue will be occupied by the owner, Louis Hatmen. The house is a semi-bungalow of frame construction. A very attractive six room bungalow is being erected in Park Way by Mr. George Strickland, and will be ready for occupancy soon.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Owens are also building a semibungalow in Cheverly, of hollow tile and stucco construction. Two other homes of hollow tile in the Spanish design of architecture are now nearing completion in Holly road. These are being built by Louis Wetmore. Two beautiful homes, also in the Spanish design and stucco in finish are being erected by Frank L. Fanning, of Washington. The houses, which are located in Le Blond avenue, the main boulevard of the development, command one of the most charming views to be had from any section of the property, overlooking the National Capital and Washington Monument.

These houses, which are two stories and a half in height, lack nothing which would add to their beauty and convenience, being the last word in modern, comfortable and charming homes. Their floor plans, providing spacious and well ventilated rooms; their finish, both interior and exterior; their excellent and artistic fittings and modern conveniences, such as electric ranges, electric refrigeration and oil heating systems, make them modern homes in every sense of the word. The houses are now practically completed, and it is expected will be ready for occupancy within a fortnight.

Opened for Inspection.

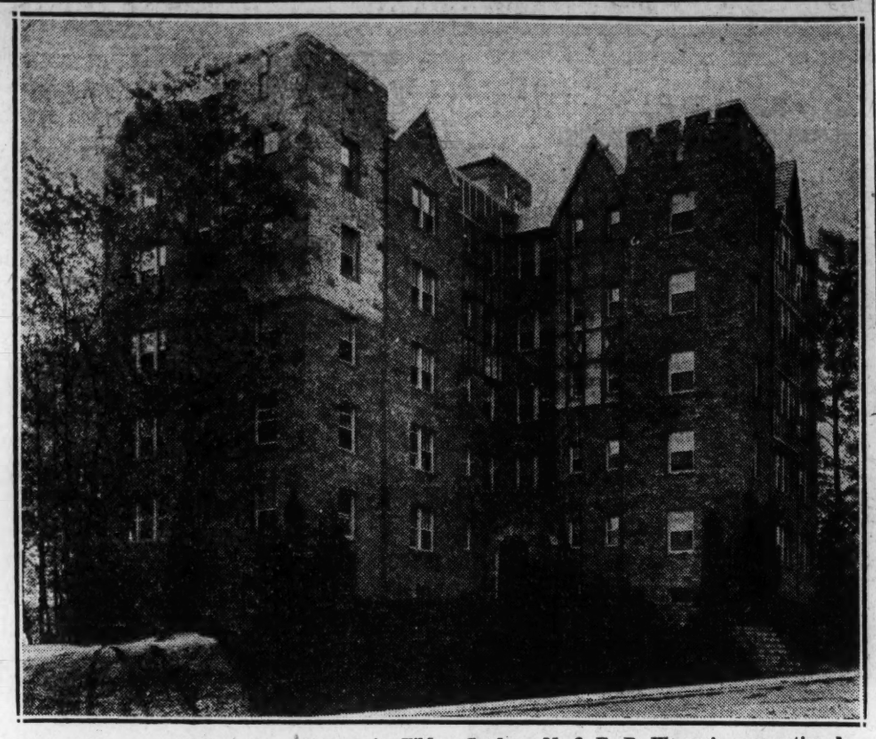

Another charming Cheverly home which has just been opened for public inspection is that built for Mrs. Edith B. Newman by the Lewis Homes Co. under the direction of R. B. Lanham. This home is located in Holly road and is of the colonial type of architecture, of frame construction. It contains nine rooms, exclusive of a finished social room in the basement and large tile bath with shower, complete in every detail, with the finest and most modern of plumbing equipment. The large living room contains an unusual and beautiful fireplace mantel of white quartz. There is a large dining room, attractive breakfast room, sun parlor and kitchen of comfortable dimensions, containing built-in cabinets, ironing board, electric range and electric refrigeration. The second floor contains four bright, large and airy sleeping rooms, with ample closet space for each room, and the tiled bath and shower.

There is a two-car built-in garage and social room in the basement. Oak floors are used throughout the house, and the walls are decorated in Tiffany work paneling in two tones. The windows are equipped with copper screens.

A beautiful stucco home, located in Le Blond avenue, has just been purchased by Chester B. Morris, of Washington. The home is two stories, of stucco construction and attractively landscaped. Mr. and Mrs. Morris are plenning to move into their new home immediately.

A number of other lot owners are planning to move into their new home erly during the fall and winter, all of which indicates a period of great activity at this popular development.

INITIAL BUILDING FOR TILDEN GARDENS

First of the seven buildings that will comprise Tilden Gardens, M. & R. B. Warren's cooperative development at Connecticut avenue and Tilden street. This first unit was entirely sold before completion, setting a record for Washington in this type of home.

2 APARTMENT HOUSES WILL COST $750,000

EVERY COMFORT PLANNED

Two apartment buildings, embodying every detail of comfort, are to be constructed in the Connecticut avenue section by Harry Bralove. Ground was broken last week for the five-story building at 3919 Connecticut avenue, adjoining Tilden Hall on the south, and construction is scheduled to begin on the other building at Connecticut avenue and Cumberland street the first part of this week. Estimated cost of the two buildings alone is $750,000.

The building at Tilden street and Connecticut avenue is to be of English architecture, five stories high and containing 60 apartments, ranging in size from two rooms and bath to six rooms and two baths. The site fronts 240 feet on Connecticut avenue, with a depth of 170 feet. Construction is to be of brick and reinforced concrete. There will be two elevators, telephone switchboard, and electric refrigeration in every apartment. Plans by George T. Santymyers, architect, call for a spacious lobby, to be elaborately furnished, with open fireplace, and ornate ceiling. The building is estimated to cost $350,000.

Plans for the other building call for the structure to have a frontage on three streets, Connecticut avenue, Chesapeake and Cumberland streets. The building will also be five stories high, with a frontage of 215 feet on Connecticut avenue, with a maximum depth of 160 feet. The building will contain 55 apartment units, ranging in size from four to six rooms and bath. The facade will be Spanish Renaissance. A feature of the building will be that garage space will be provided for every tenant.

NOISE FOUND TO DROP WORKERS' EFFICIENCY

Much has been said of the strain of noise on the nervous system in recent years. We have been told that noise tires even more than hard work, and that the reason for fatigue after a day's work at the office comes more from the clatter of typewriters, the jangling of telephones, talking, noises that penetrate from the street and all the varied sounds that go to make up the confusion in the average office.

And now comes proof of these facts and of the belief that noise lessens efficiency. This proof comes from the psychological laboratory of Colgate University in Hamilton, N. Y., where a series of experiments were conducted. A skilled typist was the subject for the experiments. Part of the time this typist worked in a room where the noise of a noise-machine, which was operated steadily for the duration of the experiment, reverberated from the walls; and part of the time, these walls were deadened so that the vibrations were reduced to about half their strength.

While the speed and accuracy of the typist's work were not greatly lessened when the noise was at its greatest, the nerve strain of maintaining this pace in the midst of the noise and confusion was so much greater that it eventually slowed down the speed and lessened the accuracy. But both were maintained throughout the day when there was less noise.

In the average home, drapes, rugs and curtains, and even the clothing of the family, absorb sound, so that it is usually reasonably comfortable. But in some homes, now, the same means of getting rid of the confusion of noise is being employed as in many large offices, churches and theaters—that is, the use of a plaster invented by Dr. Paul E. Sabine especially for this purpose.

This plaster prevents much of the echo and vibration of sound by turning from 15 to 20 per cent of the noise that strikes it into heat energy instead of echoing it all back as the ordinary wall surface does.

Suspicious Wife Hides In Traveler's Trunk

Vienna, Austria, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Screams issued from a heavy trunk when, after being dropped by porters, it rolled down a flight of steps at Warsaw railway station.

The owner, a commercial traveler named Bogowski, declared that the trunk contained his samples, but when railway officials opened it an attractive but disheveled young woman crawled out.

"My wife," gasped Mr. Bogowski dramatically.

She told the police she suspected her husband and chose this means to accompany him.

Y.M.C.A. REALTY COURSE TO START OCTOBER 31

Fifteen Classes Under Auspices of Real Estate Board to Run Through February.

QUIZZES WILL BE HELD

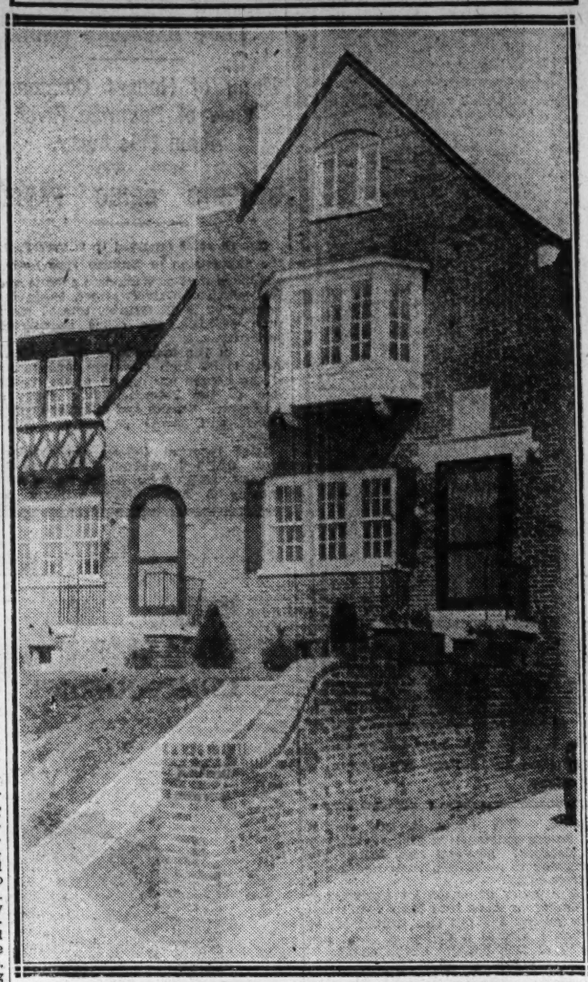

The regular Y. M. C. A. real estate course under the auspices of the Washington Real Estate Board will begin October 31. The board considers this function one of its most important activities as it is keenly interested in all educational matters and desires to offer every facility, not only to its members but to the general public, in order to bring about a better understanding of real estate questions and also increase the efficiency and ability of realtors to undertake what the board feels is a very professional and confidential capacity, that of dealing in estates, buying and selling homes and the investments incident thereto.

As heretofore there will be fifteen classes running into the end of February. The classes will consist of a study of the text book, "Principles of Real Estate Practice," by Ernest M. Fisher, who after many years with the National Association, recently accepted the chair of real estate at the University of Wisconsin. Quizzes will be given and regular tests leading to a certificate of graduation will be held. The subjects treated include real estate business, real estate office organization, renting, leasing and property management, insurance, real estate selling, advertising, valuation of real estate, building operations, financing real estate transactions, subdividing and city planning, legal considerations, taxation of real estate, real estate profession and its relation to the state and professional relationships.

The first lecture will be given by Roger J. Whiteford, attorney and general counsel of the Washington Real Estate Board, who will lecture on the general topic of real estate business. All the lecturers will be outstanding men in the community who have been successful and are in a position to be of great value to the younger members of the profession and the general public. The board here has been constantly active in forwarding its educational movement and the Y. M. C. A. classes have been particularly well attended. Almost 70 students enrolled last year, and practically all of them completed the course.

The fact that the subject of real estate is an educational feature is well demonstrated in the fact that a great many of the large universities of the country are inaugurating real estate courses, such as Johns Hopkins, Wisconsin, Maryland, Northwestern, Chicago and others have established real estate courses. The board will lend every effort and encouragement to any suggestions for advancing the educational features of this work and hopes that the classes will be larger this year than last.

REALTOR NEWS ACTIVITY IN CAPITAL IS PRAISED

The Washington Realtor has been singled out as one of the outstanding and commendable real estate news sources in the country. The National Real Estate Journal, the official magazine and journal of the National Association of Real Estate Boards in its October issue reproduces a copy of Au-7 Realtor with the following comment:

"The Washington, D. C. Real Estate Board has inaugurated a real estate page that takes the place of a board bulletin, giving as well general real estate news. This page appears regularly in the Sunday edition of a leading Washington newspaper.

The page always carries the definition of the term 'realtor' and a list of the members of the board. Photographs of realtor offices are usually printed each Sunday. One of the regular features of the page is a series of articles prepared by officials, business men and civic leaders on subjects of interest regarding the City of Washington, under the caption, 'Know Your Washington.' Such subjects as shipping facilities for the District of Columbia, the article prepared by the division freight agent of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, and the climate of Washington with reference to its effects on real estate operations, prepared by the Weather Bureau official, have appeared in that column.

"Besides the news of local real estate organization activities, there are a number of stories of National real estate activities.

The action of The Washington Post and the character of news supplied by the Washington Real Estate Board has come in for extremely favorable comment by many of the secretaries throughout the country at the various conventions and meetings of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, and the Washington Realtor has been displayed at these various conventions and a great deal of interest has been shown by realtors throughout the country and discussions have proved that the page is being increasingly read.

ABOUT

100% Co-Operative Apartment Ownership

Washington's Finest Apartment Homes

1—ECONOMY: Saving of a large percentage in rental through elimination of landlord's profit, vacancies, redecorating, etc.

2—PERMANENCY: Apartment the property of tenant-owner in every sense. Can be altered, changed or redecorated to suit his wishes.

3—LOCATION: Socially desirable location where cost of individual home of equal merit is almost prohibitive.

4—CHOICE OF NEIGHBORS: No family may become a tenant until approved by the other tenant-owners.

5—FREEDOM FROM CARE: Property under efficient management which looks after all the details of ownership and upkeep, relieving the tenant-owner of all cares.

6—SUPERIOR SERVICE: Tenant-owners are the actual employers of all house servants, who through permanency develop an efficiency that assures better service.

7—VOICE IN MANAGEMENT: Every tenant-owner enjoys an equal voice in the management and operation—but no personal service is required of him.

8—INVESTMENT: In addition to the saving on rental, the tenant-owner enjoys his proportionate share of all increases in the value of the property.

9—MASTER OF YOUR HOME: The tenant-owner is in fact his own landlord. He is in full and complete possession to do with his apartmnet as he wills.

10—BETTER PLANNING AND CONSTRUCTION: The 100% co-operative apartment house is in reality a group of the finest, modern, city homes, built for the permanent occupancy of their owners and therefore designed and constructed with that care found elsewhere only in the most expensive private homes.

ROCK CREEK PARK ESTATES

About the New Star Model Home—

ENCHANTING sweeps of Naturally lovely landscape surround the new Model Home on every side. Here is a complete work of beauty and architectural perfection. In Rock Creek Park Estates the cycle of the seasons is delightfully apparent. Each season adds its colorful beauty to the charm of this hundred acres of home land. Now the tints of Autumn have made of Rock Creek Park Estates "a mighty flower garden, blossoming under the spell of the enchanter, Nature." Here you can truly enjoy the healthful freedom of out-of-doors and yet retain the ecstacy of ideal, luxurious home life.

Rock Creek Park Estates is purely a prolongation of the Park itself. Its homesite perfection is not marred by unsightly developments. All urban conveniences are, of course, installed, but all are made to enhance the natural beauty abounding here. Even the hard-surfaced roads of the Estates, that join Rock Creek Park with Sixteenth Street, have been constructed to conform to the original contours of the softly undulating land. And preserving the desirability of this charming home environment is a carefully executed code of protective restrictions that form a bulwark of safety to the homesite investor here.

WOODLEY PARK HOMES FINDING READY MARKET

NEAR DOWNTOWN SECTION

The homes recently completed by the Wardman Construction Co. on Twenty-eighth street, in Woodley Park, are attracting much attention and finding a ready market, due largely to the obvious advantages of the location.

In a setting that is ideally beautiful, surrounded by private estates and a long stretch of Rock Creek Park, this development, it is safe to predict, will remain a cultured and beautified residential section for many generations. The fact that there is scant possibility of stores or buildings of commercial nature ever being situated in this area is proving a strong influence to people of natural refinement and sensibilities. People of this character, it is safe to assume, will not only care for and improve the appearance of their own property, but will show regard and respect for the entire community and lend their support to anything that would tend to enhance the beauty or reputation of the neighborhood.

Today we find people, buying under normal circumstances, very discriminating. In order to have a striking appeal a house must embody numerous features of modern invention, it must be substantial, not only in construction but in dignity as well. The community in which it is located must be protected so that the purchaser can be certain that in years to come he will be living in surroundings equal to or better than his present means afford. In other words today we have home seekers, not merely house hunters.

According to the Wardman Construction Co., Woodley Park is not now, nor will it ever be, menaced by the contamination of undesirable encroachments.

In addition to the barriers of protection that figuratively stand between Woodley Park and all that is unattractive, this development has the very important feature of being so close in that it takes but twelve minutes to reach the downtown section of the city.

$2,000,000 APARTMENT BUILDING TO BE ERECTED

Apartment building to be constructed on the site of the late S. W. Woodward home, at the east side of Connecticut avenue, between Wyoming avenue and Kalorama road, by Harry Bralove. When completed the building will represent an investment of about $2,000,000.

METHODS OF MAKING HOUSE SOUNDPROOF

Dry-Fill Materials Can Be Used in the Homes Already Built.

Does every footfall in the second-floor rooms of your home resound through the first-floor rooms, disturbing the peace of the whole family? Or does the noise from water pipes in the walls or floor embarrass you when you have guests in the house?

As with most other building problems, the home that is being built is much easier to insulate against sound than the one which has been built for some time. In the home that is being built, boards of cork, cane fiber or gypsum can be placed under the rough and finish flooring of the floor to prevent sounds from penetrating from one floor to the other. But such a material would require too much labor to install in the already built home.

One of the dry-fill materials that will deaden sound is the easiest for use in the walls of any home and in the floors of the old home. Materials such as dry-fill gypsum—gypsum rock manufactured in a flaky form—deadens sound and is easy to install because only a few of the floor boards need be removed and the material tucked in under the rest through the opening thus made.

$4,000-a-Year Man Sued for $12,000,000

New York, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—The most-sued man in New York is Thomas Horgan, a $4,000-a-year clerk, against whom suits totaling $12,000,000 are pending. Horgan, however, refuses to worry as he is property clerk of the New York Police Department and the suits are directed against him as representative of the city.

CONNECTICUT BRIDGE APARTMENTS PLANNED

Harry M. Bralove's Building Project Is to Cost $2,000,000.

Adding another imposing structure to the many at the south end of Connecticut Avenue Bridge, Harry M. Bralove has completed plans for an elaborate apartment building to be erected on the east side of Connecticut avenue, embracing the entire frontage of the block extending from Wyoming avenue to Kalorama road. The site was the former home of the late S. W. Woodward. The lot contains 43,486 square feet of ground, and the operation, when completed, will represent an investment of about $2,000,000.

Plans by George T. Santmyers, architect, call for an eight-story building of ornate design, with spacious lobby. The building will contain 64 spacious apartment suites, each with three and four bedrooms, two maids' rooms, three baths and large porch. Each unit will have exposures in three directions, insuring a maximum of light and ventilation. It is believed that apartments of this size will be in demand, as such accommodations are very limited in Washington.

The sale of the site and the financing of the first mortgage were negotiated by the H. L. Rust Co., and the same firm will have charge of the management of the property when completed, which is expected to be about October 1, 1928.

FIREPLACES AIDED BY PLASTIC PAINT

Fireplaces of brick, tile or wood sometimes grow dingy or fail to harmonize with the new scheme of decoration planned for the room where the fireplace is situated. And frequently the refinishing of the fireplace seems an impossible task, either from lack of money for expensive repairs or because the construction of this feature is such that remodeling it will mean more work than can be undertaken at the time. So the decorative idea must be changed or the fireplace must be left an ugly blot in an otherwise perfect setting.

But there is at least one way of refinishing the fireplace. Through the use of a plastic paint the work may be done quickly and easily and the fireplace may be made to harmonize perfectly with any decoration.

This plastic paint will adhere to practically any surface. But if the surface is rough or uneven, it must be made level first by applying a sort of base coat of plastic paint before the finish coat is applied. The surface, whether brick, tile or wood, also must be carefully cleaned with a cleaning powder, rinsed thoroughly and dried before being painted.

The best people lived here and that seemed sufficient. But as the town stretched itself and became a city, proud properties not soundly protected by sensible restrictions — yielded to careless ownerships. Stripped of beauty, broken in value, the neighborhood has sunk into commonness and obscurity.

Protection against such conditions in Woodley Park is absolute. Surrounded by public park property and the grounds of great estates, Woodley Park, only 15 minutes from midtown, is the city's outstanding example of a residential district protected against cheapening encroachments.

These new homes in 28th Street have two baths, clothes closets entirely of cedar, garage, maid's room, lavatory and shower. Fireplace, built-in refrigeration, instantaneous hot-water system, etc.

EXPERTS TO CONFER ON TENANT-OWNED APARTMENT HOUSES

Meeting in Chicago November 17-18 to Consider Legal Forms to Be Used.

HOUSING GIVEN VICTIMS OF ST. LOUIS TORNADO

More Than 2,000 Families Cared For Through Real Estate Exchange.

Specialists in the organization of co-operative or tenant owned apartment building projects will meet at the Drake Hotel, Chicago, November 17 and 18. The meeting is a special meeting of the Co-operative Apartment Division of the National Association of Real Estate Boards. It is called in order that there may be a direct group study of actual typical apartment buildings cooperatively owned, and in order that there may be a full group discussion of the standard legal forms approved by the division for the organization of co-operative apartment projects. The legal forms through which the tenant-ownership plan is put into effect are of the greatest possible importance in safeguarding the tenant-owner's interests and in insuring the maximum advantage of the plan, officers of the division point out.

A meeting of the executive committee of the cooperative apartment division will be held at the Drake Hotel, Chicago, November 16, immediately preceding the general meeting.

Inspection Trip Planned.

An inspection trip covering Chicago tenant-owned apartment buildings is planned for November 17. At every building to be visited a representative of the firm which organized the project will be present to answer questions as to the form of organization used, and the special features of the building made possible because it was designed for permanent occupancy by its owners.

The concluding session will be taken up with a discussion of methods found of advantage in the organization of co-operatively owned apartment developments and in their operation and sale.

Housing for more than 2,000 families made homeless by the St. Louis tornado of October 1 has been provided through the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange working in cooperation with the Red Cross. Members of the exchange took the initiative in offering 30 to 60 days occupancy, rent free in worthy cases.

The exchange, in the emergency shortage of homes which the storm created, took action to throw the whole service of its membership into the steadying of the shelter situation. The board took action as follows:

Branded as unethical any attempt by owners or agents to raise rents during the emergency. By formal resolution members of the board not only are urged to refuse to act as agent for any owner who should insist on a rise of rent during the emergency shortage but also are asked to report his case to the exchange.

Called for extension of time for mortgage payments, either principal or interest, for home owners in the devastated region.

Pledged the 409 real estate concerns who are members of the exchange to offer this extension in all cases where they themselves hold deeds to property in the affected area, and to urge owners who are their clients to make similar extension.

Is making estimates for persons whose homes were wrecked on the amount of damage and the probable cost of reconditioning the structures. It is cautioning property owners to use care in the selection of responsible contractors and estimators in the work of reconstruction. This work is being done in cooperation with the Master Builders Association.

Opened a bureau at board headquarters to advise without charge all holders of insurance policies on property damaged by the tornado. The bureau is giving detailed information as to what measures the holders should take to safeguard their interests.

The Los Angeles Realty Board is to have a home of its own, and will own it free of encumbrance. The board in a one-day campaign raised $150,000 with which to build a structure for its permanent headquarters.

The day was made a jubilee sales day, earnings from which went to make the new board building possible. Fifty members subscribed $1,000 each to insure the construction of the home.

Louisville Board Opens Home.

The Louisville, Ky., Real Estate Board has formally opened its new board home, the building and its site, across the street from the city hall, represent an expenditure of approximately $50,000.

The newly opened permanent home for the activities of the Louisville Real Estate Board is also headquarters for the Kentucky Real Estate Association and for the Louisville Association of Building Owners and Managers. It is a two-story brick and stone structure of Italian design with working space of approximately 4,000 square feet for the real estate board's activities.

A real estate license law for Mississippi will be the principal legislative objective of the Mississippi Real Estate Association, which has just concluded its annual convention at Vicksburg.

The board of directors of the Wisconsin Association of Real Estate Brokers has passed a resolution stating that the association does not countenance the use of free-lot schemes to sell real estate, and recommending that the constitution and by-laws of the association be so amended as specifically to prohibit any member from using such a selling plan.

Any person who represents himself to be a realtor when as a matter of fact he is not entitled to that designation is guilty of a fraud upon the public and will be denied a renewal of license as a real estate broker, according to an official notice for California which has just been issued by Stephen Barnson, State real estate commissioner.

The term "realtor" is limited to mean a member of a constituent board of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, and the exclusive right of the association to the word has been upheld by court decisions in various States, the commissioner points out.

The action of the State real estate department of California is in line with a ruling for New York State made by A. C. MacNulty, assistant secretary of state in charge of the administration of the New York real estate license law, and with the position taken for New Jersey by the New Jersey Real Estate Commission.

The New York ruling warns that revocation of license is the penalty to which any real estate broker is liable in that State if he represents himself falsely to the public as a realtor. Such action constitutes fraudulent practice, the ruling holds. The New Jersey State commission, on advice from the State attorney general's department, has held that refusal to discontinue the unauthorized use of the term constitutes misrepresentation to clients. The commission has summoned before it persons who have used the designation realtor without authorization and has asked them to discontinue its use.

According to Vincent P. Bradley, member of the commission, it is the intention of the commission, if the misrepresentation continues, to bring complaint against such persons, looking to the withdrawal of their real estate broker licenses.

The California commissioner in his statement of the course to be pursued in that State explains the status of the word realtor and gives the reason for the department's position. The text is as follows:

"Realty boards are requested to inform this department of any person unlawfully using the word 'realtor.' This is a coined word belonging to the National Association of Real Estate Boards and may be used only by its members. A number of court decisions in various States sustain this view.

"The State Real Estate Department of California severely frowns upon advertising methods intended to mislead the public. Any one who holds himself out as a realtor when in fact he is not a member of a real estate board having affiliation with the national association is stating a falsehood and is pursuing a course of deceit and misrepresentation. Persons found guilty of this fraud will be denied a renewal of license."

An economic survey of Miami from the point of view of real estate is now being undertaken by the Miami Real Estate Board.

Taking a look at all the factors at once which determine land uses and land limitations, physical, economic and social, will be the purpose of the survey, which will be conducted by the land economics committee of the board of which Arthur E. Curtis is chairman. It will cover the whole metropolitan region about Miami.

A council of bankers, business men and newspaper editors will review the committee's work. As groundwork the committee will study: The proportion of vacancies existing in the city; vehicular and pedestrian traffic flow; home ownership and housing conditions; land transfer; land income.

In the field of real estate finance it will consider: Land credits, including the time element, the security offered and the nature of the various credit instruments in use; mortgage banking in the Miami district; the work of building and loan associations; land values and valuations.

Policies of land settlement and development in use will be studied, as will also the seasonal factor in property incomes. It is planned to present the data in graphic form.

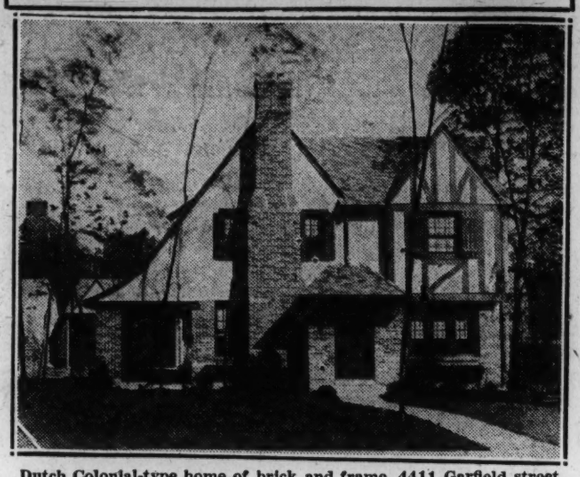

University Gives Course.

The University of Minnesota is not only opening this year a sequence of courses in real estate but is also attempting to develop a system of part time employment for the students in these classes. This is to be so arranged as to give them practical experience in real estate at the same time that they are making their academic study of the subject. The courses are to be given in the School of Business Administration.

Two years of previous study in the College of Science, Literature and Arts are required for enrollment, as for all enrollments in the School of Business Administration.

The Minneapolis Real Estate Board through its educational committee is cooperating in the planning of the work.

Cologne Pedestrians Monarchs of Streets

Berlin, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—American travelers coming to Berlin from Paris in their touring cars declare that the most difficult city in Germany for a chauffeur is Cologne.

The pedestrian, they say, is absolute monarch of the streets. It is impossible for an automobile to drive through the streets of the inner city even at moderate speed, because pedestrians will listen to no siren or horn, but calmly proceed in the middle of the street until it suits their convenience to turn aside. "It is enough to drive any chauffeur crazy," tourists declare.

In this respect Cologne is the very opposite of Berlin, where accidents are the order of the day because autos drive recklessly through the streets not even stopping when a street car halts.

AT THE CHESS TABLE

By WILLARD H. MUTCHLER.

Consternation is rampant among chess followers the world over with the arrival of the news that Alekhine won both the eleventh and twelfth games of the world championship match at Buenos Aires and is leading Capablanca in the title chase by a score of 3-2 and 7 draws. The question now uppermost in the minds of the fans is whether Alekhine can retain his advantage until the close of hostilities.

Of the present match we can only go on record as stating that it is our belief that the games produced to date have been collectively and individually the poorest played of any world championship match games.

A perusal of the scores is all that is necessary to convince one that neither player is exhibiting even a remote approach to his best form. Cabled reports indicate that the champion has appeared extremely nervous, even to the extent of requesting, during the twelfth game, that the public be excluded, as the watchers disturbed him. To one personally, or through reports, familiar with Capablanca's usual plegmatic disposition under the stress of competition, these facts would seem almost inexplicable. And Alekhine is by no means covering himself with glory, despite the fact that he leads Capablanca for the second time in a match—a hitherto unprecedented occurrence.

The scores of the sixth, seventh and eighth games, which are appended, speak more forcefully than words. Nevertheless, speculation is rife, as may be gleaned from the remarks of Barry in the Boston Transcript, "A story of the eighth game of the match leaves one in a state of wonderment. Alekhine, playing white, had unquestionably the freer game with a white knight securely posted at Q4. Capablanca's position was congested with an isolated queen's pawn. At move twelve Capablanca endeavored to free his position by Q—Kt5 ch, where Alekhine should play Q—K2, freeing the rear for his king's rook and leaving black's queen to be driven. Instead, Alekhine, an attacking player by temperament, deliberately offers the exchange of queens, is forced to retreat by an obvious rejoinder of black's and a simple ending follows in which he appears to have a slight advantage, but too delicate to improve. By adopting the move suggested, black loses time and white gains positional advance for his rooks thereby. It is impossible to give the elaborate analysis such a position admits of, but such as the writer has indulged leads in several variations to positive wins and in all variations to distinct advantage. It is so obvious that Alekhine's play is inexplicable."

Perkins Exhibits Skill.

N. S. Perkins, club champion at the Capital City Chess Club last Saturday, gave a public exhibition of his skill at simultaneous play when he met all comers at the club's quarters and emerged victorious with a score of eleven wins, no losses and one drawn. The sole draw was secured by William Montgomery and was a somewhat loosely played affair which the club champion might well have added to his other victories. Perkins played steadily throughout and had litti difficulty in defeating the majority of his opponents, winding up several of the games in pretty fashion. The summary and the detailed score of his win over J. G. Fairchild is appended.

The fall and winter tournament activities at the local club also got under way with the commencement of the A-B tournament. A second tourney to be known as the general tourney and to include all players below Class A-B strength is also scheduled to start in the immediate future. In the first round of the Class A-B affair all the games which went to a decision were marked by their brevity, the longest being a 40-moe game between Martin Stark and G. F. Chase. The former-mentioned player won the game but it may be cited as a gift of the gods for his opponent overlooked a two-move mate combination after having secured an advantage in material of two pawns. C. W. Stark and W. B. Mundelle engaged in a rather tame parite, which went 60 moves and ended in a draw. G. E. Bishop defeated J. Roberts in one of the best games of the round and finished off with a pretty combination. C. C. Bettinger had little trouble in disposing of Carl Hesse in a 27-move game, in which he completely outplayed his younger adversary. Earnest Knapp, well known to District fans, as one of their strongest players of some eight years back, returned to the active arena and scored a victory over A. Y. Hesse in 17 moves. The standing:

Solutions to Problem.

The key to No. 233 is Kt-B3. Among those sending in solutions were Jacob Frech, Charles C. Taylor, E. J. Kassel, P. L. Reed, A. Y. Hesse, Erwin W. Williams, Joseph Tischler.

Jacob Frech early wrote in commenting, "There are about 70,000 possible resulting positions. White has choice of about 44 moves. Kt-Kt5 seems to be his best. Black has choice of about 40 answers. About 39 of them can not stave off immediate mate; but KtxP(Kt5) is a good defense to it, i. e., Kt-Kt5 defeats Kt-Kt5 by a second move, either capture or K-Q4. That is as far as I have been able to go on the problem today."

Later he adds, "Since mailing my comments re Kt-Kt5 as a wonderfully enticing but faulty key move, I have tried again, and discovered, to my surprise, that Kt-33 is the key move. Some of white's second moves are formidable one-move problems. It will probably be difficult to find a two-mover that is superior to this one in giving brain work and pleasurable pastime to solvers.

"As chess-problem solving is solely an exercise of the illative power—the power that directs everything that is correctly done—it would be good if our psychological scientists were to make it a department of their psychological domain. In a chess problem the laws are consistent and unambiguous, and all the pieces are visible to the eye; nothing obscured. Why are we so long sometimes in reaching true conclusions? Why are there not more chess problem solvers or players? These are questions that scientists could usefully consider."

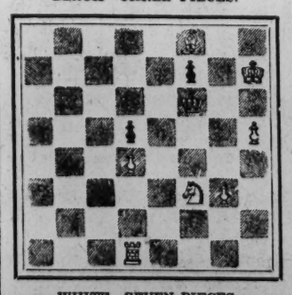

C. C. Taylor says, "I wasted about 15 minutes trying to save the queen. Who would not? The rest was not too simple." P. L. Reed is of the opinion that "The eight different mates for the eight possible moves of the black knight make a beautiful combination."

Today's offering is a four-move composition by Carl A. Hesse and we forewarn the solvers that it is a good one and should cause them some little trouble. Comments, criticisms, and suggestions are requested.

Smithfield Apartment Building Is Purchased

Sale of the Smithfield apartment building, 1115 Ninth street northwest, was reported yesterday with the transfer of the property from W. F. Ross and Ruth Phillips Ross to C. C. Pierce, of Norfolk, Va. The consideration involved was said to be $65,000.

Formerly known as the Montrose, the building is six stories high, contains twelve apartments of four rooms and bath each, with a limestone front going half way up the facade of the building. The property has a frontage of 31 feet on Ninth street, running back approximately 100 feet.

REALTOR HEAD'S REPORT SHOWS PROGRESS FOR YEAR

opinion of the board was carefully presented. These bills should be watched over when they are introduced in Congress and every effort exerted to see that any undesirable features are eliminated.

Taxation Was Studied.

"The questions of reform in the present system of taxation in the District of Columbia and the proper fiscal relation between the United States Government and the District of Columbia, are problems now confronting the authorities of the District of Columbia and are now being given careful thought by the civic leaders of our community. A joint committee has been organized to give these questions the careful study and analysis which they deserve, and our board is represented on this committee. The board is, therefore, in a position to present its views directly to the authorities of these important and vital questions.

"In close relation to the question of taxation is the matter of assessments of real estate. The board has been requested by the assessor to obtain information as to income on investment properties which he may use as one of the factors in determining the valuation of these properties. A communication has been sent by the board to all its members requesting information as to the gross rents as shown by the schedules of the propertiees which they manage for the years ending October 1, 1927, and October 1, 1928. It is hoped there will be prompt compliance with this request by all of our members in order that this information as to rentals may be forwarded promptly to the assessor.

"The efforts of the board to have tax certificates issued more promptly have been continued, and since the appointment of the present Board of Commissioners the matter was again presented. It is reported that the time in which we can obtain certificates has been reduced very materially, and we have the assurance of the Commissioners that efforts will be made looking to a further reduction in the time. The Commissioners have advised us that most certificates are now issued in a maximum period of two weeks and many in a shorter period of time. While this shows a marked improvement over the former situatoin, the time should still be shortened very mtaerially.

City Planning Discussed.

"The National Conference on City Planning was held in this city during the past winter. The board was one of the cooperating agencies and made a contribution to the expense in connection with the conference.

"During the past year an industrial campaign was inaugurated by trade and civic organizations of the city looking to the establishment in the District of Columbia of a larger number of industries. This activity is under the supervision of the Joint Industrial Council on which the board is represented by two members. A contribution was made to the work of this council.

"The Convention Bureau, although now supported financially by the hotels of the city, is still under the supervision of a board of directors selected from local organizations, this board having two members representing it in this work.

"Perhaps the most outstanding sporting event held in the District of Columbia during the past year was the Presidents Cup Regatta, which brought to this city not only many thousands of visitors but the outstanding devotees to motor boating and their fast racing boats. The board was represented on the committee which had this regatta in charge.

"The new Defense Highway, connecting the National Capital with the city of Annapolis, was opened during the summer by appropriate ceremonies, in which most of the local organizations participated. On the committee having charge of the details, the board was represented and it had a part in the ceremonies.

Divisions Were Active.

The property management division, the sales managers division and the newly-created mortgage and finance division, the latter having been making a thorough study of rates, commissions, etc., have all been unusually active. The educational program of the board has included a series of forum meetings and the usual well-attended course in elementary principles of real estate at the Y. M. C. A. Both the forum and the Y. M. C. A classes have made considerable advance during the year by tests and well known lecturers and first-class textbooks.

The better homes show won considerable praise and merit last year. It was held during the week beginning October 18, 1926, and proved to be a great success, both from the standpoint of an exposition and the standpoint of attendance. This exhibition was designed as educational in character, with the idea of promoting the desire for home ownership, and, accordingly, it was kept free from all the usual catch-penny devices and features which would detract from the booths of the exhibitors. The persons who participated in the exposition were high in their praise of its character, and proof that it was popular with the public is found in the fact that there was an estaimated attendance in excess of 45,000. Although the exhibition was undertaken with the main thought of publicity and the encouragement of home ownership, so that members of the board might benefit individually, financially it proved a success to the board and netted our organization a return of $1,958.85.

A similar exposition is planned for the present yea and will be held during the week of October 24 to 29, 1927, and arrangements for the same are now well under way. The amount of space sold for the coming exposition has exceeded the amount sold at this time last year and a successful exposition may be confidently expected. The contract with the management of the show is similar to that entered into last year.

And adds the report:

New Services Planned.

"Since our last annual meeting the board has endeavored to establish a number of new services for the benefit and advantages of the members of the board. They will be mentioned below. The inauguration of these services so taxed the space at the board's headquarters that it was necessary to add two additional rooms to our offices. As now arranged, the offices of the board present not only a very attractive appearance, but are so organized as to make the work of the board very efficient.

"By far, the largest undertaking for serving members of the board was the installation of the ownership file, which shows the ownership of each individual parcel of land in the District of Columbia, and is posted daily from the court records. This file is based upon the tax records of the District of Columbia, and at the time of its installation embraced about 180,000 cards. The number of these cards is now greatly increased by reason of the fact that we include in our records all lots in new subdivisions, as well as all changes in the so-called 800 numbers or tax numbers. This service is proving very popular with members of the board and it is hoped our membership will make even greater use of the same.

"There is no file, to our knowledge, which is as up-to-date in this respect as our own, as our posting is completed by 12 o'clock noon following the receipt of a transfer record. A special clerk is in charge of these files and the information which you may desire may be obtained either by telephone or by letter. This service is designed as an exclusive service for board members, and accordingly we desire to identify the inquirer as a member of the board before information is given in order that we may not be imposed upon.

"The actual cost of the installation of this file to the board amounts to $1,606.58. However, we believe that the actual value of this property is far in excess of that amount. A disinterested appraiser fixed the value of this file in excess of $5,000.00.

Maps Show Zoning.

"Another service feature installed by the board for the benefit of its members is maps showing the zoning of each piece of property in the District of Columbia. These maps are three in number, one showing the use to which property can be put under the rulings of the Zoning Commissioner, another showing the height of buildings which can be erected, and the third showing the different areas. These maps are changed after each decision of the Zoning Commission, and are consequently up to date and give the latest authentic information on zoning. These maps are so arranged that they can be inspected at the board's office at any hour. Information regarding zoning may also be obtained by the use of the telephone.

The employment register which was installed by the board during last year has proved to be very beneficial to some of our members, as well as to applicants for positions. Our effort is to place on this register applications from persons who are experienced in real estate work and embraces all positions from stenographers and typists to executive managers. We suggest that when help is desired that members of the board consult this service, as it may be the means of saving time as well as expense in finding the assistance desired. Quite a number of persons were placed in offices of members of the board during the past year. We repeat from our last year's report that it is our hope that the connections so formed may prove to be beneficial, both to the member of the board and to the employe.

This report was received with considerable enthusiasm and favorable comment on the part of members of the board and even nonmembers who attended the meeting. The summary of the report indicated a tremendous advance both in the welfare of the board and its service to the community.

Desirable rooms and pleasant places to board are listed every morning in Post Classified Ads.

BUILDING PERMITS

A decided drop in the total of authorized new construction for the week ended noon yesterday, as compared to the previous week, was noted yesterday by Col. John W. Oehmann, building inspector for the District. The Wardman Construction Co. is to erect twelve two-story brick homes at 707-29 Tuckerman street northwest, at an estimated cost of $60,000. H. C. Ball is to construct four two-story brick dwellings at 4126-32 Military road northwest, at an estimated cost of $33,500.

Building permits to noon yesterday follow:

H. C. Ball, to erect four two-story brick dwellings, 4126-32 Military road northwest; estimated cost $33,500.

W. Walter Vaughn to erect six two-story brick and tile dwellings, and six private garages, 4315-25 Twelfth place northeast; estimated cost $38,400.

Annie M. Roberts, to erect one-story frame dwelling, 3225 E street southeast; estimated cost $3,500.

John Herath, to erect two two-story brick dwellings, 2409-11 S street southeast; estimated cost $10,000.

Gasoline Substitute Is Said Not to Burn

Paris, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—"Gasoline" that won't burn—called Makhonine after its inventor—is asserted to have proved its value in many tests by government engineers, but there still is a fight in parliament on the supposition that the new fuel's trial results are being suppressed.

Many aviators in France, as elsewhere die, burned to death by gasoline flames. It is claimed for the "non-explosive" fuel that such accidents will be entirely eliminated. It is affirmed, also, by its supporters that Makhonine is an efficient dependable fuel, capable of replacing gasoline in airplanes. It has for some time been used by the French Line on its small harbor boats and in all its trucks and automobiles with what are said to be very satisfactory results.

VALUE OF PARKS STATED BY LIEUT. COL. U. S. GRANT

in many cases be combined in one and the same park area. Witness the development of a major sports center, including tennis, baseball and golf course, in the plateau area of Rock Creek Park, along the western edge of Sixteenth street, above the Brightwood reservoir; the utilization of part of Garfield Park for a small children's playground, the intensive major sports development of West Potomac Park, adjacent to the Mall system. But such combination is practicable only when neither use is sacrificed to the other.

It is not to be expected that any one will deny the desirability of a park system comprising an ample provision of all of these different sorts of facilities and opportunities, but to meet such a generally conceded desideratum will evidently involve a large initial expenditure of funds for purchases of land and a further expenditure for initi improvemen and maintenance. The conscientious public official, connected with obtaining or appropriating funds for such p s l ass self whether the cost does not perhaps exceed the benefits, whether the publi 's need for oth r municipr ments is not greater at this moment th r parks an as far as p will investigate the various elements and not reach a conclusion until convinced by facts.

The experiences of W gton during the last 25 years is certainly conclusive as to the necessity for having an app land progra of chases, well thought out in advance and based on the cost of development and maintenance as well as first cost of acquiring the land, and the extravagance of leaving such purchases until park development becomes impracticable because of other kinds of urban development or too expensive because of increases in values. Since the construction of streets, sewers, water lines, s , as well as parks, l in the value of the adjacent land, the land needed for all these purposes should be acquired at the same otherwise the municipality, by spending its funds for one of these purposes, is actually raising the cost of the others for itself later on.

Preventive of Crime.

The following extracts from a statement on "Measures Looking to Crime Prevention," by Mr. Philip Archibald Parsons (The American City, page 36, July, 1927), indicate one of the uses of recreation facilities, the value of which is only just beginning to be fully appreciated:

"The nation's budget for crime has been shown to be about three times its expenditure for education. An expansion of the social work program in the schools would be desirable even if it had to be secured at the expense of a part of our present cultural program. If society has to choose between a socialized individual a little less informed, and a more learned person without a proper sense of social responsibility, it had better take the former.

"There are two outstanding facts which have come to use a result of juvenile court work. Organized and supervised recreation keeps down juvenile delinquency; and vicious neighborhoods and "gangs" are among the most prolific causes of youthful misconduct. We have only begun to provide facilities for recreation under properly supervised conditions. Some program must be devised to furnish diversion and wholesome recreation for every city child throughout the year.

Adults Need Leisure Time.

"The field of providing entertainment and diversion for the youth and adults should not be allowed to remain in undisputed possession of commercial enterprises. The organization of our business and industrial life is now such that the leisure time of most adults requires a very restricted and artificial form of recreation. The solidarity of social groups requires that they should produce their own diversions to a much greater extent than at present. The wedge that is being driven between the young and the old by our system of education and separate amusements for the young and for adults is threatening the very existence of our primary groups—the family, the neighborhood, and the institutions of religion."

The systematic development of parks, providing adequate facilities of the various sorts in proportions well balanced to the needs of the community in each case, has not been the established policy of any municipality in this country for a long enough period of years to permit any reliable value in dollars and cents to be assigned to the various functions parks may play locally—the value of mere beauty or historic interest is more easily measured by the number of tourist visitors and the amounts they spend in the city. The value of such recreation facilities as preventative medicine, an improving and securing the public's health, is obvious but also hard to reduce to figures. We may well take to heart the remark of our wise President, who so sincerely believes in constructive economy and has practiced it with such marked success.

"The present cenutry has seen a tremendously vi dev t in the opening up of small parks in congested centers, the laying-out of playgrounds for children, the building of community centers to minister to the normal life of young folks, and the establishment of athletic and recreation fields for the general public. The wholesome, strengthening, refining influences which all of these have had upon American life is beyond estimation. It is all an important part of the dominant purpose of this republic to raise up a people who are fit to rule.

"The immediate aim of these efforts is to improv the public health. It is realized that sound bodies mean an increased industrial efficiency. But the purpose goes beyond this to the cleansing and clarifying of the mind, raising the whole standard of life. It is becoming better and better understood that a sound body, a informed mind, normal social contacts, and that contentment which comes from opportunity for a broader self-expression, are all vital factors in the preservation of our national existence."

The values of other municipal improvements and operations are likewise not absolute ar but rarely r ducible with any confidence to dollars and cents. They are largely a matter of opinion, and the better informed and the more experienced the person whose opinion is to have determining weight, the more likely the estimate is to be right. The citizens of Washington are unusually fortunate in having secured the advice and assistance, in solving their city planning and park problems, of some of the Nation's most experienced and competent experts in this particular field of municipal work and in having associated with them the city's own municipal authorities on the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. The composition of this commission is such that the taxpayers may be assured that its recommendations are based upon the best technical knowledge and experience, checked and modified by full knowledge of local conditions and the public's other needs.

Artificial Breeding Of Lobsters Planned

Berlin, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—To raise the standard of Heligoland lobster fisheries and to eliminate serious competition from the Scandinavian lobsters, large quantities of which are imported via Heligoland, duty free, the Prussian Biological Institute at Heligoland is planning to artificially breed this popular seafood.

50 female lobsters which the Heligoland fishermen have voluntarily contributed from their last year's catches.

Round-Up of 30,000 Reindeer Is Planned

Akiak, Alaska, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Preparations are being made here for the first round-up of the estimated 30,000 reindeer in the Kuskokwim River herds.

Reindeer owned by Eskimos and whites alike will be driven to Akiak next month for counting and marketing. The round-up, which will be under the supervision of Prof. Clark M. Garber, district superintendent for the United States Bureau of Education, will mark the first attempt to determine the exact rate of increase in the deer herds of this region.

3929 JENIFER ST., CHEVY CHASE, D. C.

Beautiful detached home in ideal section. It has seven large rooms, first-floor tiled lavatory, large living room with open fireplace of stone, three large bedrooms and bath with shower, slate roof, built-in garage; large living porch with separate entrance from living room; most modern heating plant and every modern facility and convenience, hardwood floors throughout, screens, awnings, metal weather strips and a delightful lot, profusely planted with evergreens, shrubbery and flowers, also numerous large trees and hedges. Owner, leaving city, desires immediate sale and has put price below reproduction cost. Perfect condition inside and out.

4104 HARRISON ST., CHEVY CHASE, D. C.

Delightful brick home on Harrison street, one of the best streets in that smart section. Military officer has left Washington and must sell at once. House is center-hall plan, with four bedrooms, two fine baths, living and sleeping porches copper screened, weather stripped throughout; modern in every detail as to construction, design and equipment; built-in garage; wonderful lot, 60x150, beautifully planted. This house can be purchased at a bargain figure.

5002 ARKANSAS AVE., SAUL'S ADDITION

This eight-room semi-detached brick home represents the best buy of its class in Saul's Addition. The house is only about three years old and has been unusually well cared for by its present owners, who moved in when new. Complete in every detail, the house has metal weather stripping, awnings and is screened throughout; a one-car garage is located at the end of the deep lot, which is also a bit wider than the average, giving an air of added spaciousness and exceptional brightness to the interior; a triangular park across the broad, paved avenue upon which the home is located gives a most pleasing outlook and insures the value for years to come. Call us for appointment to inspect.

TAKOMA PARK BARGAIN

On one of the best corners of this suburb we are offering what is probably the finest home of its class on the market today. Built for his own home by a man who knows the building game, quality is its keynote. The house is just about a year old, and is being offered for sale only because it is too small for his present needs.

The construction is stucco over hollow tile. There are hardwood floors upstairs and down; all the interior woodwork is of gumwood; the large tile bath would grace any home. One enters through a center hall; on the right is the dining room with the breakfast alcove and kitchen behind it. The homey living room, with a real open fireplace, is on the left. East of the living room is a spacious and unusually bright solarium. On the second floor are the three well-arranged bedrooms. Five cedar closets throughout the house are but one of its many unusual features. The garage is built in and heated. Don't fail to see this before you buy. Ask for Mr. Neale.

Drive out this afternoon and inspect these houses, or call our office for further information.

Mr. Work's Pointer On Auction Bridge

By MILTON C. WORK
The International Authority.

With the return of Fall and the increase of Bridge interest which always occurs with the end of the Summer, the daily collection of Bridge queries increases many fold and I note in my daily budget much repetition. I am sure that readers will be interested in hearing that the same mail frequently brings exactly the same query from many different sections of the country, and often from different parts of one city. While all who write asking Bridge questions and enclosing return envelopes receive direct replies, it is but natural to suppose that many who do not write are uncertain concerning these same popular queries. I have determined, therefore, to give in today's article some of the answers that I send by the dozen each day. The nature of the query will be apparent from reading the reply.

NEW DEAL.

No hand can be so bad that it entitles its holder to demand a new deal. Nothing is more absurd than the persistent and widely circulated idea that the holder of a hand without Ace or face has the right to demand that the deal be thrown out. A player who held Five-high in one suit and Four-high in the three remaining suits would doubtless have an Auction curio, but he would not have the right to a new deal.

REVOKE.

A revoke is not established (by that I mean it is not too late to correct it) until the revoking player or his partner leads or plays, whether in turn or otherwise, to the succeeding trick. The law that a revoke is established by the turning and quitting of the trick in which it occurred, ceased to exist with the adoption of the present Code in April, 1926. Now a revoke can be corrected by an adversary of the Declarer up to the time he or his partner has led or played to the next trick; by Declarer, until he has played to the next trick from either of his hands. The question of who won the trick on which the revoke occurred, or the turning and quitting of it does not affect the situation. After the revoke is established, if it be detected and the penalty for it claimed, two tricks are taken from those belonging to the side of the revoking player and added to those of the other side. The score is made up later as if no revoke had occurred. The trick on which the revoke was made may not be altered by the substitution of any card, nor is the ownership of it affected by the discovery of the revoke. If one side win a trick illegally by revoke, they keep the trick and pay the penalty later.

WHO PLAYS THE HAND?

The Laws expressly provide that the player who first for his side names the declaration that becomes the final contract, is the Declarer and his partner the Dummy. Intervening declarations do not affect this rule in any way. If, for example, a Dealer opened the auction by bidding one Spade, on the next round called two Hearts, and later in the auction his partner bid three Spades and obtained the contract, the Dealer would be the Declarer because he first for his side named the declaration that became the final contract. The fact that Dealer (as some put it) abandoned his original declaration, does not matter. The first bid of the suit or No Trump by the side which obtains the contract is the sole and only test.

RESERVING A BID.

The Dealer is required to commence the auction with either a bid or a pass. He has no right to say "I reserve" and then to have the privilege of bidding if the other three players pass. There is no such thing in the game of Auction Bridge as a "reserved" or a "compulsory" bid; there never has been any such thing either in Auction Bridge or in any game of the Whist family. Every player, when his turn comes, may bid or pass; after three passes there can be no more bidding.

SUBSEQUENT BIDDING.

A player on the first round has the right to bid or pass; but if he pass, that does not affect his right to bid subsequently if the auction be still open when his next turn arrives. Any bid or double opens the auction for the other three players and each one, in his turn, has the right to make a higher bid, to double an adverse bid, or to redouble if a bid by his side has been doubled. The fact that he has passed on the first round, has nothing to do with the case.

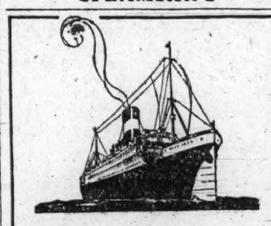

CONTRACT BRIDGE.

Contract is a variation of Auction Bridge, which was first introduced in this country over fifteen years ago but which gained no foothold or following until about a year ago. The main difference between Contract and Auction is that in Contract only the amount of the bid can be scored below the line. If a player bid two Spades and make four, he scores in Contract only the value of two towards his game; whereas in Bridge he would go game. There are many other important differences but that is the basic one. In Contract all values, penalties and bonuses are larger than in Auction Bridge, and the game as a whole creates much larger figures for its participants. The stake player who wishes to play Contract as the same size game to which he has been accustomed in Bridge, should at least cut his stake in half; some figure the percentage to be as five is to two.

As space does not permit the giving today of answers to all of the questions most frequently asked, a number of the other answers will be given in next Sunday's article.

LORIENT, BRITTANY PORT, FRANCE'S FISH CAPITAL

Improvements Wrest Title From Morbihan; Fast Handling Provided.

OLD SAILBOATS DOOMED

Paris, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Fish will have to push up their birth rate if they are to hold their own off the coast of Brittany.

Lorient, on the south coast of Morbihan, has won the title of "Fish Capital of France" and lays claim to being the biggest fishing port in the world because of new and modern equipment. It's only a matter of minutes for the fish to go from sea to pan, when things are working right.

A whole new port with docks, sheds, conveyors, cranes, ice plants, coal chutes and trains all ready to go, await the 20,000 fisherfolk who sail into port, tide or no tide, to unload their catches.

The government started spending 200,000,000 francs some years ago on French ports to promote the fishing industry. Most of this was spent on Lorient because conditions were right on land and the fish had chosen to establish headquarters off there.

The boats sail up to the docks now, unload their catch, move along to where an overhead chute drops cracked ice into the fish bins in the hold, go a little farther to take on coal or fuel oil in the same way and in an hour or two a fishing smack can go back for another catch. In the old days boats had to wait on tides, wasted much time in loading and unloading and had greater expense for labor ashore.

The colorful blue and orange sails of the small boats still are plentiful, but steam and the oil or gasoline engine are increasing rapidly. The sailboat seems about to vanish.

NOISY INSECTS HEAR, SAYS BERLIN SAVANT

Piping and Chirping Meant for Others of Their Kind, He Declares.

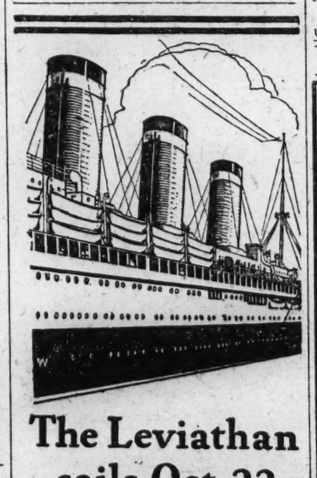

Berlin, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Insects that chirp, pipe, sing or hum must be gifted with a sense of hearing, concludes Professor Norbert in an article in the Volks-Zeitung. He argues that such noises voluntarily produced can only be intended for insects of the same species and not for other living beings.

Professor Norbert thinks a certain organ that has been located on the legs of crickets and on the stomach of locusts may very well serve the same purpose as the ear in the human being. This organ consists of a concavity over which a membrane is tautly stretched, which is caused to vibrate by any distinct tone and thereby stimulates the underlying nerve.

The writer describes the experiment of playing a high tone as closely as possible to such an insect. Crickets, he says, will be seen instantly to stretch out their feelers in the direction of the tone, while locusts will manifest by similar signs that they hear the tone. Butterflies and dragonflies, on the other hand, can never be induced to respond in the least to any kind of tone, not even to a bugle blown with full lung power in the closest proximity.

COMMUNITY CENTERS

Under congressional appropriation, public funds cover janitor service and provide for supervisors of the Community Center buildings, but in all of the centers study groups and social activities are promoted by the community secretaries to meet the needs of the neighborhood through volunteer workers or instructors paid by the club members. Small club dues are usually charged to cover leadership and minor expenses. Under this arrangement dramatic clubs have been formed in most of the centers, a china painting club in the Lovejoy Center, gymnasium classes and bridge instruction classes in Columbia Heights, Thomson and Park View centers, a debating club at the Columbia Heights Center, and a voice culture or public speaking group at the Southeast Center.

The Petworth Community Center advisory committee has advised the transfer of the activities of that center to the Macfarland Junior High School Building.

On Friday a community center will be opened in the Macfarland Building. It is not yet determined what name will be given to this center. H. P. Safford, principal of Macfarland Junior High School, and Mrs. E. C. Magdeburger, president of the Parent-Teacher Association, have promised their cooperation. Many of the groups that have been using the Petworth building have requested a transfer to the Macfarland, a building larger and more suitable to their needs.

The advisory committee of the Southeast Community Center met at the call of the community secretary, Mrs. M W. Davis, at her residence 900 Eleventh street southeast, Tuesday for an election of the officers of the advisory body and for a social evening.

Mrs. Howard E. Wilson was elected chairman, B. F. Campbell, vice chairman, and Mrs. M. J. Moran, secretary. The question of the annual Southeast carnival was discussed and a resolution favorable to the carnival was passed. The carnival will not only be the annual civic event of southeast, but will celebrate the tenth anniversary of a Southeast Community Center and the fact that the Hine Junior High School Building has an addition that will enlarge the facilities for the center.

OLD GEORGETOWN U. HEROES OF GRIDIRON TO ATTEND SMOKER

Home-Coming Party Is to Be Given on Friday by Alumni Club.

WEST VIRGINIA TO PLAY UNIVERSITY NEXT DAY

Bands From Both Schools Are to Play at Ball Park Game.

Many former football heroes of Georgetown University will be among the guests at the annual homecoming smoker to be held Friday evening at the Willard Hotel under the auspices of the District of Columbia Alumni Club. The celebartion will culminate at the American League Park the following day when Georgetown meets the West Virginia team in one of its hardest contests of the year.

From the replies that continue to come in to the committee, it is probable that more out-of-town alumni will visit here on this occasion than in any previous year. Lou Little, director of athletics at the university, and Joseph Canfield have lined up a galaxy of former gridiron stars who have promised to attend. Among these are Dan O'Connor, of Boston, captain of 1916 team, which that year defeated Dartmouth; "Skip" Wymard, John McQuade, Jack Haggerty, Jack Breslin and Dr. A. A. Nork, one of Georgetown's greatest kickers.

In addition to speeches from these veterans of the football field, there will be talks by President Charles W. Lyons, S. J., who has done much during his administration to push athletics; the Rev. Vincent A. McDonough, S. J., faculty advisor of athletics; Coach Little and officers of the athletic association. The smoker will begin at 8 o'clock in the evening.

West Virginia is sending a large delegation, including a band, for the game the following afternoon. Georgetown's own R. O. T. C. band will be out, probably in new uniforms, which are expected to be ready this week. During the evening a number of theater parties will be given under the direction of the committee.

Committee on Arrangements.

The following comprise the local alumni committee on arrangements: John J. Carmody, chairman; Joseph V. Connolly, John W. Fiehelly, Emmett Sheehan, John Orlewski, Walter J. Casey, Carroll, McGuire, John W. White, J. C. Patterson, Stanley DeNeale, John T. Calnan, Dr. Martin Stohlman, Dr John Brazinsky, Dr. R. J. McNulty, Thomas J. Hurney, Austin F. Canfield and Eugene Gallery.

In keeping with the usual custom at Georgetown, the religious opening of the 1927-28 academic year was solemnized by the mass of the Holy Ghost at Trinity Church. All the Catholic students at the college and many from the professional schools attended.

The Rev. Charles W. Lyons, S. J., president of the university, was celebrant at the mass and also briefly addressed the student body. Other officers of the mass were the Rev. Joseph S. Dinneed, S. J., and the Revj Joseph O'Brien, S. J., members of the faculty, who were, respectively, deacon and subdeacon.

As Columbus Day, generally observed here, fell on the same day, the students were given a holiday after the mass, which was held at 8 o'clock in the morning. This gave the R. O. T. C. Cadet Band an opportunity to participate in the ceremonies conducted that morning in front of the Columbus Monument on the Union Station Plaza, under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus. The band made a good appearance in uniforms of trousers, blue jerseys and white caps. That night President Lyons was one of the speakers at the Knights of Columbus banquet at the Mayflower Hotel.

Navy Speaker Urged.

President Lyons has received a communication from Walter Bruce Howe, national chairman in charge of arrangements for the observance of Navy Day on October 27, asking that a speaker from the Navy Department be permitted to address the students on that occasion. Since Georgetown always has participated in previous observances, it is likely the university will make the necessary arrangements.

Breaking all its former records, the R. O. T. C. units at the college and the medical school have enrolled a total of 592 students to date, with prospects topping the 600 mark before long. This is an unusual indication of the interest students are paying to this form of military training, as enlistment in the R. O. T. C. is voluntary.

But for the restrictions placed by the War Department, due to lack of sufficient appropriations, the number at the college would greatly exceed the authorized strength. As it is now, 285 students are enrolled in the basic infantry course, exceeding the authorized enrollment by 41, and 50 are enrolled in the advanced course. At the medical school the enrollments are 217 in the basic course and 40 in the advanced course. In view of the comparatively small number of medical students, their interest in the R. O. T. C. course is significant.

Service School Represented.

The staff of the Foreign Service School was well represented at the sessions of the Pan-American Commission on Simplification and Standardization of Consular Procedure which recessed Thursday until October 24. One of the representatives of Costa Rica is Guillermo E. Gonzales, secretary of the legation and now a graduate student at Georgetown. Argentina is represented by Consul Manuel G. Durand, formerly a student at the school.

Three members of the Georgetown faculty also are assisting in the organization work of the conference. These are Dr. L. S. Rowe, Director General of the Pan-American Union, who is professor of the Latin-American Seminar; William A. Reid, foreign trade expert of the union and professor in the course on Latin America as an export field, and William Manger, head of the finance division of the union, who is a member of the faculty in the Latin-American department of the school.

The Georgetown Glee Club is expected to start its rehearsals this week, but it will be necessary for the club to fill ten vacancies caused by graduations last June. Its annual Mi-Careme concert will not be held until the middle of Lent. The club is awating the action of the faculty on the appointment of its new moderator.

Class Officers Elected.

Dr. Sterling V. Mead's new book, "Diseases of the Mouth," will be the official textbook for the junior and senior dental classes and the senior medical classes, it was announced last week. For a number of years Dr. Mead has been a member of the dental school faculty and is considered an outstanding authority on this subject.

The senior class at the dental school has announced the election of the following class officers: Joseph B. Lutz, president; James J. Rogan, vice president; Joseph Kelly, secretary; John J. Fasanello, treasurer, and Joseph Murphy, historian.

The November issue of the College Journal, dited this year by James Kerby Neill, '28, will soon be ready for distribution. Paul Berno, '28, business manager, is planning a circulation drive. Authorities at the Hilltop have decided to put all tennis courts in excellent condition, so announcement was made that the annual fall tennis tournament would not be held until spring. All six courts will be renovated and the back stop improved. Robert Christie, manager, is making plans for the tournament and has urged all students to keep off the courts so the work can be completed as soon as possible.

Club organizations which have their first meetings include the Freshman Boys' Club, A. F. Nixon, sponsor; Dunbar Orchestra, Henry Lee Grant; Latin Club, Dr. Anna J. Cooper; French Club, Mrs. Mary Gibson Brewer; Know Washington Historically, Mrs. F. A. Fairley; Debating Club, E. F. Hill.

Fire prevention week was observed at Dunbar. Brief talks were given by section presidents. Safety first rules were read at the various noon assemblies.

Several Dunbar graduates have achieved recent distinction. Two have won $400 scholarships, Dorothy Davis at Wellesley College, and Howard Fitzhugh at Harvard College. Those who have passed college extrance examinations include Grace Ridgeley, for admission to Smith College, and Enid Cook, for admission to Bryn Mawr College.

LOUIS SINGER HEADS JEFFERSON COUNCIL

Staff of the School Paper Is Announced; New Pupils Are Welcomed.

Louis Singer was elected president of the student council of Jefferson unior High School Monday. Eva Brown was chosen vice president and Lily Werber secretary.

The staff of the school paper this session will be Dorothy Buppert, editor; Winifred Reeves, assistant editor, and Rose Babinsky and William Paul, business managers. The school library has been enriched by the addition of books worth $250, $200 of which were given by the Parent-Teachers Association.

At the weekly assembly Mr. Strawbridge welcomed the new pupils and school activities were explained to them by student representatives from the upper grades. Louis Singer, president of the student council, discussed this activity; Sam Leishear told about the school orchestra, Winifred Reeves, assistant editor of the Jefferson Journal, spoke on the school paper, and Eugene Castle described the advantages of the school bank.

PROFESSORS TO HELP TRUSTEES TO DECIDE AMERICAN U. PLANS

First Meeting Under the New Arrangement Is Scheduled for November 7.

PROGRAM TO BE USED AS BASIS FOR BUDGET

Officers Are Elected for Year by Three Lower Classes in Institution.

A new policy will be inaugurated at American University next month when the board of trustees will meet for the first time with professors in formal session to develop a program for the institution.

Plans for the meeting were laid last week at a luncheon meeting of the executive committee of the board of trustees at the college dining room, presided over by John C. Letts, president of the board. It was decided to hold the first trustee-professor session November 7. The schools of the university will be represented by their deans: Dr. Edward T. Devine, dean of the graduate school; Dr. Albert H. Putney, director of the school of political sciences, and Dr. George B. Woods, dean of the college of liberal arts. All professors of the institution will be in attendance, but this will not include assistant professors and instructors.

Program to Govern Budget.

The program to be developed November 7 will serve as a basis for consideration of the next year's budget for the institution which will come up at the annual meeting of the board of trustees in December. Much benefit is expected to be derived from this new departure in the administration of the university, according to Dr. Lucius C. Clark, chancellor.

Attending the session of the executive committee last Tuesday were Mr Letts, Charles J. Bell, William Knowles Cooper, J. Phelps Hand, Dr. A. C. Christie, W. S. Corby, M. E. Church, W. T. Galliher, Dr W. R. Wedderspoon, of Miami, Fla.; Chancellor Clark, H. E. Walter, business manager of the university, and Miss Sara H. Dow, secretary to the chancellor and bursar of the university.

Dr. Clark has been invited to attend the inauguration October 20 of Dr. William Mather Lewis, former president of George Washington University, into his new post as president of Lafayette College, Easton, Pa.

Following the seniors, who recently elected officers, the other three classes have named officers for the y . The Juniors elected: Presi n , Donald Bitting vice president, I uise Turbett; secretary, Helen R r; treasurer, Marion Cross.

The freshmen elected: Presiden Edwin A. ("Texas") Brooks; vice sider , Norman Cramer; secretary; Frances Young; treasurer, Margeret Thornton.

Dr. John E. Bentley pr fessor of religious education, has received an invitat to return next summer for a series of lectures at the University of Colorado, at Boulder, Colo. He was on the summer school faculty during the last season.

Dean Completes Pamphlet.

Dr. Woods, dean of the college, has completed and sent to his publishers, Doubleday Doran & Co., the manuscript for the third and last pamphlet of a series entitled, "Problems in English," to supplement his text book, "Manual of English." Dr. Woods is the author of several texts for both high schools and colleges.

The new members of the faculty entertained at dinner last night for the other members of the faculty at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Neprud, Chevy Chase Md.

Students and faculty of the college were guests Friday night of the young people's department and official board of Foundry M. E. Church, at the church.

The Women's Guild of the university will hold the first meeting of the fall Tuesday in the parlors of the Women's Residence Hall, with Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker, presiding.

Mrs. Lucius C. Clark entertained the girls of the dormitory at tea on Thursday and Friday, half the group attending each afternoon. She was assisted by Miss Mary M. Galt and Miss M. Pearl Cline.

RANDALL HIKING CLUB VISITS AT NAVY YARD

Parent-Teachers Hear That Library Extension Plan Will Include School.

The hiking club of the Randall Junior High School visited the Navy Yard last week, observing work done in machine shops and on vessels in dock. As an introduction to studies in agricultural industries, section 8-B visited the Agricultural Department Building last Monday. At the Bureau of Publications each pupil was presented with a copy of a summary of American agriculture. The class was accompanied by Miss S R. Quander.

At a meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association Tuesday a report on a library extension project was made by Miss Quander to the effect that the librarian of the Public Library had included in his report for library extension a request for the opening of a branch library at Randall Junior High School.

A letter from officials of Howard University expressing appreciation for a donation of $25 by teachers of the Randall Building toward the university endowment was read. The annual election of officers resulted in Miss Robinson's reelection. Mrs. Minnie King was named vice president and elected president of the Mothers Club. Fred Smith was named secretary and Miss Lucille Denny treasurer.

Third of School's Staff From Business High

A check on the secretarial and clerical staff of the Franklin Administration Building has developed that one-third of the force are graduates of Business High School, according to Miss Ethel Ginberg, secretary to Stephen E. Kramer, assistant superintendent of schools.

Alumnae of Business stationed at the school include Miss M. Alvina Carroll, secretary to Superintendent Frank W. Ballou; Miss Elise Zuberano, secretary to Harry O. Hine; Miss Ginberg, Mrs. Esther Towers, Miss Helen Boyd, Mrs. Rachel F. Kennedy, Miss Eva Singman, Miss Lorraine Wolfman, Miss Gladys Evans, Miss Teresa O'Beirne, Miss Dorothy Albaugh, Miss Marie Hellwig, Miss Margaret Elkins, Miss Dorothy Meade, Miss Catherine Crawley, Miss Rebecca Kranman, Miss Jessie Montgomery and Miss Catherine Chamberlain.

REGISTRATION GAINS IN ECONOMIC COURSE AT NATIONAL SCHOOL

BANKING AND FINANCE EXPANSION IS NOTED

Registration in the school of economics and government of National University has increased by more than 50 per cent above the number of students of last year, and an active interest in all departments of study is being displayed, according to school authorities yesterday.

The new courses which have been established and now are being taught for the first time have heavy enrollments, and this policy of expansion of the curriculum, it is announced, will be continued. The majority of the students are taking full-time work leading to the A. B. and B. S. degrees. An increase in the number of students enrolled in the graduate department of the school of economics and government also has been noted. Courses in this department lead to the M. A. degree.

The expansion policy which was adopted last spring brought about the inclusion of additional courses in banking, finance and business organization in the curriculum of the school, as well as the establishment of a language department teaching Latin and French. Other courses added include several in the history department, economic geography and a course in commercial art. This latter course has the advantage of permitting students to enroll at any time during the early part of the term without having too much back work to make up. This is because much of the work is by individual effort with criticisms by the instructor, H. F. Campbell, a former student of the Corcoran Art School.

Plan Club Dinner.

Plans for a dinner are being made by the Masonic Club. The club is composed of students and former students of National University affiliated with Masonry, and during the past summer the club's membership was increased by more than 50 members, all of whom formerly were students of National University.

The Masonic Club of National University offers a number of prizes and scholarships to students of the institution during the year and various oratorical contests and debates are held under its auspices.

Announcement has been made that Beta Chapter of Phi Beta Gamma, national legal fraternity, held its first meeting of the year Thursday night, at which time plans for the first annual smoker were discussed. This is to be held the latter part of the month at the home of K. M. Uglow, head of the local chapter.

On October 29 a Halloween party will be held at the fraternity house. This affair will be the first social event of its kind for the year.

Freshmen Being Organized.

Organization of the freshmen was begun Thursday night, when the first meeting of the class was held. Organization is expected to be completed during the next week, at which time officers will be elected and the question of class dues will be decided upon.

Word has been received at National University that three former students of the institution recently took the bar examinations in Iowa, all of them passing. Among the three was one woman, Estella O'Rourke, who, by passing the examinations, thereby upheld the record of the school that all women who have taken bar examinations have passed them successfully. The two men who took the examinations were Leo J. Kriz and John A. Kennedy. All three of the students were in attendance at National University last year. Kennedy is a former student of Coe College, Iowa.

Election of officers of the Cy Pres Club, women's organization, will take place during the coming week, according to Mrs. Ann Webster, president of the club.

The junior class also will complete its organization during the coming week with the election of officers. A meeting of the class was held Tuesday evening, when plans for the current year were discussed.

5 STUDENTS AWARDED PACE SCHOLARSHIPS

Winners Attending Freshmen Class of Benjamin Franklin University.

Five scholarship students are found in the various day and evening sections of the fall freshman class at Benjamin Franklin University. Alvin G. Wassman was awarded the scholarship from McKinley Manual Training High School; Ethel Yassell, from Central; Virginia M. Kettley, from Business; Elizabeth S. Osgood, from Western, and Joseph Leo Tutwiler, from St. John's College.

The selections were made by Frank . Daniel, Alvin W. Miller, Allan Davis, Elmer S. Newton and Brother Alfred, principals of the respective high schools.

The awards were made in accordance with the provisions of the Pace scholarship, the purpose of which is to encourage sound academic and technical preparation for the practice of accountancy and for executive positions in private business organizations. In making the selections, character, scholarship and aptitude were the factors considered.

That the purposes for which the foundation was established are being accomplished is shown by the places being attained by these scholarship selections. Joseph G. Motyka, a scholarship student from Eastern High School, who was a member of the 1927 class, has just passed the District of Columbia examination for certified public accountant.

The last fall section of the freshman class in the Pace course will be opened tomorrow night at 7:30. The opening class session will be conducted by Edwin C. Bosworth, dean of the university.

Guild Plans Dance to Aid Debt Fund.

In an effort to clear off indebtedness on their building at 1727 Thirteenth street northwest, the Holy Name Guild will celebrate their eleventh anniversary with a dance and reception at the Lincoln Colonnade tomorrow night. The drive for funds is being directed by William J. Smith, B. F. Butler, Charles A. Butler, H. M. Smith and James M. Brown.

Big value at little expense is reflected in the result-power of Post Classified Ads. Phone yours today to Main 4205.

Shaw High Students Stage "Trial of Fire"

"The Trial of Fire," a one-act drama, was the feature of the fire-prevention week observance at Shaw Junior High School. The play was presented at the Wednesday assembly. Eleven of the major causes of fire were arraigned and pleaded not guilty. Carelessness was eventually located and proclaimed the arch criminal and sentenced to banishment from America. The leading roles were carried by pupils of Section 7A-3.

Benefit Dance Plans Adopted by Alumnae

Plans for a benefit dance November 12 at the school were adopted by the Holy Trinity Alumnae of the classes 1925, 1926 and 1927, at their full meeting last week at the Holy Trinity Convent. Several card parties were scheduled for later in the year.

BUSINESS HIGH PLANS TO STAGE 'JUNIOR SHOW'

Third-Year Students to Present Two One-Act Plays on November 3.

GLEE CLUB IS ORGANIZED

Third-year students of Business High School will stage a "Junior Show" at the school November 3, featuring two one-act plays, it was decided at a joint meeting of fifth and sixth semester sections last week.

An executive committee of seven students was named to draft plans for the performance. They are John Ash, Ruth Brown, Henry Goldstein, Anna Grant, Nellie Orton, Wilhelmina Pfluger and Stanley Segal.

The Boys' Glee Club was organized Wednesday under the direction of Miss Emma Louise Thompson, faculty adviser. Frank Davis was named president; Charles May, vice president; Bernard Jones, secretary; Richard Keefer, librarian, and Nathan Cohen, Balance Sheet representative.

Miss Elizabeth Mensh was elected president of the Girls' Auxiliary at a meeting called by Miss Laura Reeves, faculty adviser. Miss Anna Owens was named vice president; Miss Ida Bush, secretary, and Miss Helen Doran, treasurer.

Three of the international oratorical representatives, James Keith Watson, England; Frederick Hotson, Canada, and Dorothy Carlson, United States, were guests of the school Wednesday. They were introduced at a student chapel by Frederick Moore, of the Constitution Club, and told of experiences on their European trip.

Y.W.C.A. PLANS $60,000 OPERATING FUND DRIVE

A campaign for $60,000 to finance operations of the Young Women's Christian Association in the District for another year will be opened by the association November 1, it was announced yesterday by the board of directors.

Responsibility for collection of the funds has been placed in the hands of four Washington women, Mrs. Edwin B. Parker, Mrs. Luke I. Wilson, Mrs. Fred E. Wright and Mrs. Wilson Compton. All are members of the board.

It was announced that ten teams of twenty women each, and six additional teams of business and professional women of twenty each, will canvas the city for subscriptions beginning November 1. Reports will be made daily to the committee until the campaign closes November 9. The association now maintains six centers in Washington, including the new Activities and Administration Building at Seventeenth and K streets northwest.

Petworth Community Center Is Shifted

Activities of the Petworth Community Center will be transfered to the Macfarland Junior High School, it was decided at a meeting of the community center department last week. The new center of neighborhood interests will be formally opened Friday evening.

Mrs. Edith H. Hunter, assisted by Mrs. Adelaide Irving, will be in charge of community activities at the Macfarland. Announcement was made also of the opening Wednesday of the activities at Central Community Center. A new class will be conducted at Central in the study of the construction and operation of automobile engines. Edward Cornell will be instructor.

ARTIST IS STUDENT IN CITIZENSHIP CLASS

Delgardo Rodas, a portrait painter of Uruguay, who has studied in Rome and has received medals for his work, is registered in the beginners' day class of the Americanization School here.

Mr. Rodas studied in Rome for seven years. In September he held an exhibition in Detroit and sold a number of pictures. He is now working on an order for a Washingtonian.

The Americanization School motion picture lessons for foreign-born adults are being held in the projection room of the Metropolitan Theater every Wednesday at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and 8 o'clock in the evening. Since the opening of school September 19, 156 petitioners for naturalization have enrolled in the day and night classes to study principles of American Government and related subjects in preparation for citizenship.

FRESHMEN OF G.W.U. WILL ACT AS HOSTS TO HIGH STUDENTS

GRID BATTLE EXPECTED TO DRAW GREAT CROWD

Will Be the First Clash in Years With the New York Players.

George Washington University Freshmen will act as hosts on Saturday to the seniors of the Washington High Schools in the Wilson Memorial Stadium when the Colonials face Fordham University football players. High school seniors are invited to see the contest.

The visit of Fordham will be the first in many years. Headed by Maj. Frank Cavanaugh, an outstanding figure in intercollegiate football, a war hero and rated as one of the greatest of modern grid heroes, the Fordham team is an attraction that is expected to draw an unusually large gathering Saturday.

The Colonials play few games at home this season.

The board of trustees of the university announced on Thursday the separation of the various colleges of the Department of Arts and Sciences into academic units. The step is the first of several of the plans of Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, the new president. Eight units now provide work of the lower and higher class—that is, undergraduate and postgraduate work or that in the service schools.

Heads of Schools Announced.

Columbian College will remain the cultural college, with Dean William A. Wilbur as its head. Dean George N. Henning will head the Graduate School. The School of Education will be headed by Dean William C. Ruediger. The School of Engineering will be headed by Dean John R. Lapham. The Law School will be headed by Dean William C. Van Vleck and the School of Medicine by Dean William Cline Borden. Dean Lewis T. Bradley will head the School of Pharmacy. Prof. Elmer Louis Kayser will be director of the summer sessions, and Prof. Alfred F. W. Schmidt will be director of the Division of Library Science.

"The organization now effective, with acting chairmen appointed in the various schools, creates Columbian College as the cultural college and the service college, for the technical schools are Law and Medicine," says Dr. Marvin. "The plan as outlined standardizes the terminology. The approach to our problem will be the differentiation between the lower division and the upper division of the college work. With that differentiation the schools that require three years' academic work will use Columbian College as that basis.

"We will be able to certify to the technical schools on a basis of lower division work."

There will be no change in the office of dean of the university now being held by Dr. Howard Lincoln Hodgkins. Dean Henry Grattan Doyle is the new dean of men and Dean Anna L. Rose is dean of women.

Alumni to Raise $10,000.

The alumni have pledged themselves to raise $10,000 toward the third unit of the university. This money is to be available for a study room for men. This announcement was recently made by Dr. Frank A. Hornaday, newly elected president of the association.

President and Mrs. Marvin will be the guests of honor at the Mayflower on the evening of October 29 at a joint reception to be given by the Columbian Women and the General Aumni Association. In the receiving line will be Dr. and Mrs. John B. Larner, Dr. and Mrs. Frank A. Hornaday, Dr. and Mrs Harvey W. Wiley, and Dean of the University and Mrs. Howard Lincoln Hodgkins.

Royalston Lyon has been named business manager of the University Hatchet, the weekly student publication. Margaret Maize has been appointed chairman of the board of editors of the Cherry Tree, the university annual. Frank Kreglow was appointed business manager and all other officers selected for the year.

Virtually all student activities are well under way. The rifle teams are beginning work on the range. The men's glee club recently met with 60 candidates and the various athletic teams are functioning at top speed. While the football squad has been unpromisingly small, it has won its last two starts, defeating City College, of New York, and American University.

Plans are under way for the various dramatic activities of the university.

Eastern High Names Rifle Team Captains

Frank Rodgers has been elected president of the boys' rifle team at Eastern High School and Helen Terrell captain of the girls' team. Other officers of the boys' team will be James S. Dietz, assistant captain, and Henry Mauer, secretary, while Dorothy Thume will be manager of the girls' team and Marie Angelico, secretary.

Eastern High School has recruited five cadet companies this year, thus composing a regiment, which will be the Third Regiment in the Cadet Corps. Officers say the prospects are good for a sixth company in February.

The Science Club met Tuesday with Charles Critchfield and Robert Shosteck as speakers. Dr. Karl Hensold, of Augsburg, Bavaria, visited the school Monday.

Stage Presentations of Interest

Footlights and Shadows

By JOHN J. DALY

MELODRAMA is having its day in the theater. There is rejoicing among oldtimers. Forsooth, there was never anything quite so thrilling as good, old-fashioned, dyed-in-the-wool melodrama—of the earlier school.

Down at Ninth and D streets, where the Strand Theater now houses Mutual Burlesk—spelled just that way—was once the Temple of Melodrama. There gallery gods gathered. They saw such stupendous sensations as "Caught in Mid-Ocean," a drama built upon the framework of the celebrated Dr. Crippen murder case. They witnessed the frothing and foaming at the mouth of Thomas E. Shea in "The Bells," or in his spectacular version of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." They saw—oh, a number of things; but, best of all, they witnessed the nightly parade of actors and actresses before the dropped curtain, after the acts.

It was the fashion in those days to take curtain bows "in one," as they might say in vaudeville. That is, before a drop curtain that did not completely cover the full stage—an arrangement whereby the thespians could walk just in front of the footlights and get their just deserts—applause or hisses.

* * * *

THE parade was led by the heroine—that little girl who had been chased all up and down the valley, or in the mountains, or over the roof tops by the villain. An ovation awaited her immediately she stepped beyond the "tormentor." Wowie! The gallery gods let loose. It was like the cheering of a successful presidential candidate on his way from the Capitol to the White House, after he had taken the oath of office. The boys in the roost stood up and gave vent to their feelings. As Texas Guinan would put it, they gave the little girl a big hand.

Then came the heroine's father. Another ovation, for the old man had usually been through the mill, as the saying goes. He had, undoubtedly, put up a game struggle against adversity, trying his goldarndest to cut down the monthly payments on the mortgage, only to be frustrated at every turn by the village banker—that eagle-eyed old bird who always managed to find some sort of legal obstacles to throw in the path of his customers; eventually to take over the farm and all its earthly possessions. The old man probably didn't have much worldly wealth, but he had a host of admirers in the gallery—and so he came in for the second demonstration of the evening.

Next in turn came the girl's mother—poor, old soul. Astute managers of another day trotted out the favorites first, in the Big Parade of Melodrama. The poor old lady was always about done for; suffering from some dreadful malady, usually just out of a sick bed. She was, in the accepted sense, on her last legs; but she always managed to make that pilgrimage before the footlights. What a hand she got!

THE heroine's little brother came next—or perhaps a sister. It didn't make much difference, just so members of the family got a chance to show off. They were all good for a hand, even the worthless uncle who merely sat by the fire and smoked plug-cut; or chewed. He was, at heart, virtuous. He hadn't broken any maiden's heart, or robbed a bank. So he, too, stood for all that was good, beautiful, and true. This, since that was the day of good and not evil in the American theater, was first-rate qualification for his appearance before the footlights in the nightly course of events.

There had to be an end of virtue somewhere, so near-villains got a chance to run the gantlet. It amounted almost to that. There was usually a lady of sinister motives in the play, and they displayed her after sure-fire applause getters had done their turn. Out of respect for sex, the gentler sex then being in better standing with the world at large, there was the mere suggestion of a hiss—a soft, sotto voce, murmur that was later to swell into an augmented orchestration when the villain himself appeared. The boys in the gallery were masters at the art of suppression, restraint, and abandon. They saved themselves for the big moment.

Came then the villain. Immediately, pandemonium broke loose. All the vent-up, pent-up vengeance of life-times shattered the air, heaped and leaped at the villain. What a brave man. At any moment, in the heat of excitement, some fanatic might have fired a gun. Indeed, the villain took his life in his hands when he started that perilous journey across stage. He might have had things his own way in the play proper, but now it became the audiences' turn. Up, boys, and at him, was the slogan. When the villain got through pacing off the 40 or 50 feet that stretched under the proscenium arch from one side of the stage to the other he had done his best day's, or night's, work.

FORTUNATELY, no one ever did violence to the villain; and some of the best "heavies" in all creation are now living in Flatbush and Long Island resorts within the shadow of Broadway, thinking back upon those times that are often referred to as the good old days. Some of the old-timers, too, are still at work on the boards, playing amiable old gentleman in comedies concocted for the moment.

However, there is coming a turn in the tide. Melodrama is back—in all its glory. There was, last week, on the stage of the National Theater, a melodrama of the old school dressed in the habiliments of modern theater. It went over so big that the gallery broke loose—something that has not happened in Washington since the days of the Academy of Music.

Naturally, the new melodrama will out-mellow the old-fashioned, once it gets going. There will be no hair-breadth escapes, such as little Nell clutched from the path of an on-rushing engine; for this sort of thing is passe. Nor will there be that celebrated bridge of life, wherein three stalwart acrobats climbed, the one on the other's shoulders, three high, stood erect, and then let fall across the chasm, the top man clutching the sides of the mountain and letting the mother, carrying a babe in her arms, walk across on their backs. That, sir, was melodrama.

HAIR-BREADTH escapes have been improved upon—and in every day life there are things of more astonishment, to mention only the narrow margins by which pedestrians get away from onrushing automobiles. So that melodrama, in the future, must deal with more active agents than firemen rushing ladders up to the third floor of burning buildings and letting down occupants—usually women.

Gun play, out of the old school, still holds its lure—and, since the invention of the Maxim silencer, brings a deadlier and stealthier note into the drama. The play that got over to such a successful start at the National pitted two contrasting elements against each other—law and disorder—the police and the underworld—and furnished high excitement from the start of the opening act to the closing of the last.

* * * *

TALK about action, "One of the Finest" was action from the very beginning to the end. That, after all, is what drama means—action—and without it a play becomes just so much conversation, to be classed as high-brow and therefore not fit for mob consumption. In this respect, the whole trend of the American theater is toward reportorial drama, as proved by such plays as "Broadway," "Chicago," "Burlesque" and others of that ilk. "One of the Finest" might have been taken bodily from any newspaper story having to do with the hunt of human beings by ever vigilant police.

There are, so old-time newspaper men state authoritatively, a novel, a short story and a play on the front page of every morning paper. That is about right. Since the newspaper deals primarily with actions and reactions of human beings there is bound to be drama wrapped up in its vitals. Look for it, and you find the great elements that make for emotion; the stuff that makes the heart pulsate. In cold type it is, perhaps, not so much; but taken out, revamped and rewritten, clothed with the characters in a play, and voiced by human tongues, there is pulsating life in it all—from the divorce court to the death house. And there is, too, if only occasionally, melodrama in the day's news. Eventually, of course, it will seep into the theater, where it belongs.

WASHINGTON NOT ON MAP DURING VISIT

Washington will have its first glimpse of "The Beggar's Opera," which by reason of its age and popularity may justly claim to be a British institution, on Friday afternoon, at Poli's, under the local management of Mrs. Wilson-Greene. This famous old opera, now visiting America on its 200th anniversary, was presented in this country on numerous occasions in colonial days, but Washington unfortunately did not share in the presentations for the excellent reason that there was no Washington then. However, it has been asserted on apparently good authority that George Washington himself applauded it vigorously when he witnessed it in Philadelphia.

It is rather generally known that the opera is really the first of musical comedies, and that its story is a satire on courts and the administration of justice in the author's day. The details of the plot, however, are less familiar. The Beggar, in a prologue, introduces the play.

In the first act, Peachum, fence and informer, discovers that his daughter is married to Capt. Macheath, and tries to induce her to sell her husband to the authorities and share in the reward. She refuses, but discovering that they intend to betray Macheath anyhow, she warns him to flee.

Macheath is somewhat disturbed in the next act, the scene of which is an inn, but sends for some ladies of the town, with whom he is a great favorite One of them, Jenny Diver, betrays him to Peachum, and the doughty captain is carried off to Newgate prison. There Lockit, the jailer, suitably approached, fits the captain with "an easy set" of irons. Promptly thereafter Lockit's daughter, having heard rumors of Polly, demands that the captain marry her. That becomes impossible when Polly also appears, and both girls are removed from the captain's presence by their unsympathetic parents.

However, Lucy eventually enables Macheath to escape; and, recognized in a gambling house, he is promptly betrayed and imprisoned again. Lucy tries to poison Polly, but this plan fails, and appeals by both girls to their fathers in Macheath's behalf end in the captain being led away to his cell to await execution.

Just as the dread event is to take place Macheath is informed that his four wives await him. He suggests that the execution take place at once. Indignant demands of a player in the prologue that the opera be given a happy ending are acceded to by the Beggar, who allows the hero to be reprieved.

The principal singers of the company are all members of the British National Opera, and a coast-to-coast tour is under way.

OLD JIGGS AT GAYETY

This week's attraction at the Gayety Theater is "Jiggs, Maggie and Dinty." Twenty-four girls who can sing and dance make the seventeen musical numbers a rapturous, tuneful and frothy repast.

Beatrice Harlowe, than whom no more gifted character woman (and especially as "Maggie of the Rolling Pin") is seen in the part of the militant nemesis of Jiggs, on whom fortune smiles and frowns.

Pete Curley is cast for the Jiggs character, and as a politician on and off the job, he is a scream from start to finish. Jimmy Connors plays the role of Jiggs' pal, Dinty Moore.

Juliette Belmont, a vivacious prima donna and violin virtuoso; Rush and Butler, from Keith vaudeville; Steve Paul and Steve McKenna, favorites in Broadway musical shows; Nellie Moore and Fanny O'Neil have been chosen for the other principal roles.

A long and interesting olio of vaudeville acts and specialties are contributed by the principals. Sixteen scenes and fourteen changes of costume give an idea of the elaborateness of the production of "Jiggs, Maggie and Dinty."

To Attend Opera.

Deems Taylor, editor of Musical America and composer of the opera, "The King's Henchman," which created a sensation when it was given its premier last season by the Metropolitan Opera Company in New York, will, it is announced, come to Washington for the local presentation of the opera, at Poli's, Friday, November 4, under the local management of Mrs. Wilson-Greene. Washington is the first city visited on the tour this season.

FALL SEASON UNDER WAY AT KEITH'S

Continuing the boom in big bills for the opening of the fall season, Manager Robbins, of B. F. Keith's theater, brings to the popular Fifteenth street home of the two-a-day an amusement offering to please the most exacting.

After several seasons in musical comedy and many successful picture parts in the Hollywood region, Julian Eltinge, the great impersonator of the fair sex, returns to vaudeville by way of B. F. Keith's theater this week. He tops a bill replete with big names and brings along new gowns, songs and jewels.

A headliner in her own right, Miss Juliet, the one-girl revue, will be featured with a repertoire of old and new impersonations. She brings Harold Solmon at the piano.

The international revue and club entertainer, Emil Boreo, will be featured in some song characterizations. He is the former star of the "Chauve Souris" and "The Merry World."

Lew Hearn and Ethel Gray, the international stars, seen wherever fun is a factor, will produce a bushel of their well-known humor.

"Any Family" is the name of a new comedy by Harry Delf. It is offered by Albert Lewis, Inc.

The Bellclair brothers, internationally famed athletes, will entertain and thrill, climaxing with their famous looping the loop to a hand catch.

Irene Rubini and Terese Rosa will be heard in "Tunes and Trimmings." Maxine and Bobby, "One Man and Some Dog" will open the show. Aesop's Fables, Topics of the Day and the Pathe News Pictorial complete the show.

Burton Holmes Brings Travel Talks to Town

Nearly everybody wants to travel. Few ask themselves why they want to travel—why they want to see and feel. It may be the excitement of boarding a steamer for an unknown port, getting away from the humdrum conflicts of everyday life. Others crave the education that travel gives. One may not go for several years and some may never go—but to have the fun of getting ready, of preparing oneself for a foreign journey lies within the reach of every one.

Burton Holmes has made the way easy. He tells us how to prepare and what to see when we get there. Not everybody can do this—it takes a story-telling equipment far above the ordinary. Only one who has known the countries of Europe intimately for many years can tell another how to get the most out of a foreign visit. To this task Mr. Holmes has set his life. Thirty-five years of "knowing how" has made him a master guide to whom thousands look for travel information and travel joys. Mr. Holmes has but recently returned from more world wanderings and is prepared to lend his never-failing vitality to a description of the latest stirring incidents and his dramatic adventures in Hawaii, Paris, Australia and central Italy.

His Washington seasons opens at the National Theater on Thursday afternoon, November 10, at 4:30 o'clock, and will continue on the following dates: November 17, December 1, 8 and 15.

Composes Concerto.

Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will give his first public recital in this country with that organization in Symphony Hall, Boston, Monday evening, October 24, playing the double-bass, an unusual instrument which he learned in his student days and for which he has composed a concerto, which he played with notable European orchestras. He has a fine Amati instrument of the seventeenth century and has played in public upon it only once in this country—at Brown University, in February, 1926, when he was given the degree of Doctor of Music. Koussevitzky will conduct the Boston Symphony in this city on Monday afternoon, March 5, under the local management of Mrs. Wilson-Greene.

Beach Closes Today.

The last of the fall fishing excursions at Chesapeake Beach will be held today under auspices of Herman Nieman, local fishing expert and angling patron. Prizes will be awarded for the best catches. A special train will leave District line at 8:30 a. m. A large fishing fleet will be used. Women have been especially invited.

JIMMIE CARR IS HEADLINER AT EARLE

One of America's foremost showman-comedian-conductors comes to the Earle Theater this week in the person of Jimmy Carr, who brings his highly skilled orchestra to headline the vaudeville portion of a program of high entertainment value. While this is the first appearance on a Washington stage of "The Doctor of Melody" and his group of instrumentalists, Jimmie Carr is nevertheless well known to theatergoers of the National Capital by reason of his frequent engagements during the summer season at Atlantic City and as a genial fixture of Broadway's smartest night clubs. Jimmie Carr is a composer who possesses a rare gift of showmanship, and through long experience as a master of ceremonies finds it an easy task to mould any audience to the mood of his entertainment. The program which the Jimmie Carr Orchestra will offer at the Earle this week is one which covers a wide field of musical expression with many syncopated numbers heavily featured. The added attraction for the week will be supplied by Donald Kerr and Effie Waston in "Beach Nuts," a clever skit in which the stars are supported by Frank Davis, Harold Clarke and Bert Weston. This quintet of players may confidently be relied upon to supply a band of spirited diversion, which is encountered all too seldom upon the vaudeville stage. They are recognized in the vernacular as "knockouts" from one coast to the other.

Other inclusions in the vaudeville portion of the entertainment embraces Marinoff's Russian circus act, in which canine actors reveal to what degree they are susceptible of training behind the footlights. The offering is in two scenes, the first "A Scene in a Circus," the second a comedy-drama, bearing the title of "Olga From the Volga." This act is unique among animal offerings and will be found equally diverting for both juvenile and adult amusement seekers. Joyner and Foster also will contribute an interesting interval and "The Musical Comedy Girl," Clara Howard, will be seen and heard in "Sunny Smiles and Song." Miss Howard is a versatile and comely young woman who believes that there is as much art in doing justice to a syncopated popular song as in realizing the vocal value of an operatic aria. Her offering has been builded along lines which are calculated to prove this contention much to the edification of her auditors.

The photoplay feature for the new week will be First National's production of "Dance Magic," in which the costellar roles are portrayed by Ben Lyon and Pauline Starke.

Swanee Syncopation.

At Swanee, the Meyer Davis dance resort, headquarters for the younger element of dance enthusiasts, Manager J. W. Wood plans for a series of amusement specialties of a type brand-new to Washington.

LAST LOCAL APPEARANCE OF SINGER

The greatest of all contraltos will be heard in a farewell concert at the Washington Auditorium on the night of October 31, 1927, when Mme. Schumann-Heink makes her last local appearance under the Washington management of T. Arthur Smith.

With this gesture at au revoir, another chapter will have been written in the history of Washington's musical life. It was just 25 years ago that this same world-renowned artist made her first public appearance in the Capital City and at that time it was T. Arthur Smith who had the good fortune to present her to the music lovers of Washington.

Approximately a quarter of a million persons heard Mme. Schumann-Heink during her 70 concerts last season—a season that marked her golden jubilee of song and the initial concerts of her farewell tour. Her current tour, which carries her to the cities not visited last season, will embrace 75 leading American cities and will include her triumphal return to the stage of the Metropolitan Opera House, where she will once again sing the great Wagnerian roles of earlier times.

Throughout America for the past 28 years she has carried the message of music—no town has been too small for her to sing in. She has done more to foster the appreciation of great music among the layman than any other living artist. She has lived a life in which she has reached perfection in her art, and after her retirement she will devote the remainder of her active life to the imparting of the secrets of this art to young American singers.

Mme. Schumann-Heink's local engagement will be limited to one concert. Her program will include compositions of Rossi, La Forge, Schubert, Strauss, Beethoven, Donizetti, Dvorak and others. The lovely "Cradle Song" which has become synonymous with the artistry of Schumann-Heink is also on the list.

Twin Night Clubs.

Le Paradis and the Club Chantecler, twin Meyer Davis resorts, are nightly scenes of some of the smartest entertaining of the city. Dinner at Le Paradis is followed by dancing at the Club Chantecler, while the cause of variety is served by excursions upstairs to Le Paradis whenever the mood prompts.

The nationally known Le Paradis band serves a brand of music that combines the utmost verve with fine and intricate melodic treatments. The effect is always decidedly American. In the Club Chantecler exoticism reigns. The five-piece ensemble of the club specializes in soft, throbbing dance numbers of a Europeanized nature.

The Thursday "theatrical nights" continue to be a strong drawing card at Le Paradis, with the cream of visiting stage folk represented in the guests who are presented to the assemblage.

JAZZ SINGER OPENS HERE IN NATIONAL

The famous comedy-drama, "The Jazz Singer," opens tonight at the National Theater when George Jessel makes his debut in Washington in his first serious role. This is the third triumphant tour of this play and its star. It is the first legitimate established success to play in Washington this season.

"The Jazz Singer" is a dramatization of Samson Raphaelson's short story "The Day of Atonement." It was produced two years ago in New York by Albert Lewis in association with Sam H. Harris and remained a solid season there. Last year "The Jazz Singer" divided a season between Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston, and so great was the season that the Washington engagement had to be postponed until this season, as the engagements in all these cities were extended.

Mr. Jessel's supporting cast includes most of those that have played with him for the 800 performances that this play has been showing. The list includes Edward Arnold, favorite with the National Theater Players here summer before last; Sam Jaffe, Joseph Shoengold, Madame Ann Lowenwirth, Lea Taiz, Nat Fryer, George Shafer, Ted Athey, Tony Kennedy, Irving Lande, William Bokine, Joseph Boland, Betty Milford, Olive Emerson, "The Jazz Singer" Chorus, Posner's Temple Choir and Sator's Sympathy Four.

Briefly, "The Jazz Singer" teaches a beautiful lesson. What a boy learns from his parents he never forgets.

Albert Lewis staged "The Jazz Singer" and to him goes the credit of discovering the great dramatic genius of young Jassel, whom he took from musical comedy and made a dramatic star of overnight.

In view of the great demand for this success Mr. Jassel consented to open on Sunday night instead of the usual Monday. Both matinees Wednesday and Saturday will be played at popular prices.

Mrs. Fiske, Otis Skinner In the "Merry Wives."

The revival of Shakespeare's gay comedy, "The Merry Wives of Windsor," with Mrs. Fiske as Mistress Page and Otis Skinner in the role of Sir John Falstaff, comes to the National for one week, beginning Monday, November 21.

"The Merry Wives of Windsor" is a brilliant and delightful comedy, quite worthy of its great author (though not in his most exalted mood), who probably wrote it, as tradition avers, at the command of Queen Elizabeth. A famous commentator, Dr. Samuel Johnson, who studied Shakespeare as carefully as any man ever studied him, speaking of "The Merry Wives of Windsor," said that "its general power—that power by which works of genius should be tried—is such that perhaps no spectator who saw it acted did not think it too soon at an end."

Falstaff is the drollest of comic creations. Otis Skinner essays the role. Mrs. Fiske, in the character of Mistress Page, will give it the stamp of her piquant personality. Henrietta Crosman has been especially engaged to play Mistress Ford. In the supporting company will be Laurance Cecil, Henry Mowbray, Geoffrey Wardell, Owen Meech, France Bendtsen, Alfred Hemming, W. C. Masson Tracy Barrow, Signor Bardaloni, George Le Soir, Burford Hampden, Hannan Clark and Elaine Temple.

Julian Eltinge Started Characterizations Early

When Julian Eltinge, topping Keith's bill this week, started out in life as a sturdy little Boston boy, he hadn't the slightest idea that his characterizations of beautiful women were to make him famous all over the United States and Europe. It wouldn't have surprised him so much to know that a leading New York theater would be named for him, for from his earliest youth Eltinge was determined to act—but rather in the Al Jolson than the Lillian Russell tradition.

It was just an accident that started him on his career. Eltinge as a boy belonged to the Boston organization called the First Corps of Cadets. Every year they put on a show. Girls' parts were played by boys. When he was 14 Eltinge was placed in the ballet and made such a striking chorus girl that the director forthwith made him premier ballerina.

The next year the play, "Miss Simplicity," was written expressly for Eltinge. It scored a success later on the professional stage. Theatrical managers from New York were quick to appreciate the new star. Before Eltinge realized what it was all about his fate as a female impersonator was sealed. Since when, in the guise of beautiful women of all ages and types, he has divided his time between Keith vaudeville and musical comedy in this country and abroad.

AN AMERICAN SINGER IN TWO OPERAS

Engagement of Margery Maxwell, American soprano, was announced yesterday by Edouard Albion, founder and general director of the Washington National Opera.

Miss Maxwell will sing in two of the six operas the Washington National Opera will produce in the grand opera festival with which it will celebrate its tenth season beginning December 5 in Poli's Theater, and will make her first bow in concert to a Washington audience November 19, before the members of the Saturday Evening Concert Club.

Miss Maxwell has become famous as Micaela, the role she will sing in the festival performance of "Carmen." Her portrayal of the lovely and simple sweetheart from whom Don Jose turns for love of the fiery Carmen is of such appeal that critics have singled her out for their special praise, despite the fact that by the very nature of the story of the opera Carmen is the leading feminine role.

The young American star also will sing the role of Gretel in "Hansel and Gretel," which will be given as a matinee on Saturday afternoon of the festival week. The opera is one of the most interesting of the newer German works and has been produced all over the world, although it has bene more than a generation since the opera was sung here. The opera is based on Grimm's fairy tale, "Babes in the Wood."

The first appearance of Miss Maxwell in Washington this season will be before members of the Saturday Evening Concert Club. The club is under the auspices of the Washington National Opera and was formed by a group of prominent men and women to bring famous artists to its members at community prices. Membership is open to the general public at a nominal membership fee which covers all costs, including admission to the five concerts its members will hear. Miss Maxwell will appear in joint recital with Jacques Jolas, brilliant young American pianist, in the first of the series on November 19.

EVERYTHING AT STRAND

Inasmuch as most patrons voice a preference for the frivolous, rollicking type of burlesque entertainment, "Naughty Nifties," this week's Mutual Burlesque attraction at the Strand Theater with George "Buttons" Fares and "Buster" Sanborn as the featured players, comes along with the absolute assurance that the offering presented contains a little of everything in burlesque, served up in an attractive manner.

"Naughty Nifties" is said to be an entertainment of snappy sketches, rollicking songs, jazzy dances, pretty girls and funny comedy situations. The large cast includes, in addition to George "Buttons" Fares and "Buster" Sanborn, Johnny Gilmore, Dorothy Lee, Helen Morgan, George Keystone and Doug Fleming, who are entrusted to keep the show moving with speed from the time the curtain rises to its final fall. A chorus of sixteen Mutual Burlesque beauties romp through the sixteen musical numbers with a series of new dance steps. "Naughty Nifties" is said to be a colorful, elaborate and unique production with an entertainment appeal for practically every one.

Scenes in Operetta Laid in Nearby Towns

"My Maryland" comes to Poli's for an engagement of one week, beginning Sunday evening, November 13. The operetta has a score by Sigmund Romberg and book and lyrics by Dorothy Connelly, composer and author of "The Student Prince" and "Blossom Time." It tells in musical form the story of Barbara Frietchie, the belle of wartime Frederick, Md., who in love with a young Union officer hung out the Union flag before the victorious army of "Stonewall" Jackson, as the wearers of the gray marched through the town.

The general thought beneath the work may be well illustrated from one quality of its score. Sigmund Romberg has taken "Maryland, My Maryland," famous in the South during the Civil War, and "Glory, Glory Hallelujah," equally popular in the North, and combined them into a new composition, "Your Land and My Land."

In "My Maryland" scenes are laid nearby. The first and third acts are laid in Frederick, Md. The second act takes place at Hagerstown, Md.

From John's House.

The first local offering of the season from the house of John Golden, the producer who has made a fortune from clean American plays, will be "Two Girls Wanted," the Gladys Unger comedy which had a full season's run on Broadway last year. It was staged by Winchell Smith, associated with many of the Golden hits, and comes to the National Theater in November with the original cast intact.

MOVIEGRAPHS

By FELICIA PEARSON

IT'S about time to take a look at Charlie Chaplin again. It won't be long now before "The Circus" comes to town—Charlie's last and latest, which has taken over a year to arrive, due to matrimonial derailing.

It doesn't look as though the boys and girls would ever get tired of this King of Comedy. Along with "Abie's Irish Rose" and the (offensive) song about bananas, Charlie, as had been often noted, heads the party for nomination to supreme office of popularity.

For over two years Charlie has not appeared in a "funny picture." "The Gold Rush," his last, was heavy and doughy with seriousness and not enough humorous yeast to raise it to the A No. 1 level. We remember him for his "Shoulder Arms" for "The Kid" and above all, for the divine slapstick classics where fat ladies, roller skates and cup custards sent him hurtling through the heavenly gates of fame.

During his unfortunate tabloid notoriety of last year, motion picture backers and friends—and the box office public themselves rallied to his aid by reviving his pictures. But always the old pictures—the two-reel slapsticks, yellow with age. In other words, the best pictures.

And now what? When "The Circus" comes to town it's going to be an occasion, boys and girls, a big occasion, take it from this hoary moviegoer.

Everybody will go to see "The Circus." Thousands of expectant friends, with a cayenne sprinkling of enemies, just to give things a tang. "This is great," will be the popular remark, "Charlie's back! C'mon to the movies. Charlie Chaplin's back!" And we'll all go.

But Charlie has to come up to scratch. And then some. There's too much in the air, for a mediocre performance to counteract. The spirit of public opinion when you read between the lines and set it up in black and white, looks about like this: "He's been a bad boy but he is so charming and disarming that we just can't help forgiving him."

Charlie may be charming—and funny and disarming. But suppose he's slipped a few notches—suppose, in the midst of his worry, he's slipped quite a few notches so that he's down on the level with the Keatons, the Langdons, the Lloyds—what then? Will the boys and girls forgive him still?

I hear that William Fox, who is a far-seeing man, anticipates the time when the public will get fed up on movies.

He is going to do speaking movies, as a full-length feature proposition. "Going to" are hardly the words at that. The tense is present, for Mr. Fox is already busy on the first "Movietone" picture. It will feature George O'Brien, who, with other principal characters, will speak the sequences in the story.

"Glorifying the American Girl" is Paramount's latest bright idea. To be worked out at the Long Island studio.

I am delighted to note that Camilla Horn is going to play opposite John Barrymore in his next. Perhaps you don't know Camilla. Well, she's the gal that played with Emil Jannings in "Faust" as Marguerite, she could not be improved upon. I hope her excellent ability as an actress will pull up John.

Lon Chaney is going to do a big gang picture, about gang life in New York. "The Big City" is the name so far, although it'll be probably changed to something more compelling when it's hung in electric lights.

Orville Caldwell is going to play opposite Marion Davies in "The Patsy," and honestly, I've never heard of him. Maybe you have.

Imogene Wilson has taken the stage name of "Mary Nolan." Herbert Brenon has cast her as Molly in his coming "Sorrell and Son." By the way, "Sorrell and Son" is going to open in grand style on Broadway. Financially speaking, Mr. Brenon is cutting himself a piece of cake.

The transoceanic flight bug has given the public such a big bite that the moving picture industry is getting itchy, and excited, too. As a result of the nonstop series of 2-inch headlines that have been emblazoned on the afternoon papers ever since Lindbergh, Warner Brothers has decided to let Monte Blue fly across the Atlantic, in the studio, and present the history-making result to all the best fans—movie and air.

Mr. Blue, as you remember, did "Across the Pacific," which I didn't see, but which, they tell me, had nothing to do with aeroplanes. With the big transatlantic racket, on the heels of this picture, Warner decided to seize the opportunity, clap Mr. Blue into an air helmet, and present the box office with the most popular oceanic title.

Count Ilya Tolstoi is raising a flock of little H's out Hollywood way. Yes, sir; Count Tolstoi is cursing. The son of the famous Count Tolstoi, whose "Resurrection" was done with Rod La Rocque and Dolores Del Rio last season, says that "Anna Karenina," which has been filmed from another of his father's novels under the title of "Love," is "a mutilation of my father's story." But, unfortunately, Count Tolstoi can't do much about it, because his father died long before the motion picture era, making no provision for "motion picture rights" in that far-away uncivilized country, America.

Charles Ray keeps hankering after the spoken drama. This very serious young man has turned his feet middle Westward—or rather, from Hollywood, middle Eastward. He wants to appear on the stage in Indiana! What——? Yes, isn't it?

There's a gag and title man, one Mr. Blumenstock, who works for First National out on the coast. Mr. Blumenstock has a Chinese man of all work, who is a most excellent servant. Not long ago this brother of the laundry men was heard to say: "No likee work for Clistin people. Wadar work for people in motion picture business."

The death of Sam Warner, of the famous Warner Brothers, which occurred on the night of Al Jolson's triumphal opening in Warner's Theater, New York, is tragedy with a touch of the dramatic. "The Jazz Singer," Al Jolson's first motion picture, is the last of Mr. Warner's many triumphs.

Col. Charles Lindbergh dropped down on Hollywood the other day, and Hollywood turned itself inside out like an old glove. And who wouldn't? He was teased, studied and photod—the air hero, with the heroes and heroines of the celluloid.

I meant to say that sometime back Jane Winton had been added to the cast of "The Patsy." I had been wondering what had happened to Jane—having not seen her for a bunch of blue moons. I began to think that there was something in that "out of sight, out of mind" proverb after all. But no.

Boys and girls—here's your big opportunity! The Columbia University in New York is opening a big three-ring course in motion picture scenario writing. The students who register for it need not take any other courses in the university. There will be, as I said, three sections, two of which will be devoted to beginners and one which will be for those who have already had experience in scenario writing. Famous movie people will give lectures on the practical business of writing scenarios, as well as former students who have taken the course and made good.

But that's not all. Arrangements have been made with some of the leading motion picture companies for the reading of "manuscripts of exceptional merit." Which may mean that, if you are a young genius, you might have Gloria Swanson lean over and accept your scenario—[illegible] off the bat, just like that. But chances are agin it—that you are a [illegible] genius. Scenario geniuses are the result of hard labor during and after scenario schools.

SPANISH WAR FILM TOPS METRO BILL

Intensely human throughout, boisterously rollicking in places, grimly affecting in others, blending finely all the elements of love, struggle, bravery, humor, pathos and death, "The Rough Riders," the Paramount superproduction which inaugurates the new policy of opening its bills on Saturday instead of Sunday at Crandall's Metropolitan Theater, beginning Saturday, October 15, seems destined to take high rank among the great pictures in the history of the cinema of this country.

"The Rough Riders" can truly and conservatively be said to set a standard in photoplay production. It is one of the few films which deserve the adjective "great" and which add immeasurably to the progress of the motion picture if that progress is to be estimated upon the ability to recreate important events and engrossing drama as they actually occurred.

To attempt to outline all of the ramifications of this sterling reconstruction of one of the most colorful periods in modern American history is obviously futile. It is all too swift, too breath-taking, too replete with moments of subtlety and too overwhelming in its emotional power.

One can say that Paramount has made a story that breathes the idealism of Theodore Roosevelt, one of the greatest of Americans; that the story rebuilds his nature and recounts his exploits in the regime of hate, war and fever in Cuba with an amazing spirit of faithfulness; that a love theme with Mary Astor, Charles Farrell and Charles Emmett Mack winds like a glowing thread through the drama, and that the difficult sequences of the blowing up of the Maine, the gathering of the Rough Riders, their fierce courage in a hail of Spanish lead and the dominant figure of T. R. alive every moment contribute generously to art and eloquently express history.

The amazingly faithful performances of Noah Beery as Sheriff Hell's Bells, George Bancroft as Happy Joe, Frank Hopper as Roosevelt. Fred Kohler as the top sergeant and Col. Fred Lindsay as Leonard Wood are worthy of especial mention and it is safe to say it will inspire most enthusiastic enconiums. May Astor is ideal as a sweet, old-fashioned girl of yesterday, whose heart trembles in the balance of a love sought by Charles Farrell and Charles Emmett Mack. Farrell and Mack distinguish themselves by superb acting.

By reason of the very magnitude and far-reaching sweep of the story and the manner of its telling, "The Rough Riders," ten full reels in length, precludes the possibility of presenting a large number of supplementary screen features at the Metropolitan this week. The auxiliary films will be limited to a new Aesop's Fable, one of Paul Terry's most amusing cartoons, bearing the title of "The Big Tent," and the latest compilation of the Metropolitan World Survey, reflecting the events of the past week.

Americanization Work Resumed

The Americanization School's classes in visual instruction conducted jointly by the District school authorities and the public service and educational department of the Stanley-Crandall Theaters has been resumed for the current season. The classes are held on Wednesday afternoons and evenings of each week in the projection room of Crandall's Metropolitan Theater, on F street at Tenth. The work of the classes is laid out by Miss Maud Alton, principal of the Americanization School of the District, and Mrs. Harriet Hawley Locher, director of the public service and educational department of the Stanley Co. of America, with Mrs. Kiernan as heretofore in actual charge of the conduct of the Wednesday sessions.

New Idea.

The first showing of a new idea in the films will be given in Washington this week at the Little Theater. One of the few short subjects ever made by Paramount, "The Elegy," presents a simple and effective little story without the use of subtitles or strained action. Every detail of the plot is worked out by pantomime, and an imaginative person, it is claimed, can deduce more of the film's intent from the photography and action than would be possible if subtitles were to explain certain portions, while ignoring other important points.

MENJOU FILM HEADS BILL AT RIALTO

"A Gentleman of Paris," starring Adolphe Menjou, is the feature picture at the Rialto this week.

It is said to be one of Menjou's best vehicles. He is cast as a gay young Parisian philanderer and much of the comedy of the picture is built around the romantic entanglement from which he must escape in order to make his marriage possible.

The high note in drama is struck in a unique situation when Menjou discovers that a fair charmer with whom he has been toying is the wife of his valet. The servant doesn't know just what to do about it. Their relations as master and man go on about as before. Although a passion for revenge smoulders in the valet's heart, he controls himself.

There is a reception for Menjou's prospective bride at which Menjou plunges heavily in a card game. A big winner, he is accused of cheating by the husband of one of his former flames. He demands to be searched, and when he is a card is found secreted up his sleeve. To a man in his social position this is a frightfully serious catastrophe. He has no idea how the card came there, but the circumstances are too damning. There is only one thing for him to do, kill himself. A shot rings out in his rooms, and it looks as though his valet's plot had succeeded.

The pistol brings the play to its dramatic and powerful climax.

The stage presentation is entitled "Three Little Maids in Dances That Are Different."

"A Rommell Cruise Around the World on the Good Ship Melody" is the overture by the Rialto Concert Orchestra, with Rox Rommell conducting.

"Model George," a comedy; Bruce scenic, "Hawaii From the Car Window," and International Newsreel round out.

HANDED ROLE ON PLATTER

Charles Farrell had not the faintest idea that he would be selected for the part as he came into Frank Borzage's office early last spring, when that director was looking everywhere for a suitable Chico for "Seventh Heaven."

Charles was only being helpful and had come to suggest his friend, Edmond Morale, whom he considered ideal for the role.

But Charles was wearing a French Beret cap as a dare and presented such a jaunty appearance that Mr. Borzage was visualizing him as Chico the whole time Charles was pleading for his friend's cause.

After gaining the director's promise that he would give the friend a test Charles left for Texas to play the lead in "The Rough Riders," unconscious of the fact that as soon as he left the office Mr. Borzage had called for studies of him in various make-ups.

The result was that Charles was notified by wire that he had won the coveted part of the year—without even a test.

"Seventh Heaven," one of the most talked-about pictures of the year, is adapted from the play by Austin Strong. Janet Gaynor plays opposite Farrell in the role of the pathetic Diane. It will be shown at the Fox Theater for the week beginning today.

In Two Films.

Mary Brian is featured in two pictures playing on F street this week. Miss Brian plays a prominent part in "Beau Geste," now in it's second week at Loew's Columbia Theater and she is also seen as W. C. Fields' principal leading woman in "Running Wild" at Loew's Palace Theater.

FIELDS FILM IS FEATURE AT PALACE

W. C. Fields in his latest Paramount farce, "Running Wild," is the screen attraction now showing at Loew's Palace Theater. The stage features two attractions, one a dancing ensemble, "The DeMarcos," said to be one of the greatest dancing and musical attractions on the stage. "The DeMarcos" have just returned from Europe, where they scored a sensational success. They were last seen in this country as featured members of George White's "Scandals." Rome and Dunn, two harmony boys, return for a third engagement, presenting new and nifty tunes. Added divertissements on the program include M-G-M News, J. Virgil Huffman's organ music, a scenalogue and the Palace Concert Orchestra under the direction of Don Felice.

W. C. Fields, in "Running Wild," is declared to equal or exceed any of his previous laugh lavishers. "Running Wild" sounds funny, even when described on paper. Elmer Finch, head of the Finch family only on his income tax slip, is the hero. Elmer has a hard time getting along. At home, the Mrs. and her fat son continually nag him; at the office, his boss is never satisfied with his work. Even Rex keeps forever at his feet, always ready to nip him. No one has a kind word for poor Elmer except Elizabeth, his attractive daughter. And she, too, has her worries. Jerry Harvey, son of Elmer's employer, wants to marry Elizabeth, but his father is opposed to the match because he imagines the whole Finch family is like his careless clerk.

After much persuasion, Harvey finally agrees to give Elmer a chance at big business. If he can collect on a bill which has been due for a long time, he'll receive a nice raise in salary. But should he fail, he can say good-by to his job.

Not realizing the hard nut that has been given him to crack, Elmer walks to Barker's office with hope high in his heart. A door opens and two men come flying out. He timidly approaches and discovers that they, too, are bill collectors. Elmer retires to the street in an effort to regain his lost courage. There his eyes light on a horseshoe. Picking it up, he throws it over his shoulder for luck and—it crashes through a shop window. Leading a crowd of angry police, Elmer starts running down the street. Finding a friendly alley, he ducks and continues his blind run.

Suddenly, he becomes aware of laughter and applause. Looking about, Elmer discovers that he has blundered out on the stage of a vaudeville theater just as Prof. Arvo calls for volunteers. Before he can realize what is happening, Elmer has been hypnotized. Hearing the professor inform him that he has become a "roaring lion," Elmer starts out to see if it's true. His first stop is Barker's office. Then he heads for home and—everyone in town starts "Running Wild."

75 Yards of Lace In Wedding Dress

In this day and age of dresses that are made of three yards and less of material, the wedding gown which Janet Gaynor wears in Fox Films' version of "Seventh Heaven" is a distinct novelty.

This filmy creation is made of 75 yards of exquisite 4-inch lace and net over a slim satin slip. The bouffant skirt is composed of eight tiers of lace ruffles and the tight bodice is finished with a large fichu collar of sheer net.

Big Taxi Bill.

If one had to pay for the miles traveled by "Eloise," the old cab, used in the Fox film version of "Seventh Heaven," coming to the Fox Theater for the week beginning today at the present taxi rate the bill would come to some place around $3,000.10. "Eloise" has gone around 10,000 miles since leaving France for a motion picture career.

7TH HEAVEN AND "ROXY" AT THE FOX

Fox Treatergoers have a rare treat in store for the week beginning today when William Fox presents "Seventh Heaven," his version of Austin Strong's great play of spiritual awakening through love and courage. This is the picture that aroused the enthusiasm of the most blase critics of New York.

Frank Borzage, who directed "Seventh Heaven," for Fox spent three months in Paris studying types and atmosphere for this production, acclaimed by critics as his masterpiece. The action of the picture is laid in a picturesque corner of the Paris Montmarte district, and it seems strange that so simple a story as "Seventh Heaven" should so grip the imagination and heart of the world—until one remembers it is an epic of flaming love and blazing courage.

The Roxy stage presentation, represents the best efforts of the stage craftsman in the way of superlative lighting and scenic effects. There is an animated tableau, which is inspiring and unforgettable. The theme song "Diane" and original composition by Erno Rapee, will be sung by James Melton, youthful lyric tenor, and Marion Keeler, newest Roxy musical find, who sings the theme song, "Charmaine," in the "What Price Glory" prologue. Miss Anna Prinz, contralto, with chorus, will interpret Kamenoi-Ostrow. The musical score will be interpreted by the Fox Theater Concert Orchestra of 50 men, conducted by Adolphe Kornspan and under the personal supervision of Mr. Meyer Davis and Mr. Waldo S. Newberry will preside at the console of the grand Wurlitzer organ. A ballet corps direct from the Roxy Theater in New York will offer "Dancing Dolls" from "Tales of Hoffman," and there will be a superb chorus of 40 voices.

DOLL'S HOUSE OPENS HERE

When Henrik Ibsen wrote the words, "The sound of a door closing is heard from below," as the finishing phrase in his now famous drama, "A Doll's House," he created a situation the echo of which has been heard around the world and laid the corner stone of an idea that has developed into the present-day status of woman in the home, in the business world, in politics and in life in general.

The theme concerns woman's right to her individuality, an idea seldom met with in 1879, when the play first appeared. The slam of the door is caused by Nora Helmer, a wife who has rebelled against being a mere toy to a husband preoccupied in his own affairs and who leaves the "doll's house" forever.

For several years the startlingly realistic portrayal of Nora, the doll-wife, as presented on the stage by Nazimova, the noted Russian actress, has made this remarkable character familiar. It was this role and theme that she selected to use for her first independent picture, produced some years ago. The Motion Picture Guild has secured this unusual film and is presenting it this week at the Little Theater.

Tons of Costumes.

Fourteen tons of wardrobe were used to costume the players in the film version of "Seventh Heaven," produced for Fox Films by Frank Borzage.

Metro Inaugurates Saturday Opening

This week marks the inauguration of the practice of opening new programs on Saturday instead of Sunday at Crandall's Metropolitan Theater. Saturday's playing hours remain unchanged, performances being continuous from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m., doors opening to the public at 10:30 a. m. Sunday's hours likewise remain unchanged, the first performance beginning at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, with the doors open to the public at 2:30. "The Rough Riders," Paramount's special production, was selected as the medium for introducing the Saturday openings to the National Capital as a new departure for the Metropolitan. In this subject are combined every element of overwhelmingly popular entertainment—thrilling adventure, accurate reproduction of one of the most colorful periods in modern American history, an appealing romance and an irresistible vein of comedy, all etched against the vivid background of events that mark the beginning of the path to greatness for Theodore Roosevelt.

LIKES TO AID NEW TALENT

One of Adolphe Menjou's hobbies is the finding of people with genuine talent in the movies and in aiding them to get ahead.

There is an imposing list of people who have the recipients of Menjou's beneficence.

Arnold Kent, now leading man for Paramount, who appeared opposite Florence Vidor in "The World at Her Feet" and who will be seen in "Beau Sabreur," was unknown until Menjou arranged a part for him in "Evening Clothes." As Menjou's chum he shared nearly every foot of film with Menjou. It put him over with a bang, and today he is considered one of the best bets in pictures.

Menjou's newest protege, who, the star says is due to be heard from in a large way, is a character actor by the name of Jack Turley. Turley and Menjou were in the Army together, Turley as a private, Menjou as a captain. They collaborated in staging a revue for the entertainment of the soldiers in the French army camps during the war. Menjou says that if Turley gets a good part he is due to be one of the greatest comedians of the screen.

Nicholas Soussanin, "the waiter who wept," in the last Menjou picture, "Service for Ladies," stole one of the biggest scenes in the picture from the star. His reward was an even bigger part in "A Gentleman of Paris," which is being shown at the Rialto this week. Menjou met Soussanin when the latter came to this country from Russia, where he had been a stage star, and kept plugging for him until he put him over.

Kathryn Carver, the blonde heroine of "Service for Ladies," is also a discovery of Menjou's, and there are many others.

Larry Likes It.

Lightning's fast but so is "Running Wild," W. C. Fields' new farce. At least, those are the sentiments harbored by Manager Lawrence Beatus, of Loew's Palace Theater, who previewed the picture last Tuesday night. Says Larry, "It's just about the best thing Fields has yet done. 'Running Wild' has thrills, laughs, pathos and romance. That ought to be enough for anyone."

'BEAU GESTE' HELD OVER AT COLUMBIA

"Beau Geste" remains with us for a second week at Loew's Columbia Theater.

This story of the French Foreign Legion, breathes an immortal flame that any director might forfeit his life to obtain. The action hinges on the wonderful devotion of three young Englishmen, each of whom decamps from home in order that the blame for the theft of a famous sapphire may fall on him although he believes one of his brothers to be guilty.

By common impulse all enlist in the Foreign Legion. Two find themselves at an isolated Sahara fort which must meet an Arab attack with only 40 defenders. The sheer fearlessness of these wonderful soldiers in their pitiably brave defense adds to the drama of the story.

Ronald Colman as "Beau" is said to give a portrayal which many are sure to place above his wonderful work in "The White Sister," the picture that started him toward the commanding place in the screen world he now holds. No more romantic a figure has ever flashed across the screen.

Rivaling Colman are Neil Hamilton and Ralph Forbes, the other two brothers. A magnificent character is brought to life by Noah Beery as "the cruelest man and bravest soldier" in the Legion.

Acting honors also belong to all the others on the long list of players—to William Powell, Alice Joyce, Mary Brian, Norman Trevor and the rest. Few pictures in the history of the screen have contained so many marvelous characterization opportunities.

Full credit belongs to Herbert Brenon, the director, whose tremendous energy and fine artistic ability are evident in the delicate shading of each scene and great sweep of the whole story.

Added divertissements on the program include M-G-M News, and a special overture, selections from "Hit the Deck" by the Columbia Concert Orchestra under the direction of Harry Borjes.

U-Boat Picture At Wardman Park

That much-discussed picture of actual scenes taken aboard a German sea raider during one of its famous cruises during the World War, "The Log of the U-Boat 35," will be presented all this week at the Wardman Park Theater by the Motion Picture Guild. It will be accompanied by a new Fox production, "One Increasing Purpose," a picturization of the novel by A. S. M. Hutchinson filmed in England among the beauty spots of London, Stratford-on-Avon and the countryside.

A Seasoned Veteran.

Pete Curley, who is seen as Jiggs Mahoney in "Jiggs, Maggie and Dinty," at the Gayety Theater this week, was a well seasoned veteran in the show business when some of the striplings of the stage were getting their first paces in the dance steps. Pete had his name in the shining lights over the doors of Broadway theaters a score of years ago and beside was with musical attractions which enjoyed long runs in Chicago and Boston. He is just as light on his feet in his dances today as he was when he shared applause with Pete Dailey, the Rogers Brothers, and other stars of those days.

Chats on Stage and Screen Folk

Echoes of the New York Stage

By ROBERT BELL.

I suppose I must not expect every one to be as interested in the stage director's art as I am, for it is an art that is never apparent; is, in fact, appreciated only unconsciously by the average audience. Yet, I am ever anxious that the theatergoer know more just what directing is, that he learn to tell the good from the bad, that he realize the tremendous importance the director plays in a modern dramatic production.

The theater is a composite art, dependent upon various branches, for it is not the playwright alone that can make a performance, nor the actor, nor the designer of scenery. The theater, itself, though it may be beautifully designed by the architect, is a building without life until animated by combination of these branches of theatrical art. Now each branch is a distinct personality, each individual from any other, and many of these branches, such as, for instance, the branch to which the actors belong, are made up within themselves of several distinct personalities. All these personalities, the actor, the scenic designer, costumer, the electrician, as well as the playwright, has something to say about every dramatic production. It is inconceivable that all these personalities, though they may be bound together by the desire to interpret the play, should be able to say things without friction, so that the play comes to us with definite clarity. The theater is like some tower of Babel, each man speaking a different tongue, expressing his opinions of the play in his own language. The job of the director is to confer with each branch, be cognizant of the ability of each personality, and to translate all these tongues into a single language, to bring harmony out of the chaos, and by a singleness of purpose, through all these branches, transmute the soul and spirit of the play. He is the invisible Greek chorus that clarifies the drama to the audience; he is the final interpreter of the theater's art.

Perhaps the most interesting director in America today is Arthur Hopkins. I have spoken of him with praise before; I trust I may do so many times again. He is not only one of the few producers who will select a play only because he cares for it, but also, like every true artist, he signs as it were his own signature to every production that he makes. In other words while translating the play through the various branches of the art he does so as it were in his own words, uses a specific phraseology. Thus it is that in a production of Arthur Hopkins we always sense his own individual personality, his own style, his own beliefs and ideals. A production directed by Arthur Hopkins always says that the individual is lonely, that every person is separated by a thousand barriers from every other human being. How do I tell this? Watch carefully a production he has directed and you will notice that the people upon the stage seldom touch each other, each stands out clearly outlined. They make few gestures, they seem to give out so much less than they have within themselves. Notice how they return again and again to a favorite chair or a specific corner of the table as if in the hopes of finding strength from the inanimate objects.

When Mr. Hopkins gets lazy his direction lacks variety and the play may lag; bad actors are made awkward and stiff by this stylization that he demands. But when at his best and when dealing with good players he is able to project what he wants to project admirably and in the simplest terms.

He has done a good job with "The House of Women," a dramatization which the author, Louis Bromfield, has made from his own novel, "The Green Bay Tree." To be sure, he is abetted not only by the capable acting of Nance O'Neill, Elsie Ferguson and Helen Freeman, but to start off with he has been given a most marvelously fine set by Robert Edmond Jones—a set that expresses the heaviness of Victorian architecture by the utmost simplicity of means. Watch how these people move in this room, watch how it pleases one and depresses another, notice how each one carries her own burden, how lonely they all are. Only once was there contact between any of them. This is when Lily finds love for Arthur Morven, a love that sweeps them together, that for the moment tears down the barriers of loneliness which had wrapped her round. The play is not as good as the book—I admit that I, a mere man, could not always follow the motives that controlled these women living in the old Victorian mansion, but if I can not recommend the play without reservations, I do recommend the production as a fine and lofty example of the theater's art.

A few blocks away at the Longacre Theater people are crowding in to see a farce by Rudolph Lothar and Fritz Gottwald entitled "The Command to Love." It is interesting to compare the direction Lester Lonergan has given this play with that of Mr. Hopkins. It is as different as anything you can imagine. Mr. Lonergan realized that he was doing a farce, hence there is much movement, much "pointing" of lines, even bustle. Every chair in the room is used at one time or another by about every actor. This energetic movement keeps things going, but it lacks form and expresses nothing. There are also good players in the cast, Mary Nash, Basil Rathbone and Violet Kemble Cooper, but so often when a farce is done in this country the director and the actors fling subtlety to the winds.

But in honesty to the director and the actors I must admit that there is little subtlety in "Command to Love." It is perhaps the broadest farce produced in a long while in this city where the censor was at one time so busily at work. Yet if you can stomach broad fare you will find that while the first act lags, the second is full of animated action and the last an exceedingly clever solution giving you an amusing mental treat.

Gaston, Marquis du Saint-Lac, military attache to Madrid, had been chosen for his post because of his attraction for women. But he has become the lover to the wife of the French Ambassador to Spain, who being of a jealous disposition insists that he pays no attention to other women. The affair is a secret, but she possesses his love letters. The attache, unable to make love through fear that if he does she will expose him, is a disappointment to his ambassador, the unsuspecting husband of his lady love. Particularly disappointing is he since the ambassador is anxious to put over a political intrigue in which he needs the assistance of the Spanish war minister, who acknowledgedly is a slave to his fascinating wife Manuela. "France can only be saved," says the ambassador, "if the marquis can by making love to Manuela persuade her to influence her husband in their behalf." To start things going the ambassador takes a picture of Manuela, which the ambassador's wife happens to possess, and tells Manuela that this picture was stolen by the marquis who is madly in love with her. Manuela stirred up by this story goes the next afternoon to the young man's house. She is presented with a pair of pajamas which she goes into the bedroom to don when the wife of the ambassador arrives to see her lover. She senses that some one is in the next room and immediately becomes jealous. He assures her that it is no woman; that, in fact, it is her husband, and in that way is able to get rid of her. She is not the only visitor to the house, for the Spanish minister, the husband of Manuela, arrives for the purpose of persuading the marquis to assist him in awarding the International Morality League's medal of virtue to his wife Manuela. This, of course, the marquis agrees to do, gets the minister out of the house and returns to the now-pajamaed Manuela.

The next act is the following day and back at the French Embassy. The wife of the ambassador, on leaving the marquis' house the afternoon before met her husband almost at its very doors, so knows that it could not have been he that was in the bedroom. Her jealousy aroused she determines that she will hand over the marquis' love letters to her husband. This she does, leaving the two men alone. But this envelope is never opened, for the marquis persuades the ambassador that his wife had confided that they were large bills and inasmuch as his wife was evidently very upset about them, persuades him to leave them unopened; in fact, to hand them over to him, that he will pay them in a lump sum and the ambassador can later on give him a check for the amount. The wife returns, expecting to find animosity but instead discovers two things. Moreover, she discovers that the letters are now in the possession of the marquis. Then Manuela and the war minister arrive. It is quite apparent that the marquis had succeeded in influencing Manuela, for the minister agrees to enter the intrigue with the Ambassador of France. A telegram arrives which announces has been chosen by the International Morality League to receive the reward of the medal of virtue.

LADY LUCK PLAYED BIG PART HERE

For a musical comedy and vaudeville star to make a success of his first dramatic venture would seem like the greatest luck which could befall an actor. Nevertheless, George Jessel, starring in "The Jazz Singer," coming to the National Theater tonight for an engagement of one week only, insists he has had tougher "breaks" than almost any one in the show business.

"'The Jazz Singer,' which I finally consented to go into as a last desperate chance, after a string of failures," he explained, "was the first bit of good luck to come my way in a long time. My failures have not been due to lack of opporunities. But just when things looked favorable for me something would always happen to spoil my chances and I would have to start all over again. The result is that when I went into 'The Jazz Singer' I was as 'broke' as any one could be."

Jessel is gratified with his success in this new field of endeavor.

"I had no notion of becoming a dramatic actor," he said. "The truth is I was forced into it by circumstances and I am not so conceited as to think it was due entirely to my own efforts. The part happened to be one that just suited me—something that fitted into my own experiences with life. While I hope to continue in this work, a new play now being in preparation for me, I may never get another part as satisfactory."

While Samson Raphaelson's name appears on the program as author of the play, Jessel declares that he and Al Lewis, producer, virtually rewrote it into its present form. It was originally called "The Day of Atonement," and Jessel's attention was first called to it by Vera Gordon, who suggested that it might be made into a joint starring vehicle for the two of them.

More than a year later the same play was again shown him by Lewis. The first time Jessel was merely bored. The second time he began to be irritated. But Lewis insisted that the manuscript contained material for a good play if properly handled.

"Raphaelson had originally rejected the advice to have the piece rewritten by a practical playwright," continued Jessel. "On the second occasion, however, he was ready to sacrifice his artistic pride. Lewis and I then took main outline of the story, but we changed the title and completely rewrote the the manuscript in hand. We kept the dialogue. And even while I was working on this revision it was furthest from my thought that I might be writing a part for myself."

"The Jazz Singer" is now beginning its third triumphant tour. Mr. Jessel has played the title role over 1,000 times.

Breakfast for Two.

How many eggs will make breakfast for two?

In her efforts to scramble a pair for W. C. Fields, her screen father, in his newest picture "Running Wild" which is now showing at Loew's Palace Theater, Mary Brian demolished 70 innocent eggs. The raid on the egg basket was due not to the size of Fields appetite or to Miss Brian's cooking ability, of which she is justly proud, but rather to the exigencies of motion picture photography.

Caravan On the Way.

Once again Washington is to enjoy that itinerant caravan of the international stage, as it pauses for one colorful and glamorous week at Poli's Theater early in November. The rotund and enchanting M. Balieff is to reveal his Chauve-Souris, with all the exciting charm and lyrical picturesqueness which have made this troupe of Russian variety artists welcome in the theaters of any land and temperament.

One immediately associates the Chauve-Souris with "The Parade of the Wooden Soldiers" and "Katinka," two items which have been adapted at one time or other by practically every revue in the world. To appease the audiences who continue to demand these two favorites, M. Balieff has devised a combination skit in which Katinka is wooed by the captain of the toy soldiers.

There is another addition, "A Russian Barcarolle," which is described by a London critic as similar to Tchekov's "Picnic in a Distant Province." Two pairs of young people in the pseudo-classic costume which the French Revolution inspired all over Europe are afloat on a stream. It is evening and they sing a Russian song with the enchanting melancholy of those who have nothing whatever to be sad about. At one side of the stage a female figure droops over a monument, at the other a Byronic poet broods on a scroll. The mixture of absurdity and sadness is difficult to analyze but is charming and unforgettable.

ROOSEVELT LIVES AGAIN

But nothing halts their rush.

Before them is their battle flag,—a blue kerchief with white dots that whips out like a pennant from the neck of Theodore Roosevelt. Roosevelt is up in front, six-shooter in hand, the roar of a hero in combat coming from his lips as he charges straight up the slope toward a barbed-wire fence 40 yards below the Spanish trenches.

The Rough Riders have already taken Kettle Hill, taken it almost with their bare hands at a vicious cost of life, launching themselves directly into a concentrated fire which it seems no human life could withstand. And now they are rushing up the steep slopes of hell itself with the joyous laugh of madmen in the harsh ecstacy of battle.

This is what recently transpired less than 30 miles from the heart of San Antonio where Paramount's film troops re-enacted the glory and tragedy of San Juan Hill in their picturization of "The Rough Riders" current at Crandall's Metropolitan Theater.

The scene was identical with the famous Cuban battleground. Tall feathered palms crowned the hillcrests where white-clad, straw-hatted Spanish soldiery stubbornly defended their position. Cannons thundered and rifles cracked in the dissonance of hatred. As the Rough Riders leaped the trenches that lay before the blockhouse on the hill there was a hand-to-hand clash and the enemy retreated, maintaining a heavy firing.

Victor Fleming, director of the battle pageant, bellowed orders through his megaphone, sending the lines of fighters on, a detachment of Rough Riders here, a troop of the Ninth Infantry there.

Frank Hopper, as Roosevelt, dismounted at the barbed wire fence, leaped over it, and waved his men to come on. Behind him were the color bearers, carrying Old Glory and the golden regimental banner up the heights.

Coming Theater Attractions

Pauline Lord has a tense and tragic role in "Surmise," a play by Frank Vosper, which will be seen at the National Theater on Monday evening, October 24, and the remainder of the week.

In "Samson and Delilah," in "Anna Christie," in "They Knew What They Wanted" and in "Sandalwood," Pauline Lord courted the dark tower.

If Miss Lord's career has been one of specialization in emotional and "sympathetic" roles, this has not been entirely of her own choice. As a matter of fact, she strongly feels the call of the comic spirit. Her powers include those of a remarkable comedienne. And this consideration increases the significance of the announcement of George C. Tyler in reference to a repertory of plays for her. A continental artist—a Bernhardt or a Duse—would be permitted to develop the full range of her powers, whereas the tendency in the American theater is to labels. While Mr. Tyler is not specific it appears to be in contemplation of his plan that within a year or two Miss Lord shall have a widely representative group of plays at her command.

"Surmise" is staged by O. P. Heggie. These players support Miss Lord: Elizabeth Patterson, Charlotte Granville, Cecile Dixon, Grace Mills, Gladys Hopetown, Gene Magnus, O. P. Heggie, Charles Francis, Don Cook, Charles Courtneidge and Edward Broadley.

"The Play's the Thing"—the latest comedy from the pen of Ferenc Molnar, Hungarian dramatist, author of "Liliom," "The Swan," and other successes will come to the Belasco Theater for a limited engagement of one week beginning Monday, October 24, with Holbrook Blinn and his company, under the direction of Gilbert Miller.

The English adaptation of the play was made by P. G. Wodehouse, popular playwright and novelist, whose humorous English style reproduces effectively the subtleties and suavities of the original text.

A play about the theater as its title denotes, "The Play's the Thing," calls upon Mr. Blinn to portray the part of a famous dramatist, Sandor Tural, a role unlike anything that he has played in recent years. In his company are appearing Hubert Druce as Mansky, a lyric writer; Martha Lorber as the beautiful prima donna, the toast of Europe; Charles Millward as a leading man and Gavin Muir as a young composer, both of them in love with the prima donna. The action takes place at a house party in a castle on the Italian Riviera where all five characters are guests.

The comedy has been staged under the personal direction of Mr. Blinn and has just closed a successful season at Henry Miller's Theater, New York, where it ran almost an entire year, and might still be going, as it closed in the height of its success, to allow Mr. Blinn and his company a brief holiday before undertaking their transcontinental tour which opens with the engagement at the Belasco.

Commencing next Sunday evening, October 23, William Street will present "Send No Money" at Poli's Theater for a week's engagement. "Send No Money" is a comedy by Owen Winters and Arthur Kutner and is staged by Mr. Street himself. Among those who will appear in the cast are Mary Carroll, Tony Highes, Dorothy Day, George Cleveland, Louis Amcher and Robert Malolm. Matinees will be as usual, on Thursday and Saturday, and seats for the engagement will be placed on sale Wednesday, 9 a. m., at Poli's box office.

The beloved diva, Emma Calve, the world's greatest Carmen, will top the bill at B. F. Keith's Theater for the week of October 23.

Next week's attraction at the Gayety Theater will be an entirely new girl and music presentation, "Burlesque a la Carte." This show will be seen for the first time at the Gayety Theater next week, and it is said to be an entertainment designed to please every one. A chorus of 24 singing and dancing girls will be a feature, with a large cast of principal entertainers. The production is in two big acts, with fourteen scenes, sixteen musical numbers and twelve changes of costume, and is said to be one of the most elaborate productions to play at the Gayety Theater this season.

"The Moonlight Maids," a new Mutual Burlesque production, will be next week's offering at the Strand Theater. This attraction is in two big acts, with fourteen scenes and sixteen musical and dancing numbers. A large cast of talented entertainers, with a chorus of sixteen girls, present the offering in a most pleasing manner.

"The Chinese Parrot," an elaborate and dramatic photodramatization of Earl Derr Biggers' famous mystery story, comes to the Rialto, Sunday, October 22.

Marian Nixon, Edmund Burns, Hobert Bosworth and Anna May Wong head the long and well known list of players in the picture. The story is based on the unfathomable theft of a string of world renowned pearls. Who had stolen it now? Only a weird Chinaman and a parrot hold the only clue that can solve the mystery of a kidnaped millionaire and the crime—all veiled in blood-chilling, haunting glamour.

To present an important picture in an atmosphere worthy of it is the plan of the Motion Picture Guild in reviving next week "The Birth of a Nation," a film which has many good points to interest the clientele of a little film theater. It is the belief of the Guild that many who would enjoy this famous production have never seen it, because of the prejudice of long standing against the movies among certain circles.

Nazimova will be seen at the Wardman Park Theater next week in a picturization of Ibsen's "A Doll's House," following the run of "The Log of U-Boat 35." This is a United Artists Production, directed by Charles Bryant, and featuring Nazimova, Alan Hale and Nigel de Brulier.

Next week's bill at Crandall's Metropolitan Theater, beginning Saturday, will be featured by first Washington presentation of First National's production of "Breakfast at Sunrise," in which the stellar role is played by Constance Talmadge. In this sprightly comedy-romance the star has another of her delightful roles which she executes in the same fascinatingly continental manner that she first introduced to her admirers in the stellar role of "Her Sister From Paris." The bill for the new week will be completed by abbreviated camera subjects of varied interest and content, including comedy, news and scenic releases of the first rank. The entertainment will be rounded out by the tuneful contributions of the Metropolitan Symphony Orchestra under the conductorship of Daniel Breeskin.

Baby Peggy, the diminutive motion picture star who is known as "the darling of the universe," will appear in person at the Earle Theater next week, beginning Sunday afternoon, as headline attraction of the vaudeville portion of the bill. Baby Peggy Montgomery, to give her name in full, will be seen in a comedy playlet written especially for her use and bearing the title of "Pinched." Other important inclusions in next week's vaudeville bill will embrace the McBanns in "Life on the Farm;" the American prima donna, Hazel Crosby, in opera, aria and syncopation; C. B. Maddock's production of "Side Kicks," with Jack Cameron, supported by Hector Carlton, Bernie Hart, Kathleen Goodwin, Ivor Peterson, William Zinnell, Jess Willis, Romeo Somma and Larry Kramer, in a two-scene musical offering staged by Lewis Hooper, and other vaudeville acts. The feature photoplay for the new week will be First National's production of "Convoy," one of the important releases of the new season, in which Dorothy Mackaill is the pictured star.

Two attractions of more than passing interest are scheduled for showing at Loew's Palace Theatre the week beginning Saturday, October 22. Lillian Gish, in her latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer spectacle, "Annie Laurie," will be the screen attraction, with Ted Weems and his Victor Recording Orchestra of all-star musical funsters, as the stage presentation feature. "Annie Laurie" is a vivid romance of the Scottish highlands, laid about the massacre at Glencoe. Miss Gish plays the historic daughter of Sir Robert Laurie, whose marriage into an enemy clan brought the peace that unified Scotland.

For the week beginning Saturday, October 22, Samuel Goldwyn will offer at Loew's Columbia Theater the new Ronald Colman-Vilma Banky film, "The Magic Flame." Directed by Henry King, maker of "Stella Dallas," and adapted by Bess Meredith from Rudolph Lothar's play, "King Harlequin," "The Magic Flame" is a story of clowns and counts, circus and court, love and laughter.

Stage to Screen.

If you're on the stage in Hollywood it seems you have a good chance for breaking into the movies. Two people, whose stage work was done under the eyes of producers, have parts in Adolphe Menjou's latest Paramount picture, "A Gentleman of Paris," which is now being shown at the Rialto. They are Lorraine Eddy, who made a hit in the Hollywood Music Box Revue, and William B. Davidson, who played in "The Donovan Affair" at the Vine Street Theater.

All Members of Cast.

In the cast of "Two Girls Wanted," latest of the John Golden comedy hits, which comes to the National Theater in November, will be Nydia Westman, Donald Foster, Mary Philips, Frank Monroe, Grace Menken, Charles Laite, Mary Hampton, Charlotte Denniston, Herbert Saunders, John Humphrey and John LeFevre. All were members of the cast during the 41-week run in New York last season.

MAGNIFICENT ARRAY OF LIGHT OPERA

The President Theater Light Opera Company, scheduled to make its debut on the local amusement stage on the evening of November 7, is bringing to the Capital City an array of magnificence in talent seldom encountered in the realm of the repertory theater of musical art.

T. Arthur Smith, who is directing the project, announces that he has secured the services of a cast of principals boasting the finest voices in the American light opera field.

Prominent on the list of principals is the name of Hazel Huntington, a coloratura soprano of rare accomplishment, who will be remembered for having appeared in the William Wade Henshaw productions of "The Impresario" and the "Elixir of Love" when these two operas were brought to Washington by Mr. Smith two seasons ago.

The company has also secured the services of Mary Craig, a youthful soprano, who will occupy one of the pivotal roles in the organization. Miss Craig, despite her youth, has attained notable recognition in the field of the concert and opera. She has been featured by the Brooklyn Musical Society, the Philadelphia Civic Opera Association and the St. Louis Opera.

Among the tenors of the company will be found the name of William Mitchell, first tenor, who has a voice of excellent quality. He is well known in the music life of the Middle West and has appeared, in concert work, in many Eastern cities. And Robert Lyle Malone, a oungster of much promise, has been selected to fill the assignment of second tenor.

For the production end of his musical theater, Mr. Smith has selected technicians of wide experience. Thus, the stage direction has been left in the capable hands of Charles T. H. Jones, an old-timer, who, in former times, was recognized among the mighty when the Castle Square Company was having its fling in the opera halls of the Nation. Of late, he has been identified with th Society of American Singers. Stephen Golding has been chosen scenic artist.

The names of other principals will be announced at an early date.

Milloecker's light opera, "The Black Hussar," has been chosen by the President Theater Light Opera Company for its initial presentation. This production will be followed by "The Gypsy Baron," "Fatinitza," "Princess of Trebizonde" and others.

New Lawrence Comedy.

"Among the Married," a new comedy by Vincent Lawrence, will be presented by Sam H. Harris at the Belasco Theater on Monday evening, October 31, for one week only, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. This smart and sophisticated comedy is the latest work from the pen of Mr. Lawrence, who is the author of "Sour Grapes" and a number of other successful comedies. A cast of prominent players has been assembled by Mr. Harris, and it includes Louis Calhern, Katherine Alexander, Warren William, Shirley Ward, Richard Sterling and Fred McQuirk.

Parisian Gets Atmosphere.

So that the true Parisian atmosphere might be transferred to the screen authentically for Adolphe Menjou, Jean de Limur, a native Parisian, was assigned to the technical direction of "A Gentleman of Paris," the Paramount star's new picture, which is being shown at the Rialto this week. By a coincidence Limur was also technical director for Charles Chaplin when the comedian made "A Woman of Paris," which first brought recognition to Menjou.

Woolworth Store Open In Berlin With Band

Berlin, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Woolworth became a definite fixture of Berlin with the formal opening of a Woolworth store in the city's north end.

In this district of the laboring classes, more than in any other part of the town, articles at the low price of 25 and 50 pfennings are in continual demand.

The opening was universally proclaimed a "kolossaler" success. A brass band furnished the befiting atmosphere of gayety so conducive to the spending of money, while a large staff of floorwalkers and departmental chiefs, recognizable by a red pink in their buttonhole, were on the spot to preserve order among the army of inquisitive gapers. These, however, required no special discipline.

NICHOLAS VASELIEFF, leader of the "Roxy" Russian Cathedral Choir.

VICTIM "IN" ONE SUIT

Movie realism took its toll during the filming of a scene for W. C. Fields' new Paramount comedy, "Running Wild," which is now showing at Loew's Palace Theater. As a result the victim is "in" the price of a new suit.

Director Gregory la Cava, author of the story from which Roy Briant made the adaptation, explained the action to Frank Evans. The latter portrays a belligerent debtor from whom Fields tries to collect an overdue bill. La Cava directed Evans to be vigorous in his treatment of two collectors who preceded Fields into his office, as a horrible example of the rough handling accorded such intruders.

"Shall we rehearse it or take it?" inquired the director after he had outlined the action to the players.

"Take it," they chorused, Evans' voice sounding firmer than all the rest.

The two minor players who were to play collectors glanced at each other, then apprehensively at the muscular Evans, and smiled feebly as they indicated their readiness for the fray.

The lights were flashed on. Fields entered the anteroom of Evans' office with "camera!" Then two bodies came hurtling through the door and fell sprawling in the corridor beyond. Fields registered the necessary emotions without any effort whatsoever. In fact, he nearly forgot the cameras were there. When the scene was completed, assistants rushed to the aid of the human projectiles. The casualties proved to be nothing more serious than a few faint bruises and an irreparable split down the back of one man's coat.

La Cava cautioned Evans against displaying quite so much vigor in the next take and then he was heard to remark to Fields:

"That was a darn good rehearsal!"

Can Always Learn.

One is never too old to learn new things, according to Albert Gran, who plays the role of Papa Boul in Fox Films verson of "Seventh Heaven," to be presented at the Fox Theater for the week beginning today. After having been 'chauffeured" around as long as he has owned a car, Mr. Gran had to learn to drive a dilapidated taxi for this production. "Seventh Heaven" is adapted from the stage success of the same name.

Menjou Makes Record.

The world's hop, skip and jump record in motion picture production was recently established by Adolphe Menjou. In a seven and a half hour day, Menjou succeeded in working on every one of the ten stages of the 26-acre Paramount studio. In this period he made five changes of wardrobe and worked in 40 scenes in his new picture, "A Gentleman of Paris." The picture is being shown this week at the Rialto.

BEERY HAD HARD TIME

Noah Beery, perhaps the screen's finest villain, has led a life of many and varied pursuits. Among the hundred jobs he held before starting his career of perpetrating dastardly deeds for future generations were selling papers, operating a cable car, acting as a messenger boy in Kansas City and peddling peanuts with a traveling circus.

As a youth he came to New York, determined to find stage work. And many a park bench held the shivering form of young Master Beery during those lean and hungry days. Things came to such a sad pass that he even had to pawn his only accessories—two ferocious six-shooters.

But—as they say in the story books—the boy grew older, learned lots and, with such determination and aggressiveness as was his, soon found himself in musical comedy, "trouping" all over the country.

Then came a day when Beery sold everything he owned in order to reach Hollywood, and, upon arriving, immediately landed a job wearing a suit of armor at the Lasky Studio. They seemed to like his work, because a short time later the words "Noah Beery" appeared at the bottom of a Paramount contract.

There's no need to mention past work. A list of films in which Beery has "done his stuff" would look like the "ten best pictures of the last ten years." His latest role is "Sergeant Lejaune" in Paramount's production of Percival Wren's novel, "Beau Geste," which is now showing at Loew's Columbia Theater.

EGYPT'S ART IS EXHIBITED AT LEGATION

By ADA RAINEY.

AN exhibition of ceramics and textiles is being held in the new Egyptian Legation overlooking Meridan Park at Chapin and Fifteenth streets. This is a most unusual exhibition and has been assembled by Mme. Charaoui Pasha, who has been visiting her daughter at the legation, but who is returning to Paris this week.

Mme. Charaoui has established two schools of industrial art in Cairo. The first is a school that is reviving the old Arabic art of ceramics in which they excelled. This is the first time that the old arts of the Arabs has been revived, but it is being done most effectively by Mme. Charaoui, who sent to Sevres, in France, for a trained worker in faience to go to Cairo to teach the fundamentals in the making of the pottery.

The designs for the pieces are original. They were made by the artists in the school and were adapted from Arabic and some from Egyptian designs. But there is no copying, each piece is an original work and only one piece is made from a design. The resulting ceramics are tremendously interesting. Many of the pieces have the luster so admired in the Hispano-Mooresque potteries. Others have the lotus designs taken from Egyptian motifs.

There is great interest in the designs of these ceramics and great credit is due the founder of the school for her devotion and enthusiasm for the work. She has had exhibitions of the work in Paris, where she is now en route to have another showing of a large number of pieces. She is especially interested in reviving the old Arabic arts which have been neglected for centuries. Egypt was at one time in close contact with Arabia, just after the fall of the Roman Empire, and absorbed her culture, her arts and her learning.

Old Designs Used

In the present exhibition can be seen many of the ceramics already mentioned and fine examples of modern workmanship of the old designs of various objects d'art made of ebony and other fine woods and inlaid with mother-of-pearl. There are many fine pieces of brass inlaid silver, made after the old designs. The beauty of the old designs is beyond dispute, the workmanship of the finest.

There are some rare examples of ancient Egyptian jewelery. The famous cerulean blue, which modern workers in ceramics have in vain attempted to attain, can be seen in necklaces which date from the time of the Pharoahs. There are many necklaces of gold taken from the old designs that have great charm and interest.

Then Mme. Charaoui Pacha also has established a school to teach young girls work in laces, textiles and needle work. She is especially interested in this school and is doing a great deal to awaken interest in it and in the workers, who are sometimes very young children not more than 6 or 7 years, and who do excellent work. Mme. Charaoui is herself an ardent feminist and is the editor of a monthly magazine, the Egyptian, a review of feminism, sociology and art. She is the president of the Egyptian Feminist Union, which is very active in politics and vital questions of the day.

It is difficult not to get too enthusiastic and personal when speaking of this remarkable woman who is doing so much in such diverse ways for her countrymen and women. Her portrait, just completed by the Russian artist, Feodor Takharov, is also to be seen in the present exhibition. It is done in miniature style, but is larger than a miniature. It is in watercolor, showing a three-quarters view of Mme. Charaoui seated near a window looking over the minarets and domes of Cairo. The work was completed in four sittings. The artist lives at present in New York, but came to Washington to paint the portrait and is remaining here for a few days. The background both in color and design is especially effective, seeming to be the outward expression of the interests and ideas that live in the subject's mind and heart.

Textiles Are Shown

In the hall and exhibition room of the legation are also to be seen some unusual textiles. They are appliques on linen of ancient Egyptian designs found in temples and the tombs of the Pharoahs. Many of the designs are exact reproductions of the old paintings on wall and lintel posts. They lend a tremendously decorative note to the walls on which they are hung, and re-enact the life and stories of the gods and goddesses and kings of ancient Egypt. The work, of course, is all modern and most effectively done to reproduce the color and forms of the old paintings.

There are other interesting textiles to be seen. Especially important and rare is the door portiere of a mosque made of silk, handwoven and made into an intricate design composed of 3,000 pieces. This is a fine example of textile art. There are also a number of rugs which have been woven in the textile school. An example of antique wood carving, "mushabia" work, is made up into a settee and chairs covered with fine silk give one an idea of the old forms of furniture formerly used.

In another room are two cases filled with ceramics found at Rod-el-Farag, near Cairo, showing many of the old forms which were the inspiration of the work that is at present being done in Cairo. The designs are unique. There is an Egyptian eagle that looks strangely familiar. There are lace-like designs that were in the necks of old water bottles made from a certain kind of clay that kept the water cool. These and many other interesting things have been unearthed. The Egyptian government has given Mme. Charaoui a gold medal for her work in reviving the old forms of ceramics.

Priest's Garment Shown

Another case is filled with priceless Coptic textiles. A priest's garment dating from the sixth century is almost entirely complete, a rare treasure and one especially interesting to textile artists.

The entire exhibition is opened to the public, and many of the objects are for sale for the benefit of the schools in Cairo.

The following letter, written by Mme. Charaoui Pasha to her friends in America, is her parting word:

"To the American Nation:

"Before I leave the hospitable soil of the United States of America, I desire to extend a cordial greeting to the American Nation represented in the numerous friends who have taught me how to like it.

"To those friends who have extended to me such cordial welcome and from whom I regret to take leave, I wish to say how hard it is to separate after two months, during which I was enabled to enjoy the sweetness of their friendship, to penetrate into the intimacy of their social life and to admire at close range their activity and humanitarian achievements.

"Therefore, before I quit this beautiful land, I wish to tell them good-by, and not farewell; for a taste of American hospitality is like drinking from the waters of the Nile. One must come back.

"Good-by, dear friends of America, and thank you for your welcome and especially for the touching sympathy you have manifested for Egypt through the channels of your active and efficient press on the occasion of the death of our national leader, the much-regretted Zaghlul Pasha.

"I shall never forget the tears that I have seen running from the pretty eyes of some of Egypt's best friends at the announcement of this sad event. Those tears I have gathered in my heart in order to join them to those of my compatriots. They will cement the already strong and sincere bonds that unite our two nations in a communion of feelings and the sad remembrance and one and same sacred affliction.

"MME. HODA CHARAOUI PASHA."

Arts Club Contest

The Arts Club is offering two prizes of $25 each, one for the best design for a costume to be worn by the men's floor committee for the fifth annual Bal Boheme at the Willard Monday, January 30, and the other for the most attractive and colorful poster design that will express the spirit of the Bal Boheme as the gayest, most fascinating carnival of the winter.

Art groups and classes all over the city have been invited by the committee to enter into this contest, which will continue until October 28. The club hopes that all groups will send designs and that individual artists will also compete. There is no limit to the number of designs submitted by contestants and the entire number of drawings will be placed on exhibition in the clubhouse following the announcement of the winners. The second and third best designs in each class will be given honorable mention by the committee, which includes Dr. Frederich V. Coville, president of the Arts Club; Gideon A. Lyon, chairman of the Bal Boheme; Mrs. Will C. Barnes, chairman of the poster committee, and others.

Charles A. R. Dunn Back

Charles A. R. Dunn returned a short time ago from a profitable summer spent chiefly in France and England, where he painted a number of water colors. Mr. Dunn spent a deal of time sketching in the small village of Treboul, in Brittany, which he found most delightful, as it has not been overrun either with artists or tourists. He also painted in Quimper and Concaneau and in Cornwall and Devon in England. He will have an exhibition of his water colors at the Arts Club the first two weeks in January. He was accompanied by Garnet Jex, who has returned with a number of large and small canvases in oil and will doubtless exhibit with Mr. Dunn at the Arts Club.

The large portrait, "The Girl in Black," by Mr. Dunn, has been invited by the Chicago Art Institute for its forthcoming annual exhibition. Another portrait, "Girl in the Red Jacket," was hung last year at the Chicago show and later sent on a traveling exhibition to a number of Southern cities.

Landscape Club Activity

The Landscape Club is showing signs of activity and planning for an exhibition at the Mount Pleasant Library. The exhibition held there last spring was very successful. Benson B. Moore and A. O. H. Rolls took their vacation together last summer and spent much time painting Ocean City, Md., and along the shores of the Chesapeake. Mr. Moore has been busy etching a number of plates during the summer in his studio.

Culture Program Planned

The Community Institute of Washington will present this season a program of ten events in the auditorium of Central Community Center, Thirteenth and Clifton streets northwest, which is not only of unusual interest to all lovers of the arts and science, but which promises much toward a definite development of art and cultural interest in the Capital in the future, should the public response be sufficient to encourage the broadening of its scope.

The institute recently formed by the Community Center Department with the close cooperation of the Washington Society of Fine Arts and assisted by the Public Library, will give these programs twice each month beginning Thursday night, November 3, and continuing every other Thursday in each month until the end of March. The lectures and other events are in a way a continuance of the course usually offered by the Washington Society of Fine Arts, but by this new organization extended to a much wider public, the Fine Arts members, however, retaining special privileges.

Of particular interest to artists will be the showing of the cinema films from the Metropolitan Museum, never given in this city before and to be introduced on this occasion, December 1, by Huger Elliott, director of educational work of the museum. Three films of particular value will be shown including, "A Visit to the Armour Galleries," "The Pottery Maker" and "Vantasena," the last being based on a tenth century Indian story and produced by the School of Fine Arts of Pratt Institute.

Beneker to Appear

A second event that will be of interest to art lovers is the appearance on February 9 of Gerret Beneker, whose subject, "Art in Every Day Life," will be illustrated by 33 of his own paintings. Since the war when his posters, "Men Are Square" and "Sure We'll Finish the Job," attracted such widespread admiration, Mr. Beneker has conducted important experimental work for a number of industrial organizations in Cleveland and other cities, and has lately been in great demand in lecturing along these lines. His paintings are seen in all the leading exhibitions in this country and his one-man exhibition has been shown in a number of American art museums.

The third event which pertains particularly to art is that of Thursday, March 1, when Earle Rowe, director of the Rhode Island School of Design, will be heard in his "Fakes and Forgeries," wherein he reveals in fascinating fashion the curious methods of faking antiques and ways of detecting the forgeries. He was formerly associated with the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and at one time was in charge of the Egyptian department of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, in 1912 going on the Egyptian expedition of the Harvard Museum of Fine Arts. Seven other events of musical, dramatic and scientific interests make up the first season of the Community Institute of Washington.

DUNTHORNE GALLERY—Facsimiles of drawings by Durer.

ENGRAVINGS ON DISPLAY IN ARTS CLUB

An exhibition quite out of the usual run, and a most instructive one as well, is now on view at the Arts Club. It is of etchings and prints illustrating the different methods of engraving and was arranged by Gordon Dunthorne. An exhibition with an especial idea running through the exhibits always is more thought provoking than one arranged merely to show the works of a certain artist. The present show illustrates various phases of the graphic arts that are in vogue at present—etching, dry point, mezzotine, aquatint, engraving and lithographs. It takes a very specialized knowledge to quickly distinguish between the various processes. It is to show these different run and a most instructive one as well, arranged.

Mr. Dunthorne explained the processes and told the members of the club Thursday evening the distinctions between dry point and etchings, mezzotints and aquatints. The lecture was illustrated and the distinction between the quality of the lines in the different prints was well brought out.

An etching, "An Architectural Study," by Roi Partridge, is a well-defined study in planes and perpendicular lines which is very effective. A delicate and lovely soft ground etching, "From Indio, California," by E. R. Burr, is one of the most imaginative impressions in the group. It is in the manner of handling that its charm consists.

As a sharp contrast to the delicacy of the Burr etching is the lithograph of "Broadway, New York," by Pennell. The two are as far removed in their method of handling and printing as the subjects of the prints. Nearby is an engraving of the Trumble portrait of Alexander Hamilton, done by H. Crawford. It is an excellent example of this sort of work.

Many Artists Exhibited

Several aquatints delightfully differentiated claim the attention. "Chatres," by Hans Figura, is an individual work showing old houses and the spires of the Cathedral rising in the background. A quaint old print of "Lyme Regis," by Daniell, contrasts well with the bold romantic treatment of "Where Junk Sails Lift," by John Taylor Arms. The latter is bold, imaginative and vital.

A soft ground etching by T. F. Simon, of the stalls of old books beloved by all who visit Paris, is humorous and human. This is called "Notre Dame," as the great Cathedral looms large in the background and gives atmosphere to the two figures before the stalls.

A series of etchings and drypoints call attention to the great beauty of line and the fineness of possibilities and include the "Pente Vechio," etched by E. Roth, with his accustomed authority and exactness; "Roman Bridge, Ronda," by Oliver Hall, a drypoint with much beauty of construction and line and the wholly delightful "The Enchanted Pool," by Norman Wilkinson. The last is especially stimulating to the imagination. A mezzotint of "Notre Dame," by L. R. Squerrel, is dramatic in its conception and rendering.

F. R. Benson is represented by a drypoint called, "Man With a Gaff," and Alfred Hutty by an etching of trees, "Sussex Pines." Both are the work of artists who are masters in their line. "The Cabman," by W. A. Levy, is a character study of power. "Old Timber Bridge," by Oliver Hall, is an interesting expression. "Rouen," by John Taylor Arms, shows a glimpse of that picturesque city through a gigantic arch, and the delightful drypoint by Martin Hardie, an English etcher, is of "A Dorset Village."

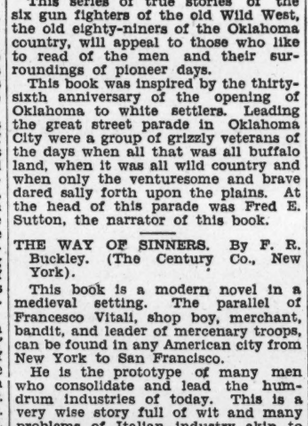

Other fine prints in the exhibition are "San Sabastian, Lunch Hour," by E. Blampied; "The New Moon," by Sir Frank Short; "Sta. Maria della Salute" and "Yorkshire Cobbles," by W. L. Wylie; "Rolling Hills," by Alfred Hutty, and the remarkable "flick" engraving of "Miss Amelia," by E. Haskell. Then there are several old engravings and mezzotints and a fine old map of Durham, England, dating from 1576. A mezzotint of Anne of Cleves is familiar to all lovers of art. It is from the painting by Holbein and the mezzotint is by Charles Bird.

The little exhibition is varied, showing excellent types of the various groups represented. It will be on view until October 28.

Corra Harris Has Known Grief and Misfortune

Corra Harris, author of "The Happy Pilgrimage," just published by Houghton Mifflin Co., has known fear and sorrow and grief and misfortune as a good soldier knows the hardships of war, but her spirit has never traveled on crutches.

She was born on a cotton plantation among the red hills of Georgia, and in 1887 married the Rev. Lundy Howard Harris, a Methodist minister then struggling for a "living wage." When he was taken ill and the pantry was empty, Mrs. Harris had a "heart-to-heart talk with her Maker" and set to writing. Hamilton Holt accepted her first work for the Independent, and a series of sketches was ordered by the Saturday Evening Post. She told the story of her early trials in "A Circuit Rider's Wife" and hundreds of readers began to write to her for help, for money, for spiritual guidance—anything. Her life developed, her interests broadened, and "My Book and Heart," "As a Woman Thinks" and "The Happy Pilgrimage" have won new admirers and warmer friends.

LEWIS STANTON PALEN, whose two books, "The Red Dragon" and "The Lost Sword of Shamyl," have just been published.

Book Reviews

COUNTRY COUSINS. By Walter A. Dyer; illustrated by Charles Livingstone (Doubleday-Page & Co., New York.)

"But ask now the beasts, and they shall teach thee; and the fowls of the air, and they shall tell thee."
—The Book of Job.

While at first glance this book may appear to be written for children alone, it is soon apparent that it is intended for adults as well and is indeed a fascinating series of nature stories for all lovers of animals.

David Grayson, in his foreword, declares that Dyer to give full measure adds many of the things that appertain to the good life and the common beauty of the country.

HANDS UP. As told by Fred E. Sutton and written down by A. B. MacDonald. (The Bobs Merrill Co., Indianapolis.)

This series of true stories of the six gun fighters of the old Wild West, the old eighty-niners of the Oklahoma country, will appeal to those who like to read of the men and their surroundings of pioneer days.

This book was inspired by the thirty-sixth anniversary of the opening of Oklahoma to white settlers. Leading the great street parade in Oklahoma City were a group of grizzly veterans of the days when all that was all buffalo land, when it was all wild country and when only the venturesome and brave dared sally forth upon the plains. At the head of this parade was Fred E. Sutton, the narrator of this book.

THE WAY OF SINNERS. By F. R. Buckley. (The Century Co., New York).

This book is a modern novel in a medieval setting. The parallel of Francesco Vitali, shop boy, merchant, bandit, and leader of mercenary troops, can be found in any American city from New York to San Francisco.

He is the prototype of many men who consolidate and lead the humdrum industries of today. This is a very wise story full of wit and many problems of Italian industry akin to those which exist today.

The women who wore the dress of that day also bear a real resemblance to our silver and gold slippered and brocade gowned women of 1927.

THE DEVIL'S MANTLE—By Frank L. Packard. (George H. Doran Co., New York.)

A myster story, with burglars, pirates, kidnapers and conspirators playing a part, with a most charming love story weaving through it. It is a story of the Fiji Islands, and the islands in the vicinity. Murder committed, accompanied by robbery, an innocent man accused. His capture by the captain of a trading ship; the final wreck of the ship; the life of the captain saved by his prisoner; the captor endeavors to shield his captive by giving him a false name when they are rescued from the ocean, and the final establishment of his innocence, and the happy issue of his love are all related in an exciting and entertaining style.

GAY NECK, THE STORY OF A PIGEON. By Dhan Gopal Mukerji. (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.)

This book represents a de luxe type of children's literature which is becoming more and more in vogue as parents realize that the artistic bent of childhood must be directed into proper channels. Nowadays it is understood that just any book will not do for the growing mind and books for boys and girls are written with as much care as those for adults.

This is certainly true of the entrancing story of "Gay Neck," in Indian pigeon whose life story is set down with amazing fidelity and absorbing interest in this beautiful volume. The illustrations are worthy of a special note and are most arresting.

Gay Neck was a heroic pigeon for he served in the World War and won decorations for his work as a carrier pigeon. One of the enthralling chapters of the book deals in vivid touches of graphic description with Gay Neck's first flight and his battles with the other hawks and eagles.

SPREAD EAGLE. By George S. Brooks and Walter B. Lister. (Charles Scribners' Sons, New York.)

In this play is a promise of a Broadway success if it sounds as well before the footlights as when it is quietly read on a summer afternoon on a screened-in porch with a beautiful view just within the range of the eye and a pitcher of iced lemonade nearby.

For in such an environment war does seem a distant horror and one can easily be brought to believe it should not be. But sterner moments fail to verify the prediction of the preface of the play that "if it were as easy to incite peace as it is war, Spread Eagle would be an international disarmament conference." "Spread Eagle" will not abolish war any more than international disarmament conferences achieve that result. That will come, perhaps, when human passions have been thoroughly conquered. Until then the wise nation walks softly and carries a big stick in case it is attacked.

BEST SERMONS—BOOK FOUR. Edited by Joseph Fort Newton, pastor of the Memorial Church of St. Paul, Philadelphia (Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York).

This new volume of sermons, the annual choice of Dr. Newton, presents a survey of thought in the religious field of the present day. It is a recognized fact that today the constructive up-to-date discussions of ethics and religion from the pulpits of this country can not be ignored. There is no doubt that they are indicative of the trend of thought of the age and are beacon lights of progress of the present and future. Dr. Newton has chosen a wide range of subjects and both sides of many questions in selecting the sermons for this volume.

NEW WOMAN POET RISES IN ENGLAND

Poetry appears to be an inherent right of the English writer, man or woman. The British turn easily to verse and in their public schools their young people are well grounded in the rudiments of verse making. An example is set to American editors and publishers in that poetry is treated seriously by these agencies in England and there is a market for it.

In America even some of the better magazines seem to regard poetry simply as "filler" and its length rather than its intrinsic merit often is the reason for it being printed at all.

A change in this editorial and publishing policy must come about before we can hope to develop more Poes, Walt Whitmans, Longfellows and Sidney Laniers in this country.

In "Road-Royal" by Alice Hunt Bartlett (Cecil Palmer, London, England), is a fair example of the new school of British poetry. Generally speaking, this school lacks the concentrated genius of the days of Byron, Shelley and Tennyson. Modern poets appear to peter out within sight of the 100 line mark. It might be suspected that the underlying reason for this is that the fundamentals of poetry making are not so sound as in the past. That is, poets have not acquired them so thoroughly.

Miss Bartlett brings a tried and true hand to her test. She was the founder and editor of the American section of the Poetry Review, London, and in that capacity conducted twelve international prize poetry contests.

As she beautifully expresses it in her preface "I would I could write with the perfection of some I have read, but am happy in knowing of the joy it has been to many, and that it has been and is to me, this lavishment of writing."

Miss Bartlett has an exquisite diction and a real sense of the value of words. Wherever a simple word will tell the story she uses it, but does not fear to utilize less-known combinations where they are needed.

In her poem, "Radio," is a new point of view which explains why this sonnet received the London Poetry Review's commendation and prize for "newness of ideas in application of poetry to science." It follows:

"I wear the badge of mourning, oh, my dear,
I walk in solitude. I kiss each star!
If you are here beside me or afar,
No other fellowship seems half so near!
When thought can guard one thus, why yield to fear?
Materially parting is no bar
For those in unison No static jar
Encountered can not thought swing safe and clear?

"This brings one to the crux of our suspense—
Is thought a living entity or no?
At gateways of great wonders, we,
Immense, lies opportunity! Today we know,
Inventors find a long-sought recompense;
On unknown waves projected concepts go!"

One of the loveliest things in the book is the group of sonnets entitled "The Panoply of Love." V. P. W.

POETS' HONORS SHARED BY VAN DYKE, JAPANESE AND EDITH PRICE BOOKS

Lord Byron once gave this definition of poetry in his journal: "Poetry is the feeling of a former world and of a future."

A literature which does not produce poetry is indeed barren and it is a healthy sign in this twentieth century that, despite our so-called materialistic trend, poets still flourish among us as of old.

While winter is never quite so prolific as spring in this regard, yet the lure of the Christmas sales is not unheeded by our poets who, after all, must eat sometimes.

Therefore, it has come to pass that many publishers prepare attractive Christmas volumes of poesy, old and new. It is lamentable that oftimes these volumes are sold because of their exterior attractions and without much thought of what may lie between their covers.

On the reviewer's desk last week were put three books of poetry widely varying in scope and appearance but all with something of intrinsic poetic merit.

Out of motives of gallantry we will review first the quaint green chapbook entitled "Three Women Poets of Modern Japan," a book of translations by Glenn Hughes and Yozan T. Iwasaki. (University of Washington, Seattle, Wash.). This is one of the renowned chapbooks put out under the auspices of the University of Washington. It is an example of fine printing and is bound in imported jade Kinkami paper. The first printing is limited to 500 copies.

Translations of Oriental poetry have been quite the vogue in recent years, but for the most part these have been of classic writers of that country. Now is to be found available in English a delightful collection of modern Japanese poems. The translators are the chief American workers in the field of contemporary Japanese literature. Mr. Hughes is assistant professor of English and dramatic art in the University of Washington, and Mr. Iwasaki is the founder and director of the Japanese Theater in Seattle.

Essay Explains Poetry

It is first pointed out in the short lucid essay on Japanese poetry which precedes the poems themselves that the Japanese are masters in miniature and that this fact is brought out most forcibly in their poetry which is composed chiefly of tiny poems, some of them only 31 syllables in length. Japanese poetry does not utilize meter and only occasionally rhyme. Their form is based on strict rules of syllabic quantity.

The secret of Japanese poetry is suggestion. A word, a phrase awakens the imagination of the reader. It is verily a box of "compacted sweets."

From earliest times Japanese women have excelled in literature. Tradition still cherishes the memory of the Japanese Sappho, Ono no Komachi, who lived in the 1nth century, as we reckon time. All anthologies of classic Japanese verse contain selections from her pen.

Today poetry is an important part of everyone's education in Japan. The modern Japanese woman makes poetic composition a natural part of her life, no matter what her station.

Out of these millions of little poems three women poets stand supreme. They are Okiko Yosano, considered by many critics the most gifted woman poet of modern Japan; Akiko Yanagiwara, "White Lotus," and Baroness Takeko Kujo.

Here are several examples of the poetic art of Akiko Yosano:

"The white iris
And the purple iris
Grow side by side in the pond,
Yet never open their hearts
To each other."

What a picture of intense self-living that paints!
And this:

"My old self
Whispers from behind me:
'There is danger ahead!'
My young self cries:
'On! On!'"

Poet's History Romantic

The romantic personal history of Akiko Yanagiwara, the "White Lotus," who is probably the most-talked-of woman in Japan today, adds special interest to her verse. She is the leader of advanced feminist thought in her country. Her writings reveal that she has an acute and original mind and considerable poetic ability. She is somewhat a philosopher as well, as this gem of a poem will portray:

"Heaven and earth,
Cloud and water,
Life and death:
There is neither end nor beginning—
That is all I feel sure of."

The true isolation of the human heart is told in these five exquisite lines:

"When you are gone
I am lonely for you.
When you are here
I am lonely with you.
My heart is pursued by loneliness."

The poems of Baroness Takeko Kujo have won high praise from critics of Japanese poetry. After an early marriage to Baron Kujo the baron remained away from her for ten years in England. During this long period of her husband's absence the baroness poured forth in a series of poems the fears, doubts and longings of her heart. True to the ideals of her aristocratic ancestry, she did not waver from the course of strict fidelity and her poems reflect her strong sense of loyalty.

Misery Is Sketched

Her misery is sketched unforgettably in these three lines:

"To think that from opposite ends of the earth
We two are looking at the selfsame moon!
How helpless mortals are!

The wife's longing for a home like that enjoyed by other women is told in another trio of lines:

"Out in the bright spring weather
The other women play with their children.
I pick wild flowers alone."

There is a note of hope struck here and there in the poems selected for inclusion in the chapbook. For instance, this one:

"Though you are not here,
I feel dawn breaking in my chamber
Because a pink rose blooms."

It may seem a far cry from these melodious voices of the Orient to pick up the next book, "Chosen Poems," by Henry Van Dyke (Charles Scribners' Sons, New York). But poetry is a universal spirit and it knows not time, race or creed or manner of being.

In this book is the garnered treasure of 40 years observation of the glories of natural things; the singing of birds, the beauties of woods and streams, mountains and sky, of stress and storm and sunshine and shadow all wrought by the magic of this bard into poems which assuredly will live.

Glancing through the pages one old favorite after another greet the eager eyes of the reader. That is one of the great values of a collection such as this. One may peruse it with certainty, knowing that sooner or later an old friend will be greeted whose lines one may claim through memory as his own.

Tribute to Dr. Van Dyke's spiritual ancestors, the Covenanters of Scotland, is paid in that lovely poem, "Roslin and Hawthornden," written while he was in Edinburgh in 1877. Speaking of the glen at Hawthornden, formerly the scene of Covenant gatherings, he said:

"Within the temple of this wood
The martyrs of the covenant stood,
And rolled the psalm, and poured the prayer,
From Nature's solemn altar-stair."

Poems of Out of Doors

The lover of the out-of-doors will also revel in the charming lines of "Shasta Jim" while the longer poem to "The Grand Canyon" abounds with poetic beauties.

There is more than a hint of immortality in some of Dr. Van Dyke's verse. Mankind will cherish for many generations to come such intrepid verse as this sonnet to Robert Browning:

"How blind the toil that burrows like the mole,
In winding graveyard pathways underground,
For Browning's lineage! What if men have found
Poor footmen or rich merchants on the roll
Of his forbears? Did they beget his soul?
Nay, for he came of ancestry renowned
Through all the world,—the poets laurel-crowned
With wreaths from which the autumn takes no toll.

"The blazons on his coat-of-arms are these:
The flaming sign of Shelley's heart on fire,
The golden globe of Shakespeare's human stage,
The staff and scrip of Chaucer's pilgrimage,
The rose of Dante's deep, divine desire,
The tragic mask of wise Euripides."

And was there ever a happier toast than that written at The Hague in September, 1916, to "The Name of France."

"Give us a name to move the heart
With the strength that noble griefs impart,
A name that speaks of the blood outpoured
To save mankind from the sway of the sword,—
A name that calls on the world to share
In the burden of sacrificial strife
When the cause at stake is the world's free life
And the rule of the people everywhere—
A name like a vow, a name like a prayer.
I give you France!"

The charm of nonsense is one of the distinguishing features of an adorable child's book, "The Four Winds," by Edith Ballinger Price (Frederick A. Stokes Co., New York), which contains poetry of a high order. These poems were made by the author from the days of adolescence to the present time as Christmas gifts for her mother. The verses for each year were always hand-lettered and illustrated by the author and bound by herself into the Christmas book.

Any child should be proud to possess this book on Christmas Day. Its poems are strung together on delicate threads of romance, imagination and fashioned of elusive things like stars, roses, day dreams and far visions. E. E. P.

CHILD POEMS THAT ADULTS LIKE TO READ

Since Robert Louis Stevenson wrote his "Child's Garden of Verses" there has been an increasing demand among adults for verse outwardly intended for the delight of the child but in reality possessed of the magic of entertaining the adult. A. A. Milne struck the needed note with clarity in "When We Were Very Young," and a slim little volume from his versatile pen, "Now We Are Six," from the presses of E. P. Dutton & Co., New York, promises new joys in this field of "adult juvenilia," if we may be permitted the use of such a contradiction in terms.

Now We Are Six! Goodness, dear folk, have you ever forgotten that magic day! Five was very very old, of course, but six. That represented a new age. We were growing up at last. No longer could anyone call us "babies" with any degree of impunity. Six, it might be mentioned in passing, was the age of realization of the potentialities of our common humanity.

Of course, there is nonsense in the volume. What would life be to a child of six without the element of nonsense? Bubbling, joyous, unmeaning nonsense and laughter as light and free as a sunbeam itself. But even as the prattle of fools may teach wisdom to the sages, so the nonsense of a child has healing in its merriment for the adult who hears it.

The book opens with an adorable little verse called "Solitude."

It is brim full of philosophy. Read it and judge for yourself.

SOLITUDE.

I have a house where I go
When there's too many people
I have a house where I go
Where no one can be;
I have a house where I go
Where nobody ever says "No;"
Where no one says anything—so
There is no one but me.

Then how excellent is this terse description of a child's dream of himself in different roles.

BUSY.

I think I am a Muffin Man. I haven't got a bell,
I haven't got the muffin things that muffin people sell.

Perhaps I am a Postman. No, I think I am a Tram.
I'm feeling rather funny and I don't know what I am.

There is a world of philosophy packed into the few lines which concludes the book and is properly entitled:

THE END.

When I was One
I had just begun.

When I was Two,
I was nearly new.

When I was Three,
It was hardly Me.

When I was Four,
I was not much more.

When I was Five
I was just alive.
But now I am Six, I'm as clever as clever.
So I think I'll be six now for ever and ever.

"Now We Are Six" has cures for the woes of the world.

The other volume of poetry on the reviewer's desk is by another American poet of considerable renown. It is "Wildwood Fables," by Arthur Guiterman, (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York).

Mr. Guiterman has been hailed as the new Aesop and his verses team with animals, birds and fishes, all teaching their lore of forest and stream to humanity. The poet has managed to portray as well the homely "wisdom of American life," the wisdom which flowered in Abraham Lincoln, Walt Whitman and John Hay.

Homely parables of industry, thrift and kindliness are taught in these poems and they will be appreciated by young and old.

One of the real virtues of Mr. Guiterman's poems is that they can be easily read about. This is not true of all poetry, and yet when it is not true one of the essentials of the art have been disregarded.

Lovers of the canine will adore the sentiment contained in these few lines.

DOGS.

The wolfhound leaping like a leopard,
Uncounted types of bull and shepherd,
Chow, Scotty, Airedale, grave and gay,
And St. Bernard have had their day.

Each dog, alas of all alases!
But wags a tail and swiftly passes,
While we that loved him sigh, "Oh, Dear!
Where are the dogs of yesteryear?"

In the Christmas list "Wildwood Fables" deserves a prominent place.—E. E. P.

RADIO PENETRATES ROCK OR EARTH, TEST IN MINE INDICATES

Experimenter for Government Hears Denver Concert From 550 Feet Underground.

MUSIC 50 MILES AWAY FROM METAL WORKINGS

Superheterodyne Set With 9 Electron Tubes Used by Dr. Eve.

Tests conducted by the United States Bureau of Mines, Department of Commerce, in a Colorado metal mine indicate strongly that radio waves will penetrate 500 feet or more of rock strata. These preliminary experiments were observed by Dr. A. S. Eve, director of the Department of Physics, McGill University, Montreal, Canada, who is conducting a study for the Bureau of Mines of the possibilities of various methods of geophysical prospecting for the location of underground mineral deposits.

The expreiment participated in by Dr. Eve were conducted with a superheterodyne set with nine electron tubes in the Caribou mine of the American Mining & Prospecting Co., at Caribou, Colo. The first test was held at a depth of 220 feet, where, by means of a loop, a strong and clear reception was obtained of a musical concert given at Denver, 50 miles distant. The evidence pointed strongly to the conclusion that this clear reception was due to the penetration by the radio waves of the solid rock strata, although there was a remote possibility that the reception was obtained through shafts and crosscuts, toward which, however, the loop did not point. The nearest metal conductors, iron rails, were 66 feet away.

Experiments Under Surface.

The next series of experiments was conducted at a depth of 550 feet, when "mushy" reception was obtained from Denver. This type of reception was, however, as good as could be obtained above ground at the time of making the test, the night being unfavorable for general radio reception. This series of tests was conducted at the end of a cross-cut reached with many turns, and 200 feet from the main shaft. A pipe came down the shaft and followed the tunnel up to 80 feet from the point of observation.

In previous experiments conducted by the Bureau of Mines at its experimental mine near Pittsburgh, Pa., it was at first concluded that radiation and induction would penetrate rock for considerable depths. Subsequent investigations have shown that in every case the transference of radiation was by some conductors in the mine, electric wires, pipes or rails, all of which abound in modern mines.

It is possible that at Caribou the radio waves excited the conductors in the shaft, and these in turn excited rails and pipes, which brought the radiation to within 70 feet of the experimenters, and that the strong amplification of the radio apparatus enabled the radiation to bridge the gap. This Dr. Eve considers, is improbable, but not impossible.

Passes Through Rock.

On the other hand, he was impressed with the fact that the loop did not point toward neighboring conductors or along the tunnels, but it did point at both levels within a few degrees of the source at Denver. The evidence is strong, but not absolutely conclusive, that wireless waves will penetrate 500 feet of rock to an extent which enables them to be received with powerful amplification. It is desirable that these investigations should be followed by further research work on the subject.

The experiments conducted at the Caribou Mine tend to confirm the view that radiation passes through rock with, of course, much attenuation. It is known that radio signals will just penetrate through a good conductor like sea water to a maximum depth of about 50 or 60 feet, and there is no reason why radiation should not penetrate to ten times that distance through a poor conductor like dry rock.

It is felt that further investigations should include a comparison of the penetration of radio waves from a distance exceeding many wave lengths, and of radio waves generated at a distance less than a wave length.

Numbers to Replace Names of Cottages

Cleethorpes, England, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Consternation reigns among the sentimental residents of this Lancashire seaside resort. Postoffice authorities say that hereafter all houses must have a number.

Sunnyside, Ivy Cottage, Dove Cote, Elm Cottage and all the rest of the time-honored names of houses are to be replaced, and a fine of 40 shillings will be imposed on all householders who fail to comply.

RADIO CROSS TALK

Maj. H. H. Frost, New York (returning from abroad): I must confess that the French radio set is a mystery to me. There seems to be no agreed-upon method of control devices as we know them and each set seems to be different from all other sets.

George F. McClelland, vice president, National Broadcasting Co.: The sixteen-hour day in broadcasting, I believe, is already on the horizon.

H. A. Bellows, Federal Radio Commission: The commercial broadcaster falls down in educational broadcasting because he does not get the university point of view. The university broadcaster falls down because he does not get the commercial broadcaster's viewpoint. Therefore the best educational programs will be those put on by commercial stations, given by college men, but always under the guidance of the director of the station.

Wallace H. White, jr., Maine, coauthor of the 1927 radio law: I shall reach no decision about radio legislation in this coming Congress until I have given more study to the developments of the last few months than I have been able to.

R. H. Langley, of the Crosley Radio Co.: I am convinced that the radio receiver of the future must be marked by some method which will directly indicate the positions of the broadcast stations themselves, with the markings so arranged as to identify the stations. Also, of course, the receiver of the future will have only one station selector.

H. R. Smalley, of the soil improvement committee of the National Fertilizer Association: The use of radio on a million and a quarter farms represents a new force that is adding to the social and economic development of agriculture.

ATWATER KENT ARTISTS TONIGHT

Nina Morgana, soprano, right, and Mary Chainey, violinist, who will be heard in joint recital during the Atwater Kent Hour from WRC tonight. Miss Morgana is a member of the Metropolitan Opera Company, while Miss Chainey is being hailed as a genius.

HOOVER MAY GUIDE COOLIDGE IN NAMING DILLON'S SUCCESSOR

Secretary Had Great Deal to Do in Selection of Late Radio Commissioner.

The belief is expressed that President Coolidge will be guided largely by the advice of Secretary Hoover in the appointment of a successor to the late Col. John F. Dillon, as Federal Radio Commissioner from the Pacific Coast zone. Also the fact that Col. Dillon has been incapacitated almost from the time he was appointed last March and the West has thus been having only such attention as the other overburdened commissioners could give it, there is an impression that Coolidge is likely to make a recess appointment and at an early date.

Col. Dillon's successor will, according to the law, have to be an actual resident of the zone he represents, which roughly are the West Coast and Rocky Mountain States; must be a Republican, and his term will expire March 1, 1929.

The fact that Secretary Hoover himself hails from California, that he has for years been an adviser to the President in radio matters, and that he was generally credited with having recommended the appointment of Col. Dillon to Coolidge are the reasons generally advanced that the Secretary of Commerce will be sought as an adviser in the pending appointment.

Pioneer Radio Adviser.

Although doomed from the start there is no question but that Col. Dillon sacrificed years of his life in the physical exertion he made during the first feverish months of the commission's existence. Due to the fact that he was one of the pioneer radio supervisors of the country and probably knew more about radio administration than any man of the commission, a heavy burden fell upon his shoulders. His advice and assistance in building the foundation of the present radio policy was invaluable.

For a considerable time after he was really no longer able to carry on his work he continued to visit his desk, sometimes being able to remain only for an hour or so. Finally, as his condition grew worse, he was taken to his old home in San Francisco, where he died last Sunday.

Lloyd Georges Quit Old Home in Chelsea

London, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd George have given up their famous house in Cheyne Walk, Chelsea, and have taken Derwent Lodge in Addison Road, near Kensington.

The mansion stands in grounds of two acres and was the home of Addison, the great essayist, and his wife, the Countess of Warwick. Dedwent Lodge is near the residences of past masters of art and literature, Lord Leighton, Watts, Marcus Stone, Holman Hunt and Sir Tuke Fildes.

Newspapers announce that the popular feature of the new residence will be the chicken run, where hundreds of fowls can be kept.

The Welsh politician is not likely to devote much time to poultry farming, however, for when not actively engaged in preparing his political "comeback" he is busy writing art and literary criticisms.

Newsboys Trusted To Make Own Change

Wichita, Kans., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Billy Stice, cigar store proprietor, has a lot of faith in newsboys. Each morning he places pennies in a tin cup from which the newsies make their own change.

There was a shortage of 13 cents at the end of the first day, but the newsies made it up, and since then the "bank" has been checking almost every day.

INSULL INTERESTS BUILDING $500,000 PLANT FOR CHICAGO

Secretary Reveals Intention Is to Ask Permit to Use 50,000 Watts.

That the Insull interests are erecting a station in Chicago which is expected to be one of the finest and most powerful in the Middle West was brought out in connection with a public hearing which was granted recently by the Federal Radio Commission to Station WJBL, of Decatur, Ill. It is said the initial investment will be upward of $500,000 and that the plant will cover 28 acres.

The Decatur station had asked to have its power increased from 250 to 10,000 watts and its frequency changed from 1,410 kilocycles (212.6 meters) to 1,050 kilocycles (285.5 meters). Stations WENR and WBCN, owned by the Great Lakes Broadcasting Co., comprising the Chicago Commonwealth Edison Co. and other Insull utilities, and which are very near the same wave length sought by their Decatur neighbors, protested against the change in frequency and power, giving as their reason the fact that a new Chicago station was being built which would ultimately combine the two now in service and would seek permission to broadcast on a power of 50,000 watts.

Would Use 50,000 Watts.

Commissioner H. A. Bellows, in charge of that zone, said the new station in the beginning would probably be licensed to use 5,000 watts until the effect of high power upon the other Chicago stations by the additional station was determined. John Evers, jr., secretary of the Commonwealth Edison Co., and Morgan Eastman, who appeared before the Radio Commission, made it evident, however, that 50,000 watts power would be sought ultimately and, if so, the Chicago Insull station will eventually prove a rival of the powerful Eastern stations—WGY, Schenectady; KDKA, Pittsburgh, and the new Bellmore, Long Island, transmitter of WEAF, all of which are 50,000 watts.

The entire enterprise is said to have been inspired by the thing which interested Samuel Insull in radio—the idea of putting the Chicago Civic Opera Company on the air. It is then reasonable to suppose that one of the purposes of the great new station will be to broadcast grand opera, and probably on a scale heretofore never attempted in this country.

Behind European Nations.

Although America is ahead of most other nations in entertainment broadcasting, several have anticipated this country in the broadcasting of grand opera, notably in Europe and South America. Performances of grand opera have occasionally been broadcast in the United States, but the prediction is made if the Chicago Opera Company is put on the air in such an elaborate manner the Metropolitan Opera Company in New York may follow suit.

The new Chicago station is expected to begin operation April 1, 1928.

Recreation Called Foe of Delinquency

Memphis, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Juvenile delinquency could be cut 75 per cent and health and good citizenship could be vastly improved in any community which would provide itself with the right kind of recreation facilities and leadership. Dr. John A. Lapp, of Chicago, widely known social worker, told the Playground and Recreation Association:

"If community reduces its juvenile delinquency, it will almost proportionately reduce its adult delinquency. Recreation is a promoter of morality. Recreation teaches honesty. If the public should ever reach a point where it would insist upon public honesty to the same degree that it now insists upon honesty in sports, we would have a pure and undefiled government."

QSO Local Radio Club and Amateur News

Conducted in Cooperation With the Washington Radio Club.

Recently the Washington Radio Club enjoyed a most interesting and instructive talk given by 8CMP, Dr. E. C. Woodruff, of State College, Pa.

Dr. Woodruff mentioned several different topics, but perhaps the greater portion of his discussion concerned a piece of radio apparatus which he held in his hand. The apparatus was really a combination, which consisted of an oscillator and a wave meter mounted on the inside of an aluminum case. The aluminum case contained batteries and every necessity for operation, with the exception of a pair of phones.

Inductances were wound on two UX tube bases, but the capacity for coupling the oscillator to the wave meter was only two short lengths of wire placed at right angles to each other and then tied together. The extreme accuracy of the instrument permitted measurements on a scale of 24 divisions to one meter. A Weston milliameter was mounted in the lid of the aluminum case, which made its proper contact to the circuit when the lid was properly closed. The dials, filament switch and rheostat control were each mounted through the front of the case. Even with such arrangement no body capacity effects have been obtained. Dr. Woodruff made a well shielded job of it, very neatly done, but what is more, the apparatus was so compact and so light that it could be held in one hand. The oscillator circuit employed a UX-199 tube.

The many foreign men have been pretty well tied up in the international radio conference. A special effort will be made by the club to obtain a man well qualified to talk on some radio subject at the next meeting on October 22. The speaker will be an American, and any of the foreign delegates who are interested will undoubtedly be present to hear him.

Among the many visitors at the last meeting was 3EH, Harry W. Densham, of Collingswood, N. J., and the Rev. Joseph M. Sahagaki, of Osaka, Japan.

Rev. Sahagaki, who is now a student at the Theological Seminary at Alexandria, Va., is also a former entertainer of several broadcast stations in Japan. He said that he had broadcast over Japanese radio stations JOBK, JOAK, JOCK and JODK. These stations are located in Osaka, Tokyo, Nagoya and Seoul (Korea), respectively. One of his features of radio entertaining was the telling of stories to the Japanese children.

RADIO CONFERENCE TALKS OF MARCONI, IN CITY FOR SESSION

Inventor Is Representative of Wireless Company Bearing His Name.

WEDNESDAY MEETING IS TO BRING BALLOTING

Committees Are to Continue Their Preparatory Work Until That Day.

Notwithstanding the fact that he comes as a commercial representative rather than a governmental delegate, the arrival in this country from Italy of Guglielmo Marconi, the inventor of radio, was the week's outstanding topic of conversation in the international radiotelegraph conference now in session here. Senator Marconi is here as the president of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Co., Ltd.

Accompanying him is Signora Marconi, to whom he was recently married, the former Countess Maria Christina Bezzi Scali. The length of their stay in the United States is indefinite.

On this trip as never before, has Marconi, who has not visited here for a number of years, seen undreamed of developments of radio, on all sides. Even more interesting perhaps is the fact that Marconi, an Italian, virtually the father of radio as we know it now, finds another country than his own—the United States—leading the world in the great modern science which he himself nurtured from its infancy.

Only Single Letter First.

Now a man 53 years old, he was but 27 years old when he figuratively succeeded in getting the earth by its ears by spanning the Atlantic Ocean by wireless. True, his first experiments consisted in sending only one letter "S" from St. Johns Newfoundland, to Poldhu, in Southwest England, but he proved that he was correct in principle and that the rest was but a matter of experimental development.

Before that Marconi had attracted considerable international attention by his experiments in communicating short distances, but when he extended this over the ocean his achievement was hailed as great a feat then as Lindbergh's airplane flight in our day.

And now he has the experience probably no other living man has had by coming to the international radio conference which might not be in session today had it not been for his pioneering efforts.

Settles Down to Business.

In the meantime, the conference at Washington has settled down to hard work. There will not be another plenary or open session until Wednesday, at which the first official voting may be done, and until then the grinding of the preparatory grist is being done in committee.

An interesting thought contributed during the past week was by Col. Manton Davis, counsel of the Radio Corporation of America, was suggested to the general regulations committee that possibly the future of telegraphic transmitting might resolve itself into photographic reproduction rather than the sending of dots and dashes.

"I do not know how long it will be, but all of you gentlemen doubtless realize that at some time in the future the transmission of messages by radio will not be by dots and dashes but will be by the facsimile reproduction of the message as it was originally written," Col. Davis declared.

"You gentlemen know how difficult it is for governments to get together. There must be much delay when top haps, morning coats and brass bands foregather from the ends of the earth before governments can begin formal discussions. If radio regulations go into details then months or possibly years would go by before rules no longer applicable to the art could be repealed. It is our belief that operating procedure in this changing art should be as quickly changeable as the art can change."

NOTES OF THE D. A. R.

The Emily Nelson Chapter met October 4 at the home of Mrs. Charles F. Taylor. Mrs. W. W. Marsh and Dr. Sibley Hill were assisting hostesses.

Mrs. David D. Caldwell, chairman of the Constitution Hall finance committee, and Mrs. George W. Eastment, chairman of the student loan fund committee, reported on the work of their committees. Miss Kathryn Latimer gave a musical program.

The National Society of the Children of the American Revolution held its first board meeting of the season on Thursday morning in Memorial Continental Hall, the national president, Mrs. Josiah Van Orsdel, presiding. The meeting was called to order by Mrs. E. S. W. Howard, national vice president.

Those present were Mrs. Van Orsdel, Mrs. Howard, Mrs. Frank S. Ray, national recording secretary; Mrs. Theodore Clay Uhler, national organizing secretary; Mrs. Thaddeus M. Jones, national treasurer; Mrs. John A. Maxwell, national registrar, Mrs. John M. Kerr, national historian; Mrs. Percy M. Bailey, national chaplain, and Miss Dorinda Rogers, Mrs. Georgia Knox Berry, Mrs. Rose Mulcare, Mrs. Carl H. Giroux, national vice presidents.

The national president has recently returned from Indiana, where she attended the annual conference of the Children of the American Revolution and the Daughters of the American Revolution held at Muncie. She was also present at a banquet given by the State Officers Club of the Daughters of the American Revolution. During the summer Mrs. Van Orsdel has visited societies in Wyoming, and in Chicago as a guest of Miss Edith Collum, State director of Illinois, she conferred with a number of the presidents of societies in the State. Much interest in the work of the society is reported throughout the country, and the prospect for a large increase in membership is excellent.

The organization of ten new societies was reported, and 674 additional applicants were admitted to membership.

American Eagle Chapter held its first fall meeting Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. H. W. Dowling, with Mrs. Dowling, Mrs. Patterson Bayne and Mrs. Ninian Beall hostesses. The regent, Mrs. Dowling, presided.

The State vice regent, Mrs. David D. Caldwell, was the honor guest, and gave a talk on "Constitution Hall and Chapter House."

Three new members were accepted by the chapter: Miss Anna Hazel Brearley, Philadelphia; Miss Betty Corning and Miss Eire Mooney, sponsored, respectively, by Mrs. Augustus Knight, Mrs. Edwin J. Ryan and Mrs. James M. Mooney.

Dolly Madison Chapter held the first meeting of the season at the home of the regent, Mrs. Ralph P. Barnard. Instead of a program, the custom of previous years was followed and each member responded to the roll call with a brief account of her summer activities. A social hour followed.

The Judge Lynn Chapter held its October meeting Tuesday evening in the Battery Park Clubhouse. Mrs. C. C. Haig, the hostess, was assisted by Miss Laura Silsby, Mrs. W. H. Wagner and Mrs. H. H. Elliott. The regent, Mrs. Charles S. Schermerhorn, presided. The minutes were read by Mrs. Wagner, recording secretary pro tem. Reports were given by the officers and committee chairmen. The D. A. R. Student Loan Fund work was explained by Miss Louise Carman. Miss Carman, Mrs. Schermerhorn, Mrs. Hamberger and Miss Price were patronesses at the student loan luncheon and sale on October 8 in the Washington Hotel.

Those appointed to State committees are: Americanism, Mrs. W. H. Wagner; Constitution Hall, Mrs. H. B. Gauss, who is also treasurer of the Chapter House Corporation; conservation, Miss Ruth Smith; entertainment and magazine, Mrs. H. H. Elliott; library and national defense, Mrs. W. F. Hamberger; legislative, Miss Bettie Larimore; manual for immigrants, Miss Asha L. Wells; patriotic education, Mrs. J. P. Cromwell. Mrs. C. C. Haig is chairman of the State committee, Sons and Daughters of the Republic.

Mrs. Robbins, chairman of the chapter press committee, made a request of the members to send clippings of the chapter meetings to out-of-town members.

Final plans for the card party to be held in the Mayflower October 29 at 2 p. m., for the benefit of the Patriotic Education Fund, were made. This is the only benefit affair to be given this year. The committee in charge of arrangements are: Chairman, Mrs. H. B. Gauss; vice chairman, Miss Virginia Price; Mrs. W. F. Hamberger, who has charge of the candy table; Mrs. S. B. Hardwick, Mrs. J. Milton Jester, Mrs. Amos T. Pagter, Miss Laura Silsby, Miss Ruth Smith, Mrs. Enoch J. Vann and Miss Asha L. Wells.

R. C. White, First Assistant Secretary of Labor, spoke on Immigration and Ellis Island. Mrs. Edith Hoffman Jones, soprano, and Willard Salem Haynie, barytone, furnished a vocal program. Mrs. Jewell Downs was the accompanist.

The Frances Scott Chapter met on October 4 at the home of Mrs. Frank Bell, 3909 Huntington street, Chevy Chase. The regent, Mrs. Warren E. Emley, presided. Mrs. Emley presented a large silk flag to the chapter in honor of her mother, Mrs. Amos O. White, of Freemont, Mich., the only honorary member. The flag was consigned to the care and keeping of Mrs. Garges, the historian.

The pledges made for Constitution Hall and for the purchase of chairs were reviewed. An additional donation of $5 was made by Mrs. Dorothy Garges McGraw.

A budget plan was accepted as presented by the regent. Mrs. E. P. Andrews, of the committee for national defense, gave an account of her investigations of the information furnished by the national defense headquarters in Continental Hall, of the activities of the communists. She called attention to the danger of communist activities breaking down national institutions.

Mrs. Theodore Uhler read an editorial printed in the National Republic that reviewed the adoption of the Federal Constitution. The regent outlined the project of subscribing for a chair in Constitution Hall as a testimonial from the chapter of the deep regard felt for Mrs. Mary Hetzel Garges. It was approved and the motion for the purchase was adopted. It was also reported that Mrs. Percy L. Daniel and her daughters, Mrs. Uhler and Miss Corinne Daniel, have made subscriptions for this purpose.

The chairman of the ways and means committee, Mrs. E. F. Cassel, reported that a card party will be held in the Mayflower Hotel November 11.

The work and needs of the student loan fund committee were explained by Mrs. Charles Bright, chapter chairman.

The Katherine Montgomery Chapter met Tuesday at the residence of Mrs. Frank A. Evarts. The regent, Mrs. M. Bell, presided. After the preliminary opening, the reports of the officers and committee chairmen were given and a program outlined for the winter. Mrs. Charles W. Fitts, corresponding secretary, reported having represented the regent at the legislative caucus. Mrs. Hill, historian, gave a paper on the subject of "Our Nation's Bells."

On September 13 the members were entertained by Mrs. Frank Smith, chaplain of the chapter, at Washington Grove.

The next meeting, November 8, will be held at the residence of Mrs. Nancy D. North, 1832 Sixteenth street northwest, at which time Mrs. W. W. Husband, chairman of the committee on Americanism, will speak.

The Army and Navy Society of the District of Columbia Children of the American Revolution Society will hold its second meeting in the Willard Hotel, Saturday, at 2:30 p. m. The president, Mrs. Walter A. Bloedorn, wife of Commander W. A. Bloedorn, U. S. N., will preside.

The meeting will be opened by an invocation by the Rev. J. H. Mier. "The Salute to the Flag" and "America's Creed" by the registrar, Master William Harding Carter 2d. "America" will be played on the violin by the junior president, Helen May Bloedorn, accompanied on the piano by Helen Christine Merritt. The records show 61 new members. A check was sent to the Wakefield National Memorial Association to help preserve the birthplace of Gen. George Washington.

Dr. Mier and Dr. Christiani will give short talks to the assembly. "Forty-eight Stars," composed and dedicated to the Army and Navy Society by Helen May Bloedorn, will be played by the juvenile orchestra. "Mlle. Modiste," a toe ballet, by Allene Appich; a marionette play, written by Theo Tiller, jr., will add to the program. The adult associate members are Mrs. Curtis D. Wilbur, Mrs. John A. Lejeune, Mrs. Eli A. Helmick, Miss Alice D. Goddard, Mrs. John Allen Dougherty, Miss Boggs, Miss Helen E. Stout and Mrs. Lillian Cole Bethel.

The junior branch of the Gov. Thomas Welles Society, Children of the American Revolution, held its opening meeting for the season, in Memorial Continental Hall on Tuesday. The vice president, Adelaide Beard, presided. Josephine Davis, the secretary, read the registrar's report, which recorded the names of four infants enrolled by Abigail Hartman Rice Chapter.

Blanche Lee Lyddane was appointed registrar and Ben Carroll Franklin the chaplain. Prizes were offered for a membership campaign, and vacation tales were told by all present.

The Senior Society met at the home of Miss Cary Aal on Klingle road. Miss Helen Carroll was in charge and the report of the registrar showed that during the vacation period the following members were transferred to the Sons of the American Revolution and Daughters of the American Revolution by the president, Mrs. Clayton E. Emig: Elizabeth Ward, Blanche Lee, Marion Wells, Yvonne Rapeer, Virginia Richards, Dorothy Smith, Marie Rice, Margaret Henderson, Miriam Prescott, Elizabeth White, Mae Harris Clarke and William Wilkerson.

A sketch of historic "Pierce Mill" was read by Audrey Belt. Those present gave impressions of Lindbergh. A social hour followed.

Girls Friendly Society

Mrs. Alexander S. Steuart, diocesan head of the candidates' department, will have a meeting of all candidates, associates and their helpers on Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the parish hall of St. John's Church, Georgetown, Potomac and O streets northwest.

Monday evening the first of a series of "supper talks" was held at the meeting of the branch at Epiphany Church by Mrs. Stevens, of the Temple School, who spoke on "Business Opportunities for Girls." Tomorrow evening Miss Helen Barnhardt will be the speaker. The classes already organized in the branch are arts and crafts, Miss Frances Crown; personal religion, Mrs. W. E. Bolen, basketball, with Miss Gladys Mills as the coach, and "Creeds and Bible," Mr. Philip Davis.

Thirty-two children were present at the meeting of the candidates' class at the Church of Our Saviour, Brookland, on Friday afternoon, in charge of Mrs. W. E. Bolen. They are dressing dolls and making scrapbooks. Miss Ruth Bolen played the piano for the service and games.

Miss Fanita Clairmont is instructing the dramatic class in the branch at St. Stephen's Church. Miss Elsie Kelly is in charge of the probationers' class. Miss Alice H. Gerow is president of the branch, which had an attendance of 34 on Tuesday evening.

At a business meeting of the branch at St. Paul's Church, Rock Creek Parish, Tuesday, Miss Susie Singleton was elected secretary, Miss Ruth Miller assistant secretary, Miss Eleanora Miller treasurer, and Miss Edna Souder chairman of the entertainment committee for October. Miss Sadie Carlisle, branch president, is teaching a class in weaving worsted purses.

A meeting of the Washington National Center committee was held Friday at the home of Mrs. E. B. Meigs, diocesan president of the society, who is also on the committee. Those present were Miss Sarah Hopkins, of the diocese of Massachusetts, Miss Margaret Lukens, of the diocese of Pennsylvania, Mrs. Pfau, of the diocese of New York, Mrs. Slack, of Norfolk, Va., Miss Mary Neilson, of Philadelphia, Miss Julia J. Cunningham, of Baltimore, Md., and Miss Ethel Grimes, secretary of the committee of Washington, D. C.

At an election of officers held by the branch at St. John's Church, Georgetown, Miss Alice Copperthite was elected member chairman, Miss Helen Starke secretary and Miss Ruth Quick treasurer. Mrs. Alexander S. Steuart addressed the branch Tuesday evening on "The Girls Friendly Society in England and Italy." Mrs. Lloyd Smoot is in charge of the branch.

The branch at Nativity Chapel had a business meeting recently, and made plans for the winter's work. Mrs. Gillchrest is in charge of the candidates' class at Resurrection Chapel, and Miss Rosa Frye is in charge of the members.

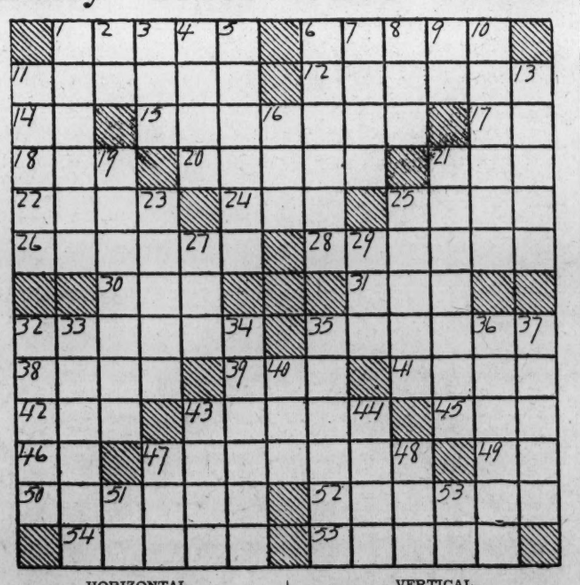

A meeting of the associates and helpers of the candidates' class at Epiphany Chapel was held on Saturday afternoon at the home of Miss Elizabeth Keyser. The class will meet tomorrow afternoon for the first time this fall.

Miss Ethel Grimes addressed the diocesan council of Virginia on Saturday in Clarendon, Va., on "The Washington National Center." Mrs. E. B. Meigs also spoke on "G. F. S. Ideals."

Wear Garters, Advice To College Students

The CRUSADER

BELLOWS DECLARES THAT HARDEST WORK OF BOARD IS ENDED

Sees Great Improvement in Radio Listening Conditions by March 15.

COMMISSIONER JUST BACK FROM A TOUR

Says Denver Stations Cause Interference That Must be Corrected.

By ROBERT D. HEINL.

On his return to the Capital after having made first-hand observations in a dozen or so cities covering a fairly wide range of the country, Commissioner H. A. Bellows declares that, although it may not now be apparent, the hardest part of the task of the Federal Radio Commission in clearing up listening conditions on the air is done, and that by March 15 a great improvement will be noted throughout the country.

Among the cities visited by Commissioner Bellows on his last trip were Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, Indianapolis, Chicago, Shenandoah, Iowa, Minneapolis, St. Paul and Denver.

"What has been accomplished by the commission thus far is not immediately evident," Commissioner Bellows said, "but in my opinion, by all odds the greater part of the job—the laying of the foundation—was done by the commission during its first three months.

"Furthermore, by next March, at the end of the year given us by Congress, and without any especially drastic changes, I believe we will have the situation pretty well cleaned up.

Reports Confidence in Commission.

"A reassuring thing in connection with our efforts was that in the cities I visited everybody seemed to feel complete confidence in the general methods th commission is pursuing.

"Here I might say, although I was convinced that our general plan of issuing temporary licenses was sound, after my trip and talking with broadcasters throughout the country I am more than ever sold on the idea of not freezing up the situation by issuing long time licenses.

"In Denver, we held a five-day hearing and, as has been the policy of the Radio Commission, gave everyone a chance to be heard. An unusual situation exists there. The one high powered station, KOA, is apparently located in the wrong place.

Denver Stations Cause Interference.

"This station is situated four miles from the business center of the city, in a district which is rapidly becoming a residential zone, and, of course, blankets the immediate vicinity.

"In addition to KOA, there are six smaller stations, all of which would like good wavelengths and higher power.

"Three of them are located in the center of Denver, and not only interfere with one another, but reradiate signals from each other's antenna. Likewise, these Denver stations interfere with reception from stations outside of the city.

"As a rule, dx is not considered as important as local reception, but, inasmuch as Denver and Salt Lake City are practically the only two big cities that have no access to chain programs, they are dependent upon long distance reception for outside entertainment.

Will Have to Change Wavelengths.

"The reason they are isolated is because of the almost prohibitive wire tolls. From Omaha to the Atlantic coast there is hardly a city more than a couple of hundred miles from a chain station. And the communities on the Pacific coast are taken care of by chains touching San Francisco, Los Angeles and other cities.

"However, Denver and Salt Lake City are right in between. Therefore, in addition to deciding if the stations may have higher power, it will be necessary to clear out some of those interfering Denver wavelengths so that that city, for variety may get some outside entertainment and talent. For instance, there is a Pacific coast station very popular with Denver listeners, but which they are deprived of hearing because it is only separated by 10 kilocycles from the frequency of a Denver station.

"I believe it perfectly possible by not very drastic changes to clear up the reception conditions for the listening public. Things that need to be done can be done in the present set-up with no change of policy.

Looking Over Stations.

"Our course of action may not make some of the less valuable broadcasters particularly happy, but, from the standpoint of public benefit, it is perfectly obvious that we have got the basis upon which the necessary changes can be made fairly easily. The stations which are not rendering any great or definite service to their communities will have to share time to clear the way for the fellows who are doing a good job.

"After this present series of hearings, we are again going out into the field to see what conditions are at first hand. By a month or so hence, we will be back with first-hand information upon which to base necessary changes.

"And finally, may I say a word as to the value of personal visits to stations and various parts of the country by the members of the Radio Commission? For instance, here is a station that writes a lot of letters to us, on imposing stationery, and looks like a million dollars. However, when we go out and take a look at their plant we find their equipment is hay wire, in addition to the fact they don't know how to run their studios.

"We give them a hearing, and they can't produce a single witness that they are really doing anybody any good except themselves.

"After a first-hand investigation of a case like that, we come back to Washington ready to say that, although such a fellow as that looks O. K. on paper, he is not entitled to special consideration."

WOMAN INTRODUCES COOLIDGE CORRECTLY

One of the few women who have introduced the President over the air, Miss Mabel T. Boardman, at the American Red Cross convention in Washington, proved that she was also one of the very rare presiding chairmen who knew how to introduce the President of the United States correctly.

Introducing the Chief Executive of the Nation to an audience is an honor that comes to relatively few persons, and in their zeal to do justice to the occasion they usually overshoot the mark, not only by trying to introduce some one every one already knows, but by talking too long.

It remained, however, for Miss Boardman to do it admirably and in exactly eleven words. Her introduction of Mr. Coolidge was: "Delegates of the Red Cross and members, I present the President."

SOVIET STATIONS USING AMERICAN EQUIPMENT

Radio Plants Being Converted to Vacuum-Tube Style of Operation.

Although much mystery still exists as to the extent and power of the Russian stations generally, it is understood information has come to the Army Signal Corps that the radio net maintained in Siberia by the Russian Soviet government is being modernized with the latest American equipment. For many years this network has carried on practically all the official and commercial communication in Siberia with radio apparatus of the spark-gap type. Now the stations are undergoing conversion to vacuum tube operation, with promise of greatly increased sending range and more satisfactory technical performance.

The first station affected by the change is Khabarovsk, which is one of a chain of about a dozen stations in eastern Siberia. This city has 40,000 inhabitants and is one of the strategic outposts of Russia. It is located on the trans-Siberian railroad, only a few miles north of the Manchurian border, 200 miles inland from the Pacific Ocean.

The apparatus was purchased by the Amtorg Trading Co., agents for the Soviet government, from the Westinghouse International Co. The order was placed with the Radio Corporation of America and the equipment manufactured, assembled and tested in the East Pittsburgh works of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. It was shipped last October and was received in Khabarovsk in March.

Although the most important part of the new apparatus for Khabarovsk is the short wave telegraph transmitter, provision also has been made for the development of broadcasting. Modulating equipment for voice and music will be furnished so that the set may be used as a short-wave broadcast transmitter.

Westinghouse built everything for the station except the building and the motor. The order comprised antenna, audio amplifier from microphone to modulator, motor generator set for filament current, switchboards and control panels, and automatic water relays for shutting off the power in case of accident to the cooling water supply system, in addition to the short-wave transmitter itself.

On the Air Today

ANOTHER star of the Metropolitan Opera Company joins the galaxy of Atwater Kent artists Sunday night, when Nina Morgana, soprano, broadcasts for the first time in this series of Sunday night concerts.

Mme. Morgana will be assisted on this occasion by Mary Chainey, the young Idaho violinist, who was hailed with great promise at her New York debut last year. The joint recital will be broadcast over the regular networth of 23 stations at 9:15 o'clock.

Nina Morgana is an American, of Italian parentage. Born in Buffalo, she received her education under the Gray Nuns of D'Youville College, and was hailed as the "Baby Patti" when, but 6 years old, she sang at the Pan-American Exposition.

Singing before Caruso, in 1908, the celebrated tenor advised her going to Milan, where for four years she studied under the tutelage of the famous Teresa Arkel. She made her debut in Alessandria, Italy, as Amina, in "La Sonnambula," with such success that she was engaged to sing at the famous LaScala Opera House.

During her six years with the Metropolitan Opera Company, and previously, she toured the country in recital with Caruso and the New York Symphony, with Titta Ruffo, Pasquale Amato, Giovanni Martinelli, Efrem Zimbalist, and others.

Mary Chainey, the young violinist of the hour, is a native of Couer de Alene, where she received her first musical training from the nuns at St. Mary's Convent. She, too, made her first public appearance at the age of 6, singing in a cantata.

The program follows:

"Caro Nome," from "Rigoletto" (Verdi), Nina Morgana and accompanist; Andante (Wieniawski), "Tango" (Albeniz-Elman), "Dance Negre" (Scott), Mary Chainey and accompanist; "Pierrot" (Watts), "The Sweetest Flower That Blows" (Van der Stucken), "Thou" (Liebling), "Girometta" (Sibella), and "Abballati" (Favara), Nina Morgana and accompanist; "Jota" (DeFalla-Kochanski), "Valse Bluette" (Drigo-Auer), "Nachstuck" (Robert Schumann), "Spanish Dance" (Sarasate), Mary Chainey and accompanist; and "Waltz Ariette" from "Mireille" (Gounod), Miss Morgana and accompanist.

Rhy J. Davies, a member of the British Parliament, will be heard in an tion, will preach the sermon in the broadcast from WRC at 11 o'clock this morning.

The Young Peoples' Conference will be on the air from WRC at 3 o'clock, with an address by Dr. Daniel A. Poling. The regular Sunday afternoon program from the Peace Cross of the Washington Cathedral will be head at 4 o'clock. The Rt. Rev. Nicholai Velimirovitch, Bishop of Ohriva, Serbia, will preach the sermon.

The Mediterraneans will broadcast a program under the direction of Hugo Mariani at 1 o'clock this afternoon, and the Crosley Moscow Art Orchestra will be heard at 5:30 o'clock. Arno Arriga, director of the orchestra, has arranged a program of classical and lighter selections, including the "End of a Perfect Day" and "All the World Is Waiting for the Sunrise."

The Peoples' Vesper Concerts, which were heard during last winter, will be resumed at 6:45 o'clock tonight. This will immediately precede the musical program from the Capitol Theater at 7:20 o'clock.

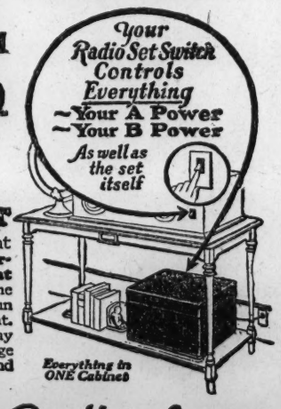

Rhy J. Davies, a member of the British Parliament, will be heard in an address, "What the English Think of Americans," at 10:15 o'clock tonight. Mr. Davies came to America last year for a short visit, and the demand on him for speaking engagements was so great that he decided to come over for a tour of six weeks beginning late in October and ending in December. He is one of the most popular lecturers in England. Ramsay MacDonald, former premier of Great Britain, in speaking of Mr. Davies stated "He was one of my most valued colleagues in those great days when we were responsible for the government."

W. A. Goldsworthy, organist of the historic St. Marks-in-the-Bouwerie Church, will present the "Cathedral Echoes" program tonight, assisted by The Stratford Male Quartet. Mr. Goldsworthy has selected the familiar "Prelude to Parsifal" for his first selection. An old Welsh air will be played on the chimes and the quartet will sing "Holy Night" (Beethoven) and "Steal Away" (Huntley).

WBAW, NASHVILLE, ASKS FOR INCREASE IN POWER

Proposal for Operation on 10,000 Watts Urged in Justice to South.

CANADA ON SAME WAVE

That the Southern broadcasting stations are going to get into the game in earnest is indicated by the request of Station WBAW, Braid Electrical Co., at Nashville, Tenn., operating on 1,210 kilocycles (247.8 meters), 100 watts power, for an increase in power to 10,000 watts.

This wave length is shared by 15 other stations in the United States, the highest-powered being Station WIOD, at Miami Beach, Fla., operating on 1,000 watts, and, in addition, is one of the wave lengths which Canada is sharing with the United States. The majority of the stations on this wave are 50 and 100 watt stations with a very short service range.

John De Witt, engineer in charge of Station WBAW, was asked by Commissioner Caldwell if he realized when the application was made that this was a Canadian-shared wave and if WBAW were granted 10,000 watts power that it would seriously interfere with reception north of the Canadian border. Mr. De Witt replied he was not aware of this.

The argument of the management of Station WBAW is that the South is entitled to as good broadcasting conditions as exist in the North and other sections of the country, and that it is their desire to furnish that service. While Mr. De Witt admitted in testifying that if this request were granted by the Federal Radio Commission interference might be caused to some of the low-powered stations sharing the wave, he said that because of their wish to provide radio entertainment for a large portion of the South, where, in a great many cases, little or no such entertainment is now available, they felt justified in asking the increase, regardless of the little fellows.

The 10,000-watt transmitter for this station was ordered last January while the radio bill was in conference, and WBAW was said to feel that this is another reason why it should receive special consideration.

This station does not sell advertising time, but representatives testified it had been told by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer chain that if it succeeded in getting 10,000 watts power from the Federal Radio Commission, a contract would be offered to it.

Whether or not higher power is granted to WBAW by the commission, the application shows the trend in the South and that a wider range and better service in the broadcasting field are being sought there.

WMBI CONSTRUCTING 5,000-WATT STATION

Plant at Addison, Ill., to Be Operated by the Moody Bible Institute.

STUDIO KEPT IN CHICAGO

When the Federal Radio Commission issued a permit to station WMBI to increase its power from 500 watts to 5,000 watts it was with the proviso that the transmitter apparatus and towers be located outside the city limits of Chicago. After some investigation, it was found a site near Addison, Ill., about 20 miles west of the city, was a desirable location.

The new station will be built upon a 6½-acre tract west of Addison and will be modern to the slightest detail. Two 200-foot steel towers will support the aerial, while the transmitter is to be housed in a brick building in which will be the living quarters for the station operators and their families. A large electric sign, bearing the call letters—WMBI—will be placed upon the towers.

The studios from which the broadcasting will be done will remain, as at present, in the Moody Bible Institute buildings in Chicago. The voice will be carried over a wire from the eighth floor of the women's building of the institute, where by special apparatus the current is greatly amplified and then the voice is sent out over specially leased telephone wires to Oak Park, Ill., some 9 miles west of the studio. Again the voice will be greatly increased and carried by other leased wires to the transmitter at Addison. For the third time the voice will be amplified, fed into the transmitter and sent into the air.

Work is being rushed on the station and it is expected to have the inaugural program during Christmas week.

Myths of Religion Going, Says Edison

New York, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—The present epoch is regarded by Thomas A. Edison as "the age of science, the passing of myths and religion and history." The characterization is made in answers to questions in "The Book of Opportunities," published by G. P. Putnam's Sons.

RADIOLA 30-A
Custom-built,
Complete with Radiotrons
$495

—simplified socket-power operation

Radio engineers all recognize the super-heterodyne as the finest achievement in radio receiver design. Its unrivalled selectivity, sensitivity and fidelity of tone have made the super-heterodyne the standard of comparison in the radio art.

In response to the demand for de luxe models of the RCA Super-Heterodyne—with the convenience and efficiency of operation from the electric light socket (without batteries or liquid-containing devices)—RCA offers the new custom-built Radiola 30-A. This cabinet receiver, because of its extreme selectivity, is ideally adapted for use in the congested broadcasting areas.

Each instrument (with the self-contained RCA Loudspeaker) has been hand-built and individually tested.

The new complete line of Radiolas includes receivers for dry battery, storage battery and socket-power operation, ranging from $69.50 to $895.

You haven't really heard radio until you have listened to a Radiola with an RCA Loudspeaker.

Any RCA Authorized Dealer will gladly demonstrate these wonderful instruments for you.

RED SEAL PRIZE WINNER PRAISES ELECTRIC AIDS

WOMAN LIKES WIRE PLAN

"Dear Mr. Gallagher:

"I wish to acknowledge with thanks the receipt of the beautiful silver urn set which was awarded to me as first prize in the interesting contest recently conducted by the Electric League of Washington.

"As the mother of four small children, I can not begin to express the comfort and assistance which the use of electrical appliances affords every day in the year. I find my vacuum cleaner more efficient than a maid and my washing machine more dependable than a washwoman. The acquisition of the urn in such a happy manner means another step forward in the fulfilment of my desire to have a completely electrified home. Indeed, I will never be content until I have an electric range, refrigerator, dishwasher and all the other conveniences which make housekeeping a genuine pleasure.

"While the wiring of my home is better than the average, it does not meet the specifications of the Red Seal plan in all respects and I am very glad that the contest brought this plan to my attention. A study of it has added much to my knowledge of the subject, and as soon as I can I want to have my wiring system made worthy of the Red Seal stamp of approval.

"I have retained the interesting literature which was issued in connection with the contest and am bringing it to the attention of friends, who will appreciate the helpfulness and good advice it offers.

"It has always seemed to me that, considering its unlimited versatility, convenience and power, electricity is the cheapest commodity in the world. Although we use a considerable number of appliances, our bill is always moderate and reasonable.

"I wish to take this opportunity to express my appreciation of your kindness and courtesy and that of the organization which you represent so well. Unfortunately, it is not possible for every woman to win such a beautiful urn set by becoming actively interested in the wiring of her home, but every woman can derive much benefit, indeed, from an earnest and thoughtful study of the functions of electricity in the home and a careful examination of the advantages of the Red Seal plan.

"With best wishes for yourself and the Electric League, I am,

"Most gratefully,

"(Mrs.) BLANCHE BENNETT."

NEW ELECTRIC SERVANTS

An innovation in office and library desk lamps is the inclusion of an ink well at the base of the lamp.

Automobile upholstery, billiard tables, office furniture, showcases, shelves and all matter of household furnishings now may be cleaned easily with the portable electric vacuum brush that runs on 110-volt, alternating or direct current, 60 cycles or less. It is also made for 32-volt current for farm lighting plants.

Electric League Briefs

By N. H. BARNES, Assistant Secretary

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Electric League held Monday, the following were present: L. T. Souder, president; E. R. Bateman, vice president; L. T. Shull, treasurer; H. R. Carroll, chairman of the business promotion committee; G. P. Mangan, past president of the league; J. C. Harding and F. B. Dillon, representing dealers; R. L. McDormand, representing nonunion contractors; Joseph Kirchner, representing union contractors; J. H. Potts, illuminating engineer of the Potomac Electric Power Co.; Dean Gallagher, of the league full-time staff, and this writer.

The executive committee meeting authorized a ladies' night of considerable proportions to be held this month. E. R. Bateman, chairman of committees during the year which have handled social affairs of the league, will again arrange this gala occasion, which will probably be held at the Mayflower Hotel. Because of the nature of the entertainment, the party will necessarily be closed to league members. There will be music for dancing, cards and prizes for those who prefer this form of amusement, and entertainment for all. Announcement of the date and of the balance of the committee who will assist Mr. Bateman will be made shortly.

B. M. Bennett, of the Frigidaire Corporation, is directing the affairs of cooperation through the league, with an assistant, who will assist in the formation of the new electric refrigeration group of the league. One new member, Sterrett & Fleming, who handle the Copeland refrigerator, has joined the league for the purpose of taking active part in this new group.

On Tuesday afternoon a meeting of the fixture dealers group was held in the offices of the Electric League. This is one of several groups of the league which are rather active, holding regular meetings to take care of league problems. P. A. Davis, of O. R. Evans & Bro., who is also secretary of the league, is chairman of the fixture dealers group.

There are now 72 bona fide Red Seal homes now in Washington. Most are now occupied, although all were speculative operations. There are nearly 300 other applications for Red Seal in the league office, covering houses which have not yet been started. Many electric league contractors are doing Red Seal wiring. Among these are Theo. Mullican, Carroll P. Carpenter, E. C. Ernst, E. R. Bateman, the Delta Electrict Co. and several others.

"The electric convenience outlet is the doorway to better homes, better living—through the full and easy use of matchless service," says a folder recently prepared under the direction of G. P. Mangan, sales manager of Potomac Electric Power Co., and it is not questioned. Outlets aplently are needed nowadays.

All groups of the league are reminded that, under the constitution, next month it is necessary for them to elect executive committeemen. One member of the executive committee now serving is to be retained by each group and one replaced, giving the committee which functions in 1928, 50 per cent new blood and 50 per cent experienced membership.

B. E. Dement, chairman of the committee on public information of the league, is rounding out his second term in this office. Dement, one of the youngest members of the organization who has ever held the important post of chairmanship of a major committee of the league, has carefully guided the destinies of this page during the terms of his office. The page is now receiving national attention. There is never a week passes that requests are not received from all parts of the country for copies of the page to be used as models.

At the Better Homes Exhibition to be held at the Washington Auditorium in the near future by the Washington Real Estate Board, there will be featured a complete bungalow erected indoors. Th electrical equipment in this small home will be installed by the Electric League and will feature Red Seal wiring. Electric League's activity in this important exhibition is under direction of the business promotion committee, which is headed by H. R. Carroll.

L. L. Hayes and Scott & Bender, two aggressive electrical contractor members of the league, announce that they have been doing considerable work recently in the way of additional convenience outlets in many homes, both of the dwelling and apartment type.

Jere Mackessy, of the league, famous for his direction of golf and outing committees, has recently completed a wonderfully beautiful job in electric lighting and power in the new Peoples Drug Store on F street opposite the Fox Theater. This store contains the ultimate in light, heat and power, served up readily, economically, and dependably by electricity. A large number of fans properly located do much to keep the store always comfortable. The 72-foot soda fountain and luncheon counter supplies drinks electrically mixed and toast electrically heated.

The new electrical shop of E. R. Bateman, in the 1800 block on Fourteenth street, soon will be opened. Other fine shops of league members are found all over town. Among them are the stores of Carl W. Dauber, J. C. Harding, Scott & Bender, E. R. Seal and many more.

Airway Beacon Called Hottest Spot on Earth

The hottest place on earth is not along the equatorial line, but in the crater of the arc of a new superfloodlight at Charlottesville, Va. This beam of light, which will carry 3,000 miles and has the intensity of 1,385,000,000 candle power, reaches a temperature of 38,000 degrees Fahrenheit at the center of its arc. The light will blister a person's skin at a range of 1,000 feet.

The light was established as one of several beacons on the proposed Boston-New Orleans airline, and forms part of the lighting plan for the remantled Thomas Jefferson home.

LIGHT BEING TRIED TO PENETRATE FOGS

Experiments Conducted With Infra-Red Rays by Inventor of Television.

Promise that ships may see through fogs, and airplanes through both fogs and clouds is seen in the latest development of electric science now under experiment in England, where the inventor of television, John L. Baird, is giving demonstrations with the transmission of pictures by the employment of infra-red rays. He calls the process noctovision because the subject to be photographed sits in apparent darkness, but in reality the subject is directly in the glare of thousands of invisible infra-red motes or rays.

The invisible light will carry a perfect likeness, at present, for a distance of 200 miles, but should the subject be smoking a cigarette the smoke will not register at the other end of the line, because infra-red rays are not scattered by atmosphere. Ordinary light, rich in violet and ultra violet beams, is dissipated by atmospheric conditions and hence can not pierce fog, smoke or cloud for any great distance.

The commercial application of this new light-throwing process is, therefore apparent. In aerial reconnoissance, for instance, the pilot readily may pick up a picture of a city through the use of plates sensitive to infra-red even though the pilot can not see one iota of the location he is "shooting" at, owing to clouds or fog.

Similarly, if ships could be equipped with such apparatus a steady, safe and fast course could be gauged even on the thickest nights.

ELECTRICITY UTILIZED TO OPERATE ERASER

Burden of Correcting Cards Lightened by Device Used in New York Library.

"It's a wonder some one did not hit the electric eraser years ago. But now that it is here I suppose we shall soon find it in every big library in the world." That statement by John H. Fedeler, engineer of New York's public library system, describes the newest office use found for electricity. The need had long been felt and the invention was come upon more or less accidentally, when ways were discussed to lighten the burden of revising and correcting cards and indices. This work, which required continuous erasing, often occupied the entire time of two or more girls for protracted periods just in the main library on Fifth avenue and Forty-second street.

With the problem of eliminating this tedious routine, Mr. Fedeler began his experiments and wound up with a portable instrument that could be transferred to any attachment plug in the building. The machine rests on a small table underneath which is an electric fan blowing the refuse along a flat funnel-shaped metal strip to a cloth receptacle fastened at the extreme end of the table.

With the aid of this portable electric eraser, changes can be made in indexing and on every form of catalogue card up to 400 and 500 daily. Usually the device is kept in the executive offices and sent for by department heads when needed.

EGG OUTPUT DOUBLED BY ELECTRICITY'S USE

Alabama Institute Announces the Results of Actual Demonstration.

Comprehensive tests, conducted by the extension service of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute in the matter of getting greater egg production from hens through artificial lighting, show that the use of electric lights in hen houses increases egg production anywhere from 25 to 100 per cent. In one instance of a five-week test with 960 hens, egg production increased 59 per cent under artificial light.

This egg-laying contest, consisting of 96 entries of 10 hens each, took in entries from many regions, including the South and New England. Three months after the start a 50-watt lamp was installed in 96 compartments, each one containing ten hens, and the lights were turned on at 8:15 p. m. for a period of fifteen minutes with the fowl being driven from their nests and fed small portions of hot mash.

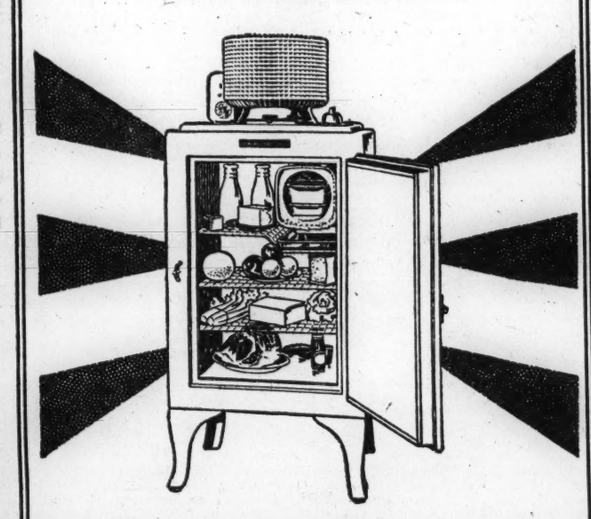

Each night for a week the lighting time was gradually increased until it reached an hour's duration. This resultant increase from this and the feeding of hot mash during the ensuing five weeks was a total gain of 1,717 eggs. Eggs were then selling for 70 cents a dozen, so that the extra production represented an increase from the 960 hens of $100 per week. Figuring in cost of electricity, labor and feed, there still remained a net increase of $75 from the 960 hens for the five-week period.

Adequate Light Held Vital.

People use their eyes twenty times as much as did their ancestors because the majority has come indoors to make its living. This, under inadequate lighting conditions, has resulted in 70 per cent of the population now having defective vision, according to Army tests and others. Yet, despite the knowledge of this fact, it is authoritatively reported that only about 9 per cent of offices and plants have instituted lighting arrangements that can be called excellent.

Laundry problems in the small apartment are being met with a new small-sized portable electric washer which may be set up at any convenient outlet and which will accommodate a few socks, handkerchiefs and five or six men's shirts.

GENERAL ELECTRIC
Refrigerator

All the machinery is inside the one coil!

There's no machinery underneath—none in the basement. The General Electric Refrigerator is the truly simplified refrigerator that has done away with all fans, belts, drain-pipes, and stuffing boxes. It has done away with the need for oiling. It is unusually quiet. It has cut down the amount of current needed for perfect refrigeration and the making of ice.

Developed, produced and guaranteed by General Electric. That alone, makes this refrigerator worthy of your consideration. But its remarkable simplicity, its economy, its spaciousness, its efficiency—these will make their direct appeal to any housewife.

We suggest that you consider these refrigerators from every possible angle—that you examine them carefully—that you compare them with all others. Come in and ask questions about them. And, if you want a descriptive booklet, just mail the coupon below.

Matchless Service

Days Grow Shorter!

SEEMS only yesterday that there was daylight enough after dinner to allow you to drive quite a while without headlights. These days you need them for the drive home from work! Naturally, more electric light is used in the home, too, and your electric service bills may be slightly higher these fall and winter months. You can readily see why—from the table below, which shows the number of hours electric lights are used daily, in the average home, during each month of the year:

January	6.53 hours
February	5.38 hours
March	4.10 hours
April	3.48 hours
May	2.95 hours
June	2.55 hours
July	2.60 hours
August	3.15 hours
September	4.00 hours
October	4.90 hours
November	6.18 hours
December	6.85 hours

Perhaps your greater use of light may point out the need for additional convenience outlets to connect a floor or table lamp * * * or an Electric Heater you'll find so comforting these days! Ask your neighborhood electrical contractor to estimate the cost for you.

Mrs. Kirk was appointed drill mistress and Mrs. Marguerite Grey, Mrs. Poor and Mrs. Hicks were appointed to serve with Mrs. Cora L. Thompson, chairman of the State council good of the order committee.

State Secretary Charles H. Miller presented his warrant Thursday at the meeting of Barbara Frietchie Council, No. 21, as lodge deputy. Chairman Regina Carney announced a card party for November 3.

Triumph Council, No. 8, was called to order Thursday evening by the councilor, Mrs. Marie Stephenson. The degrees of loyalty, love and patriotism were conferred on a candidate. The initiation was conducted under the command of Drillmaster Harry Buell and members of the drill team, with Ray T. Campbell as master of ceremonies. Among the visitors were the State vice councilor, Mrs. Carrie G. Meile, and the State council trustee, Mrs. Ethel M. Miles. The councilor appointed Mrs. Allie Brumbaugh, Miss Alice Brumbaugh and Mrs. May Rambo to serve with the associate State councilor, Mrs. Cora L. Thompson, on the State council good of the order committee. Addresses were made by the visitors.

Progressive Council, No. 9, met Friday evening with the councilor, Mrs. Belle Wilkerson, presiding. A candidate was initiated. The trustees' report for the quarter ended September 30 was read and accepted. Charles Miller presented his credentials as deputy State councilor. Visitors present included Past Councilor Gertrude Keys and Mrs. Lovett, from Mizpah Council, No. 3, who addressed the council. Progressive Council will hold an apron social Friday evening.

Goodwill Council, No. 15, held a celebration Monday evening in honor of the outgoing deputy, Mrs. Emily E. Hockstrasser, and their new deputy, J. Harry Howell, from Fidelity Council, No. 4. A very large representation of State and national officers were present. Past Councilor Charles Magill and Mr. Howell addressed the council. After the close of the meeting an oyster supper was served.

Eagle Council, No. 24, met Monday evening. Mrs. Pearl Wolfe, the council's deputy, was presented with a hand-painted dish in appreciation of her untiring services as the deputy State councilor during the past year. Mrs. Deborah Strietberger, State council trustee, was also presented with a hand-painted dish. Past National Councilor Naomi E. Swann, National Representative Anzonette Flynn, Mrs. Elizabeth Shepherd, State councilor; Mrs. Cora L. Thompson, associate State councilor; Mrs. Louise A. Grubbs, State council conductress, and Junior Past Councilor Okie R. Young made addresses.

Fidelity Council, No. 4, Tuesday evening tendered a reception to Past State Councilor E. Viola Thompson, who has been returned as deputy State councilor for the coming year. With Miss Clara Haas and Mrs. George Cox, flag bearers, the deputy, accompanied by the warden, Miss Norma Stansbury and Mrs. Sarah A. Cavanaugh, conductor, led the march into the council chamber, where an official welcome was extended the State deputy. She was received by the councilor, Mrs. Mabel G. Downing. On behalf of members of Fidelity Council a potted fern was presented to Mrs. Thompson by Past State Councilor, Julia DeLano. Other presentations of personal gifts were made to the deputy by the members of the Four Leaf Clover Pleasure Club and Mrs. Eleanor Casalege, Mrs. Pezold, Samuel Bushey and Mrs. Mar. Haas. During the business session the recording secretary, J. Harry Howell, presented Miss Clara Haas with a Daughter of America compact, the national council prize, for having obtained the largest number of new members for her council. Mrs. Sarah A. Cavanaugh was installed as conductor by the deputy, Past State Councilor Mamie C. Howell, chairman, and members of her committee were in charge of the arrangements for the reception of Mrs. Thompson.

Past National Councilor, Hattie M. Miller gave a birthday party to her friends in Independent Council last Friday evening. Mrs. Miller has been the lodge treasurer for the past twenty years.

Goodwill Council, No. 15, will give a card party tomorrow evening at Fourth street and Pennsylvia avenue southeast.

NASH COMPANY ADDS THREE NEW MODELS, INCLUDING VICTORIA

Latest Designs, All Sixes, Intended to Meet Popular Demand.

WALNUT PANELS USED IN FOUR-DOOR COUPE

Cabriolet Easily Convertible From Closed Car to Open Style.

Three new models, each designed to meet a popular demand, are announced by the Nash Motors Co. The new cars are a special six four-door coupe at $1,445 f. o. b. factory; a special six four-passenger victoria at $1,295 f. o. b. factory, and a standard six convertible cabriolet at $995 f. o. b. factory.

"With addition of these new cars, the Nash line now embraces 24 distinctive models, all sixes, and ranging in price from $865 to $1,990 f. o. b. factory," says E. H. McCarty, general sales manager of the Nash Motors Co. "Each of the three new cars was designed especially to meet a demand for a car of its type and, as with all other Nash models, these new cars are equipped with the Nash 7-bearing crankshaft motor."

In the special six four-door coupe Nash presents a model of exceptional charm and utility. It is built for five passengers and is distinguished at first glance by its smart leather-finished back, its rakish front-end visor and its handsome in-built, nickel-strapped custom trunk at the rear.

Walnut Used for Panels.

Upholstery is taupe mohair, deeply tufted, which, together with the panelings of genuine walnut and fine hardware, add an air of luxury to the interior, a handsome vanity case and smoking set adding further to the convenience of the occupants and to the general atmosphere of the car.

The victoria on the special six chassis is designed in that good taste which distinguishes Nash body craftmanship. The color harmony is rich gray-green below the moulding, with black hood, black belt, black rear deck and black top. Added charm is given this color combination by the nickeled head-lamps, cowl lamps and radiator shell.

In keeping with its striking outward appearance, the interior of the car is fitted and trimmed in good taste. The steering wheel is genuine walnut; the instrument board and panels are walnut finish, and the upholstery is genuine mohair in harmonious gray. Seating arrangements are provided to comfortably accommodate four passengers, and, when not in use, the folding seat may be set forward out of the way. A large compartment in the rear deck has been provided for packages and parcels.

Cabriolet Designed for Utility.

In the standard six cabriolet, Nash has made a decided advance in the design and construction of cars of this type, the new cabriolet being not only modish in appearance, but a utility car as well. It is a closed car, with top up and an open car with top, back and windows lowered. In reality, two cars in one.

Bumpers and bumperettes on the standard six cabriolets are standard equipment. The body combination is striking. The hood and rear deck are deep Burgundy, as are also the wheels. Below the molding the body is beige, while the fenders and running gear are black. Contrasting with the color harmony is the Burbank top with nickel trimmings.

Upholstery of the broad front seat and the comfortable rumble seat is of gray leather, rugged, practical and good looking.

Smokers' Academy Will Admit Women

Paris, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Paris is going to have an Academy of Smokers and women are to be admitted.

The plans are indefinite as yet, but the interest in the idea is indicated by rather enthusiastic discussion. One of the disputed questions is whether women ought to smoke pipes. Mme. Colette Yver, a writer, who is active in supporting the plan and in demanding for women her proper share in the organization, puts the pipe for woman on a high plane. "The cigarette," she says, "is like a flirtatious sweetheart, but the pipe is like faithful, dependable, comfortable wife."

Henri Duvernois, noted literary wit, takes issue with her. He doesn't approve of women smoking pipes and he objects to the cigar being ignored.

The Woman Driver

The joy I get out of motoring is in having a peppy, responsive engine. My husband tells me that one reason why my car operates so well is because it's equipped with Champion Spark Plugs.

Champion is the better spark plug because of its double-ribbed alundum core—its hump-plane compression and its special analysis electrodes.

Repeal of Automobile Tax Urged; Is Unjust, Class Legislation

Credence is given at times to the statement that the tax is now a levy on the car manufacturers, and that the repeal will not benefit the motorist. It is also said that the repeal will not be as beneficial to taxpayers generally as the reduction of other Federal taxes.

The tax has always been added and billed separately. Every car maker in the industry has put himself on record in writing that his prices will be reduced instantly by the amount of the abolished tax on automobiles. The average retail price per car is $825. Eliminating the tax would mean a saving of about $18 on every car bought. The motoring public believes it has a right to this relief.

Approximately 4,000,000 purchasers of automobiles will benefit yearly from the repeal of the motor vehicle tax. This is the largest taxpaying group in the country, exceeding greatly the number paying income taxes. The fact that 4,000,000 will benefit, however, is not the principle at issue. Any discriminatory war emergency tax on a special class of people, whether it affects 10 persons or 10,000,000, should be removed. The only sound principle for Federal taxation is that of general equitable levies, with no class legislation.—From Automobile Topics.

PUBLIC WANTS FASTER CARS, DECLARES JORDAN

Correct Balance and Steering Necessary With Speed, He Asserts.

DESCRIBES NEW MODEL

The public demands faster automobiles, according to Edward S. Jordan, president of the Jordan Motor Car Co.

With thousands of miles of good roads and an ever increasing number of safeguards at curves, hills and cross-roads, it is entirely practical to build faster cars, provided two important factors are borne in mind by automotive engineers.

One of these is correct balance, and the other is what is known as balanced steering.

If the car is not perfectly balanced, it is not safe to drive it fast, because it won't hold the road when it goes over 40 miles an hour.

If the steering is not properly balanced, it is dangerous to drive the car at any speed over 25 miles an hour.

Jordan engineers, in developing the new air line eight, worked out the chassis balance to such a fine point that they even balanced the wheels to counteract the weight of the valve stems.

This may seem like a trival thing, but when the car is driven 80 miles an hour there is no tendency toward vibration, sideswaying or shimmy.

The steering gear that Jordan is now using is of the hourglass, worm type, and it is built in this country under English patents.

It has been developed to such a fine point and is so perfectly balanced that when you turn the car around a corner the front wheels come back to a normal position almost unaided by the driver.

According to Jordan, it is not necessary to grip the wheel tightly at high speeds in order to hold the car on the road.

Traffic authorities everywhere are advocating greater speed if properly safeguarded, and Jordan claims that balanced steering, a balanced chassis, a flexible motor and effective brakes, will eventually be developed by all manufacturers so as to make possible a much more rapid movement of automobile traffic.

Thrills for the Tourist.

Carrizozo, N. Mex.—The two-gun West still lives in the minds of the fiction reading tourists. One such traveler, seeing a car inspector with his hat filled with summer perforations, whispered to a companion: "See that man with his hat shot full of holes."

ORDERS TO KEEP JORDAN PLANT BUSY FOR 90 DAYS

Special Carburetion and Manifolding System Used in Air Line Eight.

STEERING GEAR IS NEW

Orders sufficient to keep the plant busy for the next 90 days have been received at the Jordan factory since the announcement of the new air line eight, according to Edward S. Jordan, president.

In appearance the car is a big brother to the six-cylinder line which has been on the market for several months, but incorporates a number of important new mechanical developments.

One outstanding feature of the new motor is the carburetion and manifolding system.

A duplex carburetor, worked out by Stromber in aeroplane research, is used. This unit is said to be very similar to that used by Col. Lindbergh in his Whirlwind engine.

Coupled with the new carburetion is a new and carefully worked out manifold design.

Other mechanical features which represent a noteworthy advance, include the use of a new type of cylinder head and a new type of combustion chamber.

A special patented steering gear of an entirely new type known as the "hourglass gear" is said to be the last word in steering ease.

With added power, acceleration and speed, and the new type of steering gear, the car is a wonderful "traffic dodger."

The factory is well into production on the new models and expects within 60 days to have dealers supplied with all body types so that they can take care of a large portion of the initial orders.

SMART COLORS MARK NEW STUDEBAKER MODEL

Commander Regal Is Offered in Two Distinctive Decorative Combinations.

FITTINGS ARE COMPLETE

One of the smartest new Studebaker models is the Commander Regal, according to Joseph McReynolds, local Studebaker dealer. The new model, which has been in production only a short time, is offered in two new and distinctive color combinations, and is characterized by a wealth of smart appointments and a completeness of equipment that constitute another forward step in Studebaker's famous policy of producing custom-car beauty without the penalty of custom-car cost.

The new colors are a deep maroon, pin striped with golden yellow, and a smart shade of gray, with belt line and striping of light green. Gleaming touches of nickel in the newly designed acorn type headlights and cowl lights and a nickel bead separating hood and cowl add distinction to the low-swung body lines which emphasize the Commander's exceptional speed and power.

Interior treatment reveals a new degree of beauty and luxury. Upholstery of fine mohair or broadcloth blends in color with the exterior finish. Even the thick carpets on the floor of both front and rear compartments harmonize with the general color scheme. Broadlace trim embellishes the broadcloth upholstery, while the interior of models upholstered in mohair is trimmed with panels of walnut finish.

Toggle grips, deep door pockets, a full-length robe rail, carpeted foot rest and a dome light that flashes on automatically when the right rear door is opened indicate the completeness with which the rear compartment is fitted.

The front compartment reveals a beautiful new type steering wheel and a new and attractive arrangement of instruments on the cowl. All instruments, including the hydrostatic gasoline gauge, are grouped in a handsome rectangular panel and are indirectly illuminated for night driving. In addition to the usual instruments, the cowl carries an automatic electric cigarette lighter.

The full vision steel body incorporates the exclusive Studebaker no-draft ventilating windshield. Coincidental lock to steering and ignition, the key to which also fits the tire lock and doors, is located on the steering column. Other items of the Commander Regal's complete equipment include nickel-plated front and rear bumpers, four-wheel brakes, disc wheels, full balloon tires, two-beam headlights controlled from the steering wheels, built-in nickel-plated rear traffic signal light, double rear vision mirror and automatic windshield wiper.

Racing of Greyhounds Introduced in Paris

Paris, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Greyhound racing—old as the sport is—will be seen for the first time in Paris soon. A few whippet races have been held on the Riviera, but the greyhound has not yet been seen in public contests.

One of the indoor bicycle tracks is being arranged with kennels and the rail on which the mechanical rabbit will be sent ahead of the dogs. The French Canine Federation has approved the plans and will supervise the contests.

OAKLAND AND PONTIAC SALES SHOW BIG GAIN

22,079 Sixes Purchased in September, a Gain of 37 Per Cent Over 1926.

DEMAND IS INCREASING

The total sales of the Oakland Motor Car Co. during September was 22,079 Oakland and Pontiac sixes, a gain of 37 per cent over the corresponding month of 1926, it is announced by W. R. Tracy, vice president in charge of sales.

This percentage of gain represents an increase of 5,945 units over September, 1926, when the company sold 16,134 cars.

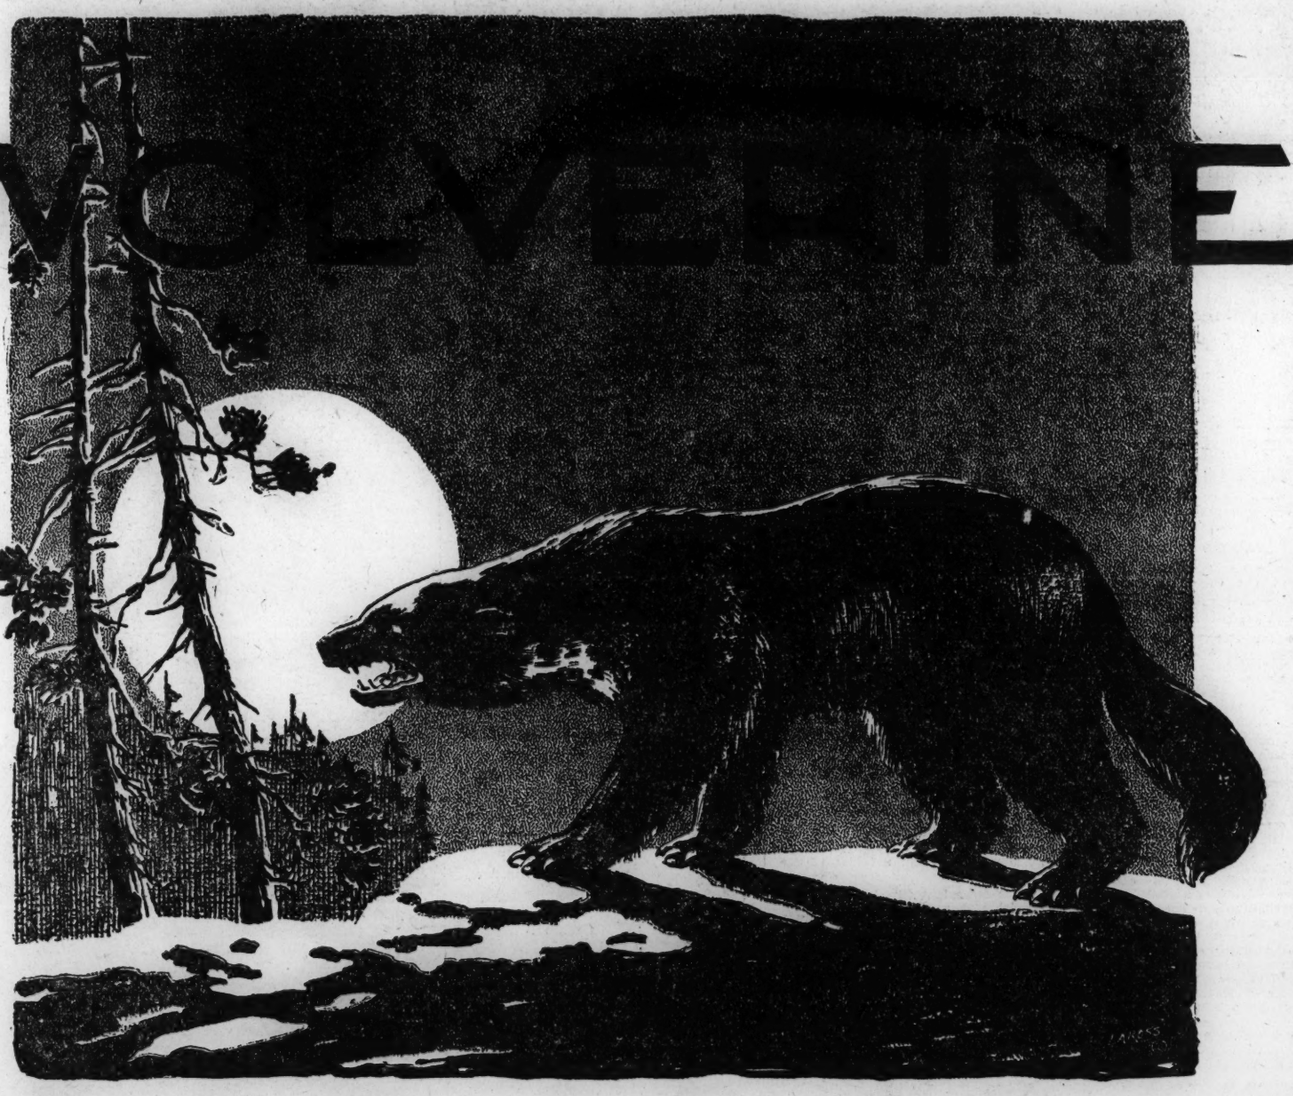

The aggregate of Oakland and Pontiac Six sales during the first nine months of this year was 156,258 as compared with the corresponding months of 1926, when 111,821 units were sold. The gain of 44,437 sales during this period is an increase of 39.7 per cent.

During the present year Oakland-Pontiac production has been unable to keep pace with consumer demand, so the figures for production and sales during the nine months are practically identical.

"The new and finer Pontiac Six announced early this year at lower prices, brought a gratifying increase in demand," says Mr. Tracy. "And the new Pontiac Six factory completed in January enabled us to take advantage of that demand. Then in August the new All-American Six was announced and we were able to make the necessary increase in production through the release of much space in the Oakland Six factory which previously had been devoted to the building of Pontiacs.

"The fact that our September percentage of sales gain maintained within 2.7 per cent the fast pace set by Oakland-Pontiac sales during the preceding eight months, I regard as a strong indication that we may expect a healthy autumn business."

CHEVROLET SELLING FORCES CONTESTING FOR TURKEY DINNER

Losers to Eat Beans and Pay Bill for Their Own and Winners' Repasts.

27,000 IN COMPETITION TO DISPOSE OF AUTOS

Company Sets 71,451 as Goal for October and Reports Prospects Bright.

With more than 27,000 persons who make up the selling organizations of the Chevrolet Motor Co. involved, the unique "turkey-bean" contest inaugurated by this company a year ago is again in full swing during this October.

This huge sales organization has been divided for the duration of the contest into competitive groups of which the winners will eat turkey while the losers will sit and dine only on beans—and pay the entire dinner check.

Two major divisions of the country have been made, with an assistant general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Co. in charge of each. D. E. Ralston has the Western half of the United States, and M. D. Douglas the Eastern half.

Sections Subdivided.

Each of these sections has been further subdivided. The Flint sales region has been pitted against the Atlantic Coast region, the Southeastern region against the Middle West region, and the Great Lakes region against the Pacific Coast. Every one of the 43 zone sales offices in the United States also has been squared away against another zone, cities are competing against cities, as are dealer organizations and individual salesmen.

In this manner every man in the entire selling organization and every dealer in every section of the country gets an opportunity to demonstrate his ability to outsell his competitor and win himself a turkey dinner.

Officials in the sales department of the home office have gone into the field to aid various groups. R. H. Grant, vice president, in charge of sales, has gone to the Great Lakes region for one week and then will move to other regions; H. J. Klingler, general sales manager, is stationed on the Pacific Coast; Mr. Ralston is concentrating on the Middle West; Mr. Douglas on the Southeast; R. K. White, sales promotion manager, has the Atlantic Coast, and Sidney Corbett, manager of the truck division, is located in the Flint region.

Goal Set at 71,451 Cars.

Mr. Grant, in an address to dealers at the beginning of the contest, said Chevrolet plans to sell 71,451 cars this month. He also said that selling conditions in October were considerably brighter than in September.

"I am optimistic also for November and the ensuing months," Mr. Grant declared. "Last November our sales quota called for 43,000 units, whereas we sold and delivered more that 73,000 cars and trucks. What we accomplish this year in November and December will hinge to a large measure upon our October showing.

"We are facing the new year with as much confidence as we are the immediate future. I look forward to 1928 with confidence in continued leadership and continued progress for Chevrolet's record-breaking success."

German Consumption Of Beer on Decrease

Berlin, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Athletics, the "dry" movement and economic necessity have reduced the consumption of beer in Germany by one-fourth as compared with 1913, according to figures compiled by the federal statistical bureau.

Before the war, the average consumption of beer per year per person was 27 gallons. As this average figure includes children and the very aged, it is safe to say that the average consumption of the beer-consuming German was at least 50 gallons. Today the average consumption is only 20 gallons per head per year.

Only half of 1 per cent of this is imported beer, such as Pilsen, porter and ale. The 99½ per cent is manufactured right in Germany.

HARRY HOUGH TO HEAD B. F. GOODRICH COMPANY

Vice President of Rubber Firm Is Elected President at Directors' Meeting.

TEN YEARS WITH CONCERN

Harry Hough, for ten years vice president and comptroller of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co., was elected president at a directors' meeting held last week in Akron, Ohio, where the Goodrich Co. has its plant.

Before Mr. Hough joined the Goodrich Co. he was located in New York City, where he was a member of a large accounting firm. His wide experience and his active participation in affairs bearing on all phases of the company's business have well fitted him for this new responsibility. He is a man of exceptionally keen judgment and his comprehension of the underlying fundamentals of business and the Goodrich Co.'s relationship to the trade will be factors in the successful continuation of the policies and program Goodrich has long since established.

It is interesting to note that in the 60 years of the Goodrich Co.'s existence it has had but three presidents, men of outstanding character and ability, who have carried the business through to tremendous success. The accomplishments of these men, which have undoubtedly placed the Goodrich Co. in a position of leadership in the rubber industry, are probably without parallel in the annals of business.

The Goodrich Co.'s record of having grown from a small manufacturing plant to a dominant position in the world's tenth largest industry during the administrations of three chief executives stands as a monumental achievement in industry.

It is on a background of record growth and outstanding administrative direction that Mr. Hough takes over the helm of the Goodrich Co., which stands today on new high records for sales and production. This gives the new president a splendid start to continue the gigantic strides of Goodrich progress.

In addition, the board elected D. M. Goodrich, son of Dr. B. F. Goodrich, founder of the company, as chairman of the board of directors. Mr. Goodrich had been a member of the board. J. D. Tew, director, was elevated to first vice president and member of the executive committee. The elections of Mr. Hough and Mr. Goodrich fill the two vacancies left by Mr. Work.

At the same time it is announced that Mr. S. M. Jepp has been appointed secretary to the Goodrich Co. to succeed Mr. F. C. VanCleef, whose resignation was recently announced. Mr. Jepp has been with the Goodrich Co. since 1917 as counsel in the legal department and is considered one of the company's leading authorities on tax matters as well as being a man of splendid executive ability.

New Era of Road Building Methods Is Held Possible

Discovery Which Would Enable Chemist to Give Character of Sands to Local Clay Would Effect Big Saving, Says Upham.

Change in the whole art of road building and enormous savings in money is possible through chemistry, Charles M. Upham, director of the highway research board of the State Highway Commission, Raleigh, N. C., declares in a report to the American Chemical Society.

"Probably one of the reasons why no greater advance in road construction has been made is because the chemical engineer has taken no greater active part in this industry," says Mr. Upham. "Up to the present most of the research undertaken has been physical.

"Undoubtedly the greatest discovery that could be made would be a method whereby it would be possible chemically to change the local clay materials in such a manner as to have character more nearly resembling the sands.

"Today 300,000 miles of primary roads of the country are fast being covered by satisfactory pavements—pavements that can meet the demands of present day traffic—but they are being constructed and maintained at great cost.

"Besides this primary system there is still nearly six times the mileage or nearly 3,000,000 miles of road that is left to be improved. The traffic on this large mileage of unimproved road does not justify the construction of the expensive pavements that are being laid on the primary routes. Therefore, a low cost pavement that will satisfactorily take care of a reasonable amount of traffic must be provided.

"I know of no greater service that the chemist can render than to furnish means so as to make it possible to treat clay in such a way as to change the nature of it so that it can be drained, and reduce to a minimum the volumetric changes when subjected to various amounts of moisture and increase the bearing value under moist condition and render it into a material that could be shaped and maintained by road machines.

"Such a discovery would be welcome by all States in the Union and could immediately be utilized on that larger mileage of unimproved roads which must take care of a large percentage of our present-day traffic and which in a very short time will serve as primary roads of the country.

"It would almost immediately create savings that would amount into the millions of dollars and almost immediately change the whole art of road-building.

"Highway construction is one of the oldest arts of which we have any knowledge, yet it is only recently that it has made any great strides or development. When road construction is analyzed and properly regarded from a true economic standpoint it is quite evident that the greatest economic strides are yet to come.

"The only chemistry used in highway construction is in the prdouction of a few road-building materials and some of the materials entering into the manufacture of road-building equipment.

"Road construction is at present largely confined to the physical manipulation of materials, some of which may be products of chemical manufacture.

"When we think of chemically manufactured materials used in road construction we immediately recall cement, asphalt, tar, brick and steel. While there are other materials, such as lime, hydrated lime, calcium chloride, sodium silicate, ligno-sulfate liquors and a few others, they form a very small percentage of the materials used in road making.

"Much credit is due the chemist for the development of Portland cement. There is probably no other manufactured material that is so widely used in the highway industry. Its characteristics permit it to be used not only for road pavement, but for bridges and other structures which form a part of the highway. The invention of Portland cement is relatively recent and its development is still in progress.

"Chemists are continually increasing the strength of Portland cement, and at the present time much research is being undertaken to further improve this product both as to strength and to extend the limits within which it may be used.

"Recently there have been placed upon the markets quick hardening cements. While these have not been universally adopted or used to any great extent, still it is a step forward in the development and progress and fills requirements that were heretofore lacking.

"The original asphalt pavements were undoubtedly constructed from rock asphalt taken from mines and which consisted of either limestone or sandstone impregnated with bitumen. Although the demand for this type of pavement became great, the cost was very high and the road builder conceived the idea of making artificially an asphalt pavement from sand and asphalt cement that would have in general the properties of rock asphalts.

"Some of the earlier asphalts used in the preparation of asphalt pavement were what are known as natural asphalts, but before it was possible to mix these with the sands it was found necessary to change them to the proper consistency. This was done by fluxing them with lighter bitumens generally obtained from crude oil.

"Therefore, the chemist directed the manufacture of an asphaltic cement consisting of fluxed natural asphalt that might be incorporated with sand and form a satisfactory paving material.

"Again the demand became so great that it was found economical to produce other materials that could be incorporated with sand and form a satisfactory pavement. The chemists once more physically and chemically manipulated crude oil and secured an asphalt residue which could be used satisfactorily as an asphaltic cement and supplied the binding qualities which were necessary in an asphalt pavement.

"So it can be said that the asphalts as manufactured under the guidance of the chemical engineer form one of the main ingredients in road construction.

"Brick was also used in the very early days of road construction. There are records that indicate that certain roads in the early days of Babylon were constructed of brick. The early brick, however, did not resemble the brick as manufactured at the present time, but consisted mostly of the clay baked in the sun—sometimes subjected to pressure. Later this clay was fused by fire until the bricks somewhat resembled those of the present day manufacture.

"The present art of road-brick manufacture is undoubtedly the immediate product of the chemist, for constantly the demand has been to produce a brick that is tough and hard—one that would resist abrasion and have no absorptive properties. Brick as manufactured today is made from selected shales and clay, carefully fused for a sufficient period so that the final product greatly resembles a rock of igneous nature.

"While there constantly are slight changes and improvements in the blending and treatment of clays, there seems to be no great change undergoing development at the present time from a chemical standpoint. Most of the present changes in brick manufacture are physical.

"Everyone is familiar with the great strides that have been made in the improvement of steel as a direct effort of the chemical engineer. Steel has played an important part in the road industry—not only in the construction of bridges and reinforcing of roads but in the manufacture of road equipment.

"The great strength obtained in road equipment and the hardness obtained in the blades and cutting edges of earth-moving machinery is an indication of the great contribution that the chemist has made to this particular branch of the highway industry.

"Calcium chloride has recently been utilized in concrete as an accelerator It has also been used as a dust palliative. As a dust layer it absorbs moisture from the atmosphere and keeps the surface of the road moist. In sections it has been used successfully in this manner. It is now manufactured or prepared in a way that makes it easy to handle and effective in use. It is fast claiming attention of engineers in the curing of concrete, and no doubt this material will be used more and more in the highway industry.

"There is still work for the chemist in the preparation of an asphalt and tar that can be used in road construction and serve as a binder in road pavement that will act the same in cold weather as in hot weather and be little affected by the temperature change, also to produce a bitumen that will not be greatly changed in its characteristics over a long period of time.

"It has been said that road building today is in part the physical manipulation of chemically prepared products. Beyond the preparation of materials the chemical engineer has taken little active part in road construction and probably one of the reasons why no greater advance in road construction has bene made is because the chemical engineer has taken no greater active part in this industry.

"Up to the present time most of the research undertaken has been physical. Undoubtedly the greatest discovery that could be made would be a method whereby it could be possible to change chemically the local clay materials in such a manner as to have character more nearly resembling the sands."

LITTLE CUSTOM JORDAN MOST POWERFUL SIX OF ITS SIZE AND WEIGHT

Amazing performance, big car comfort and custom appearance combined for the first time in a small car

Ideal companion for new Air Line Eight

UP and away with the green light, dodging the interference up the avenue—in and out of traffic like a flying phantom.

Snaps from five to twenty-five miles an hour under seven seconds. Turns like a polo pony. A wonderful car for a woman.

The most powerful motor ever used in a car of this size. Low center of gravity. Around the curves and over the ruts in comfort and safety.

Houdaille shock absorbers all around. Silent worm drive axle for 200,000 miles of service.

Economical, of course—the Little Custom Jordan is the lowest priced car you can buy, quality considered.

A Brilliant New Line of Cars

America discovered the value of this brilliant new car with a swiftness only rivaled by the car itself. Everything about it appeals to the mood of the hour.

Its amazing pick-up—from 0 to 25 miles thru gears in less than 7 seconds! Its effortless mastery of distance at a mile a minute! Its trim, streamline beauty—finished in the smartest colors.

The way it grips the road at sharp turns—cushions passengers over rough roads—travels in "high" up steep grades!

Its economy at the curb—17½ feet of parking space suffice! Its economy on the road—25 miles per gallon at 25 miles per hour!

Best of all, the quality of everything, seen and unseen, and the sense you get of sound, substantial value through and through.

Never have Dodge Brothers sold a sedan so low in price—so high in value—so thoroughly in tune with the taste and spirit of the time.

DESIGNING OF MOTOR 'TO FIT FUELS' URGED FOR CONSERVATION

Percentage of Crude Oil Going Into Gasoline Declared Not High Enough.

ADVERTISING MANAGER OF HUDSON GIVES VIEWS

Asserts Auto War Will Center on Economy of Operation, Not on Price.

"We are on the way to motor fuels which will use much higher percentages of the crude oil. Today about 30 per cent of the crude reaches the motorist's gasoline tank in the form of gasoline. That ratio must go higher.

"To bring a higher ratio, our engineers must design motors to fit fuels, and not demand special fuels to fit their designs."

That message was expressed recently to a session of the Big Four State convention of oil men, meeting in Kansas City, by W. A. James, advertising manager of the Hudson Motor Car Co. of Detroit, and by J. E. McLarty, service manager of the same company, the latter speaking particularly on technical aspects of motor car design and motor fuels. Several hundred oil men from Missouri, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska were present.

Fuel Terms Criticized.

"There are many confusing terms in the motor fuel trade, but none more contradictory than the phrase 'low grade fuel,'" Mr. James said. "The lay mind would believe from the term that this fuel has less energy value than the so-called 'high-tests' or the specially compounded fuels. As a matter of fact, the 'low grade' fuels have many more units of energy than have the special fuels of higher volatility and higher price.

"It is clearly in the public interest that motor cars shall be so designed that the refiners can get more gallons of motor car fuel from each barrel of crude oil, and so that motor car users thus can get more mileage from the oil resources of the country. Five years ago it was said the country had enough oil to last 1,000 years. But the use of motor cars has increased so fast that even if this estimate were correct at the time, which is very doubtful, the years might now have to be reduced to 50 or 100, or even less.

"Consider what is being done where petroleum is not available in such present lavish supply. In Germany, the engineers have made remarkable progress with Diesel engines which burn crude oil. These are no longer the extremely heavy, ponderous motors of a few years back. They are even used in airplanes.

"In the motor car field today we are on the way to designs which, like the Diesel, employ the principles of high compression and high temperature. We won't use crude oil for a long time at least, but gasoline need not be as highly volatile as it is now—a much higher percentage of crude oil will be in each gallon of gasoline the motorist buys. The power output of these engines of the future will be higher, performance smoother and standards of economy improved. Fuel will be the so-called 'low-grade.'

"The oil trade, as well as the public in general, may be thankful the automobile industry is so highly competitive. Some leading figures in the industry say today that there will be no price war. No, not a price war, but a war in advanced design, decidedly yes. Such a war is now on. It is a war to see which of the motor car organizations can muter its forces to give the public the greatest all-round value for its money. One aspect of that battle will be on the line of better use of standard motor fuels. Success in this war will depend on the resourcefulness of each individual set of engineers. They must produce motors with improved all-around performance, which will do their part in the conservation of the national oil supply.

Special Fuels Called Costly.

"Special fuels are essentially expensive. Each new special fuel costs the refiners millions in additional expense to produce. Such fuels mean extra pumps and extra tanks for the retailer, and extra handling expense as well for the jobber and the wholesaler. All this extra complication brings no extra volume to any one. The additional cost must all be passed on to the motorist or absorbed as a loss by the gasoline trade. The automobile business has been able to give its great values by standardization. It should support a similar principle of mass production in the gasoline trade by designing cars which will burn standard fuels."

Mr. McLarty said that probably the most effective and least adequately appreciated of all automobile services in the widespread universal number of gasoline service stations. He declared these stations are so important that they must be taken into calculation by every motor car designer. The public has come to take it for granted that gasoline and oil can be purchased in the most remote districts.

PEERLESS EXECUTIVE OFF TO LONDON SHOW

Believes American Automobile Manufacturers Can Learn Much in Europe.

In spite of the fact that European manufacturers now come to this country to learn the secrets of America's leadership in the world's automotive market, American manufacturers can learn things in the European factories, according to Leon R. German, vice president of the Peerless Motor Car Corporation.

"For instance," he said, "having an entirely different viewpoint and a totally different objective in mind, foreign engineers very often develop a feature that Americans might have overlooked in the very rush of the mass production to which America owes its leadership."

This statement was made on the eve of Mr. German's departure last Thursday for New York. He was to be joined there by Walter Zimmerman, Peerless export manager, the two men embarking for London on the White Star liner Olympic to attend the London Automobile Show where the Peerless exhibit has a conspicuous position.

After attending the brilliant array of cars in the annual British motor event, both Mr. Zimmerman and Mr. German plan an extended tour of the European countries, to visit the factories where European cars are made. Mr. Zimmerman particularly, it is said, plans to study automobile marketing conditions in Europe.

PROGRESS REGISTERED OVER QUARTER CENTURY

Demand for La Salle Is Said to Have Exceeded All Hopes of Company.

Motor-car makers must make use of every legitimate means in getting the message of their latest creations before the public, and the recent example of the Cadillac Motor Car Co. in resorting to radio to transmit photographs of the new Cadillac car around the world is an outstanding instance of the industry's enterprise in this respect, according to Rudolph Jose, president of the Washington Cadillac Co. The progressiveness of the Cadillac company in this regard, Mr. Jose points out, will stand as an example not only to the automotive industry but to all other manufacturing enterprises as well.

Pioneer Spirit Shown.

"The event symbolizes the spirit of pioneering that has been evident in the company's policy during its more than 25 years of motor-car manufacture," he says. "This unhesitant willingness to take the next forward step, whether it be in the engineering or the marketing of a new product, has been emphatically manifest in the Cadillac program for more than a quarter century. It has been reflected in many ways, and the use of the radio for transmitting a photograph of the latest Cadillac car is just another example of this attitude.

"This year, the silver anniversary year of the company, has been marked by two other events significant of this policy. The first was the introduction of the La Salle, companion car to the Cadillac, which in six months has achieved a success more phenomenal than its best wishers imagined. The second, of course, is the offering two weeks ago of the most luxurious, powerful and largest Cadillac ever built.

Progress Governed by Rules.

"Progress is a law to which industry must yield the utmost in obedience. That is emphatically true of the automobile industry. The manufacturer who attempts to resist the working of the law surrenders all chance for success. The one who yields to its demands reaps success. Every one who has observed the automobile industry's phenomenal growth will recognize the truth of this appraisal. The sluggard has dropped out very quickly in the arena that has nurtured the Nation's largest manufacturing endeavor.

"Cadillac is among the oldest of those which have survived. Each year has added to the company's success and those of us who have been associated with the company for many years attribute this growth to the fact that it never has been content to rest upon its cars but has gone on to constantly higher goals."

HIGHER SPEED WILL REDUCE ACCIDENTS, E. L. CORD ASSERTS

Auburn President Contends Slow Driving Does Not Mean Safe Driving.

STATISTICS ARE CITED TO PROVE CONTENTION

Faster Pace on Restricted Highways Makes for Greater Care by All.

"A greater speed on our public highways will reduce the death rate from auto accidents, through the development of more careful driving and more cautious pedestrians," says E. L. Cord, president of the Auburn Automobile Co.

"It is not logical to believe that slow driving means careful driving. In practically every city of any size in the United States automobile accident statistics will show that by far the greater number of accidents occur on the back and side streets, where there is but a small amount of traffic.

"Autoists driving down such thoroughfares as Michigan boulevard or Sheridan road, in Chicago, are known to make a speed of 35 miles per hour. Pedestrians, as well as autoists, in such densely settled districts, through years of experience, are taught to exercise extreme caution, coming to a stop before they cross such thoroughfares.

Speed Laws Antiquated.

"Present speed laws were enacted when we had four-cylinder, 30 horsepower automobiles, weighing 5,000 pounds. These cars were built high, were dangerous on quick turns and slow to pick up.

"Modern construction has incorporated every advanced mechanical appliance to make automobiles both speedier and safer. Low center of gravity construction today practically eliminates the danger of overturning, cars can pick up faster and motors of 60 to 80 horsepower and four-wheel brakes make it possible to keep your car under complete control at all times. These mechanical perfections reduce traffic accident possibilities to the minimum.

"Main highways should be kept open for fast driving. Drivers should be educated to respect these main highways by coming to a stop when entering from a side road. There are few, if any, fatal accidents on highways dedicated to fast driving. Autoists should respect such a right-of-way as much as they now hesitate at crossing a railway track.

Must Solve Problem.

"I would, however, differentiate between fast driving and reckless driving. There is a wide variance. Even stricter laws should be passed to curb the reckless and inexperienced driver. Every precaution should be taken to protect life and limb.

"The population of this country is increasing at a rapid pace. More people are daily seeking the use of the streets in both the social and business walks of life. People travel further in the conduct of their business each year as cities expand.

"We can not evade the traffic issue. It is ever with us. We must find a solution. And that solution may be found in wider streets, better pavements and a systematic arrangement of streets to include certain highways for faster travel."

Hidden Quarry Found In the Heart of Paris

Paris, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Ancient, underground stone quarries, in the heart of Paris, are to be the ready-made wine cellar of a big new hotel on the Champs Elysees.

When excavating, the builders discovered the old quarry, so they supported its roof with pillars and the hotel is being built on it. Instead of excavating for a wine cellar, which must be deep in the ground where the temperature is even, the quarry will be used.

There was no opening to the forgotten quarry anywhere near the hotel site. Apparently the stone was carried out somewhere about the Trocadero palace, about a mile away, say archeologists who knew that there was such a great cavern, most of which has been filled either purposely, sometime in the past, or by the settling of the ground above.

AUTOMATIC MOTOR Protection

in the fight against COLD

Closes Itself

when your motor needs heat.

Opens Itself

when your motor needs cool air.

AT 60° Fahrenheit — cold, the destroyer, strikes at the very heart of your motor. And until temperatures go well above 60° in the spring, your motor is in constant danger.

You may not know when damage occurs until spring finds you paying a big repair bill. One hour of neglect may bring such damage.

Thus—it is a serious mistake to trust motor protection to memory. It must be automatic—timed with scientific exactness to the operation of your motor—leaving no chance to guess or forget.

Be safe this year—take the advice of leading car authorities and equip your car at the first sign of cold with Pines Automatic Winterfront—the only automatic radiator shutter on the market.

Winterfront ends danger of cold—automatically

With a Winterfront on your car, you "warm-up" in seconds. You lose the dangerous cold-weather "choke" habit. Your motor starts quicker and easier with less battery strain. You enjoy a noticeable increase in gasoline economy, —snug warmth inside your car—summer-time smoothness and flexibility in your motor.

Put on in ten minutes

Drive in today. It takes but ten minutes to give your motor this vital protection. Models for all cars — priced $22.50 to $30.00. Special models for Ford, $15.00; Chevrolet, $17.50; Dodge Four, $20.00.

WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT . . BUICK WILL BUILD THEM

BUICK for 1928

Greater than ever to drive more delightful than ever to ride in

Buick has always been noted for its thrilling performance, and now important improvements in Buick's famous Valve-in-Head six-cylinder engine provide an all-around brilliancy of action never before known in cars of Buick's price.

Get-away that takes the lead in traffic . . . power that laughs at hills . . . all contribute to the joys of owning a Buick for 1928. And of even greater importance is Buick's remarkable new flexibility — its almost human response to the will of the driver.

Moreover, both driver and passengers find new luxury in this new Buick. Hydraulic shock absorbers, front and rear—integrally designed with springs and chassis—smooth away all road imperfections. Seats are built like easy chairs to provide restful riding ease, though the trip be of all-day duration. And Buick's new double-drop frame cradles the body and imparts matchless roadability through its lowered center of gravity—thus adding still further to the joys of Buick travel.

Drive a Buick for 1928 today. A few miles will convince you that these new Buicks are greater than ever to drive — more delightful than ever to ride in!

6 cylinder high compression snap and performance

15% Roomier without unwieldiness

Every convenience for women including starter on the instrument board

Compact for easy parking

The things all wanted – and at a price for all

The outright issue of what buyers want decides all car success today. On that basis, for the first nine months Essex has outsold any other "Six" at or near its price, almost two to one. It reflects overwhelming preference for the things Essex gives:

Super-Six Smoothness and Dash—High-compression Power and Performance—Size and Roominess without Unwieldiness—Steady Riding without Useless Weight. 50 miles an hour all day long—and far greater speed when wanted—Riding Ease Like Gliding. Economy of Price, Operation and Maintenance.

Essex has made it vividly clear that compromise short of 6-cylinder luxury is not economy; and that greater price can buy no higher degree of mechanical fineness.

Its Super-Six motor develops more than 2½ times the power its size ordinarily rates it. It converts waste heat to power and gives the brilliant efficiency of high-compression performance, with an economy of fuel that is astounding.

With flashing pick-up and positive brake action you drive fast with safety in traffic. And with the physical restfulness of its smooth, vibrationless performance, you have also the mental ease of perfect braking safety, and instant, easy steering control.

In five beautiful and colorful bodies, handsomely finished and appointed, it meets every requirement of utility, convenience, fine appearance and pride of ownership.

NATIONAL MUSEUM

Henry B. Collins, jr., of the National Museum, returned Saturday from an exploration in Nunivak Island, Alaska. Dale Stewart, who visited the island with Collins, returned last week. Collins reports a successful season among the little modified Eskimo of the island. Many points on the west coast of Alaska were visited and collections made.

Herbert W. Krieger, department of anthropology, National Museum, has returned from an exploration on the Yukon River, in Alaska, and on the Columbia River, in Washington, for the Smithsonian. Krieger reports that the Yukon was in flood and hindered excavations, but that he did considerable ethnological work at Anvik, collecting a series of masks and many notes on habits and customs. In continuing the work on the Columbia he obtained a great amount of valuable archeological material.

David G. Hall, of the Arkansas experiment station, spent the latter half of September at the National Museum studying muscoid flies of the genus Sarcophaga. Hall has been working in this field for several years and has some extensive papers in preparation which will include the description of a considerable amount of material in the museum.

Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Lewcock, of Australia, spent a week in Washington recently and were visitors at the National Herbarium. Mr. Lewcock has been doing special work on the diseases of the cactus at the University of Wisconsin and at Cornell University. He has been sent to this country to assist in discovering some disease that will be of assistance in controlling the spread of the optunia, which has becomes a pest in this country.

C. E. Resser and R. S. Bassler, of the department of geology, National Museum, have returned from two months' field work in the Rocky Mountain region of both the United States and Canada, where they obtained certain stratigraphic information necessary to complete an extended work upon the region by Dr. Walcott. Fairly good weather and a season unusually free from forest fires allowed them to cover a much greater area than first planned, so that in addition to completing the main work of the trip, they were able to make reconnaissances into new areas and to plan for future work on the cambrian of Western North America.

Dr. W. F. Foshag, of the division of mineralogy, National Museum, has returned after four months spent in the mining regions of Mexico, particularly in the states of Guanaguato, Zacatecas, Chihuahua, Durango and Sonora. Chihuahua, Durango and Sonora. Some 35 boxes of specimens, the result of the trip, have been received at the museum. Among the specimens is a group of 15 large gypsum crystals to be used in a reconstructed portion of the famous gypsum caves at Naica, Chihuahua.

Dr. Frank Springer, associate in paleontology in the National Museum, and the leading authority on fossil crinoids, died September 22. R. S. Bassler, of the department of geology of the museum, represented the Smithsonian Institute at the funeral held in Philadelphia. Dr. Springer willed to the museum his large and valuable collection of crinoids, probably the finest collection in the world.

ON DISPLAY HERE

The Warrington Motor Car Co. are this week displaying the Auburn sedan, which recently, at the Atlantic City Speedway, was one of the three cars to participate in the longest nonstop run any automobile ever made—15,000 miles. After skidding off the track at 70 miles an hour, in a driving rain, breaking the body and roof, it was patched up to finish the 15,000-mile grind.

Its average, while running, was 67.62 miles per hour. Because of the loss of fenders and work on the radiator, the A. A. A., under whose sanction the test was held, refused to credit any records to this particular 8-88 Auburn sedan.

Upper picture shows the car back on the track; middle illustration, skidding off the track into the water, where just the top of it can be seen in the bottom picture.

GULF REFINING COMPANY

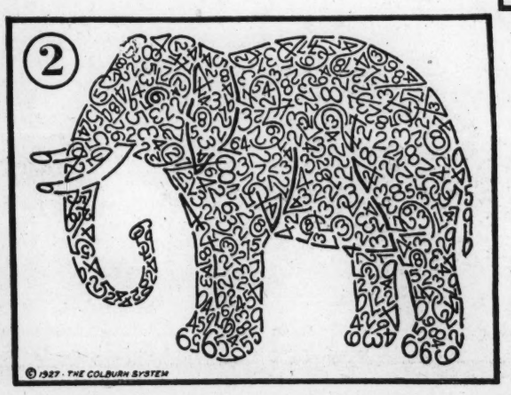

The Caravan Arrives Nov. 3rd

For the Winners of The Post's Five Thousand Dollar

ELEPHANT PUZZLE CONTEST

Forty Awards Based on Accuracy, Perseverance and Personal Effort. One of these may be yours.

Silks, Satins, Spices, Ivory, Scents and Precious Stones. Everything the Caravans of Arabia Contained, and More, are Coming to You in This Cash Caravan.

The Problem

The sum total of the figures on each of the four elephants pictured herewith are all different with the exception of two of the elephants. These two elephants weigh identically the same and they are twins. You can find them by adding up the figures on each of the elephants and the two with the same sum total are the twins.

The figures "1" to "4" in the circles in the upper left-hand corners of the elephants are simply to identify them. These figures have nothing to do with the elephants' weights. In submitting your solution you must identify the twins by their numbers and give the correct weight of each. Solutions to be properly classified to win must give the correct weight of each twin as well as to correctly identify them by their numbers. This is a game of skill and not a guessing contest.

There are no "ones" or "ciphers" in the elephants. There are no groups of figures—that is, the figure 9 is the highest figure shown. There are no "23s," "55s," "97s" or like groups. If you find a "2" and a "3" are written so closely together that it looks like "23," it means that the "2" and "3" are to be added just as you would if they were an inch apart. There are no figures in the pictures except in the bodies of the elephants. The tops of the sixes are distinctly curved, and the bottom of the nines are straight, or nearly so. There is no trick or illusion in the charts.

General Rules of Contest

This contest is open to residents of the District of Columbia and the States of Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia. No one directly or indirectly associated with The Washington Post or members of their families will be allowed to participate in this contest.

Contestants may submit as many different solutions as they desire, provided a payment of one of the amounts designated in the list of awards shall accompany each solution, but no contestant will be permitted to win more than one award. Once registered a solution can not be changed.

The Washington Post offers these awards for individual efforts. While it is proper for members of one household to work together, or several friends, it is not permissible for more than one of those working in unison to send a solution of the puzzle. When in the judgment of the Contest Manager more than one member of the same family, or more than one of any number of persons he believes have worked together, send in a solution of the puzzle, the right is reserved to refund the amount of money paid for subscriptions and return the solutions he believes have been submitted contrary to the rules. The Washington Post reserves the right to reject any solution which it believes has not been submitted under proper conditions. The Washington Post also reserves the right to finally decide any other questions or points which may arise and those entering the contest agree to abide by such decisions.

In case of ties, as many awards will be reserved as there are people tied, before any awards are awarded for a less correct solution; that is, if three or more people should tie on the best solution, the first three or more awards will be reserved for them and they will be awarded in order of the standing of their solutions of the second puzzle. That is, the best solution will be awarded the first award, the next best, the second, and third best the third award, etc.

Important Facts to Remember

While the amount you pay with a solution of the puzzle does not have any effect on your winning an award, it does affect the amount you will receive should you win, as the value of these awards is determined by what the winners submit in subscription money. This is explained in the awards list, which you should study carefully before sending in your solution.

The time a solution is received has no bearing upon its winning an award. Accuracy is what counts.

Not more than one award will be awarded to any one person.

Subscription Rates

City By Carrier—6 Months
Daily Only $3.00 Sunday Only $1.20
Daily and Sunday $4.20
Outside City By Mail—6 Months
Daily Only $3.50 Sunday Only $1.50
Daily and Sunday $5.00

Closing Date

All solutions must be mailed or delivered to The Washington Post office on or before midnight, Thursday, November 3, 1927. Solutions bearing postmark of that date will be accepted.

Extra Charts and Subscription Blanks Obtainable From the Contest Manager.

Deciding Ties—If Any

In case of ties those tied for any award will be presented with a second puzzle, which will consist of drawing a line across the face of a chart of figures, like the accompanying chart only larger, so that the figures thus connected when added together will total the greatest sum. If necessary this chart will be used five times, after which, should any ties remain, each contestant will receive full value of any award tied for.

In case there are no ties on counting elephants no other puzzle, of course, will be presented.

Stole His Millionaire Father's Young Bride

How Dashing Moreton Gwinnett-Sharp Fell Madly in Love With His 17-Year Old Stepmother the Day She Married His Dad and Finally Carried Her Off to an English Inn

Mrs. Loftus G. Gwinnett-Sharp photographed at a fashionable English race meet with Moreton Gwinnett-Sharp, the stepson who took her away from his wealthy father.

LONDON.

WHEN the middle-aged widower, Loftus G. Gwinnett-Sharp, one of the wealthiest men in England, dazzled the parents of pretty Doreen Paxton with his millions, and thus succeeded in acquiring her, as he had acquired everything else he desired—his riches, his social position and his magnificent estates in Hertforshire—his 23-year-old son, Moreton, prepared to hate and despise the girl stepmother.

"Interloper! Gold-digger! Fortune-hunter! Adventuress!"

Such were the terms in which he thought and spoke of his father's fiancee. He considered that the old gentleman was making a fool of himself. He considered that Doreen was making a fool of him. And so indignant was he at the whole affair that at first he refused to attend the wedding.

Doreen was only 17 when the millionaire discovered her and felt that he would like to add her to his list of valuable possessions. Her father, a scholarly but scantily paid schoolmaster, was an amateur gardener of repute, and since this was a hobby shared by Mr. Gwinnett-Sharp, the millionaire decided to consult him. Both at this time were trying to grow a purple rose. Neither had succeeded, but Mr. Gwinnett-Sharp had heard it rumored at the famous horticultural show, in London, that Paxton's blossom was a shade nearer purple than his. Hence a letter, followed by an appointment.

He then proposed staying till he was better, telling Doreen and her father that the vibration of motoring home would be too painful for him.

The embarrassed host wondered how on earth he was going to entertain the man of millions. But he didn't have to do much entertaining, after all, for Mr. Gwinnett-Sharp seemed perfectly content to sit and watch the fair Doreen.

She had lived all her life in a quiet country place, and Mr. Gwinnett-Sharp excited her imagination with tales of the great cities—London, Paris, Rome, New York. He told her of the dances, the supper parties, the races he attended. He talked of great people, spoke familiarly of the titled men and women whose names fill the newspapers. In short, he opened up a new and fairylike world to the simple country girl whose amusements hitherto had not exceeded an occasional concert or slide-illustrated lecture.

Loftus G. Gwinnett-Sharp, though well on in his sixties, was still an imposing and rather striking figure. He was quite the strongest personality the child had known.

His sprained ankle did not improve rapidly. It was two weeks before he departed. But when he left he had Doreen's promise that in a few weeks' time they would be married.

Gentle, sweet and obedient, the girl had seldom said no to anything she was asked to do. She knew nothing of love, but reflected that it would be unkind to refuse that nice old gentleman when he asked her to marry him. So she had said, "Yes, Mr. Gwinnett-Sharp," in her unconsciously docile way, and the millionaire felt as though he had won a great battle.

It created a sensation in society when the millionaire announced his forthcoming wedding to a girl of 17, and St. Margaret's, Westminster, was crowded with fashionable friends of the bridegroom when Doreen, looking as though she were going to be confirmed rather than married, was led to the altar.

There had been an eleventh-hour reconciliation between father and son, and young Moreton Gwinnett-Sharp saw his lovely stepmother for the first time in church.

As his eyes rested upon the beautiful bride, a terrible, an appalling thing happened—the millionaire bridegroom's son fell in love with his father's wife!

The honeymoon held every element of which a young girl might have dreamed, save one, and that the most important—romance. Mr. Gwinnett-Sharp lavished money on his lovely girl-wife, indulged her every whim, dressed her like a queen, but he remained Mr. Gwinnett-Sharp.

Mr. Gwinnett-Sharp found it impossible to be ardent with her. She was altogether too innocent, too childlike. He tried to accustom her to calling him "Loftus," but, despite her efforts, "Yes, Mr. Gwinnett-Sharp," would rush to her lips, whenever he addressed her. She kissed him occasionally, but when she did so, it was with the guileless, unexciting embrace of an affectionate daughter.

Such was the marital relations of the millionaire and his wife when he took her to his Hertfordshire estates, where Moreton awaited their arrival.

The weather was damp, and the elderly husband promptly developed acute rheumatism. He was practically imprisoned in his room, crippled with pain, less than a month after they had come home. He had important affairs to attend to, and men of business were in and out nearly all day long, so that Doreen saw little of him, though she nursed him as much as he would let her. At night, he was too tired to go out with her, or to amuse her.

Young Moreton, meanwhile, had avoided his girl stepmother as though her smile contained deadly poison, and her touch meant death.

The millionaire did not fail to note this conduct, and, realizing that it added to the monotony of Doreen's life, became vexed with his son. He sent for him. He told him that he resented his treatment of the girl, and asked him to take her out, to teach her how to drive the car, how to ride to hounds, how to dance.

Moreton sulkily promised. Next day, he asked her if she would like to learn the Charleston.

Young Moreton struggled against the passion that was consuming him. But their hands would meet, their eyes would gaze into each other's, words were always palpitating on their lips.

"We went through months of torture," sobbed Doreen, in court.

And then, at last, Fate took a hand in the affairs of the middle-aged millionaire, his girl-wife and his beloved son. All three had accepted an invitation to a dinner party and dance at an estate some distance away. At the last moment, Mr. Gwinnett-Sharp was laid low by his old enemy, rheumatism. He insisted, however, that his son accompany his wife.

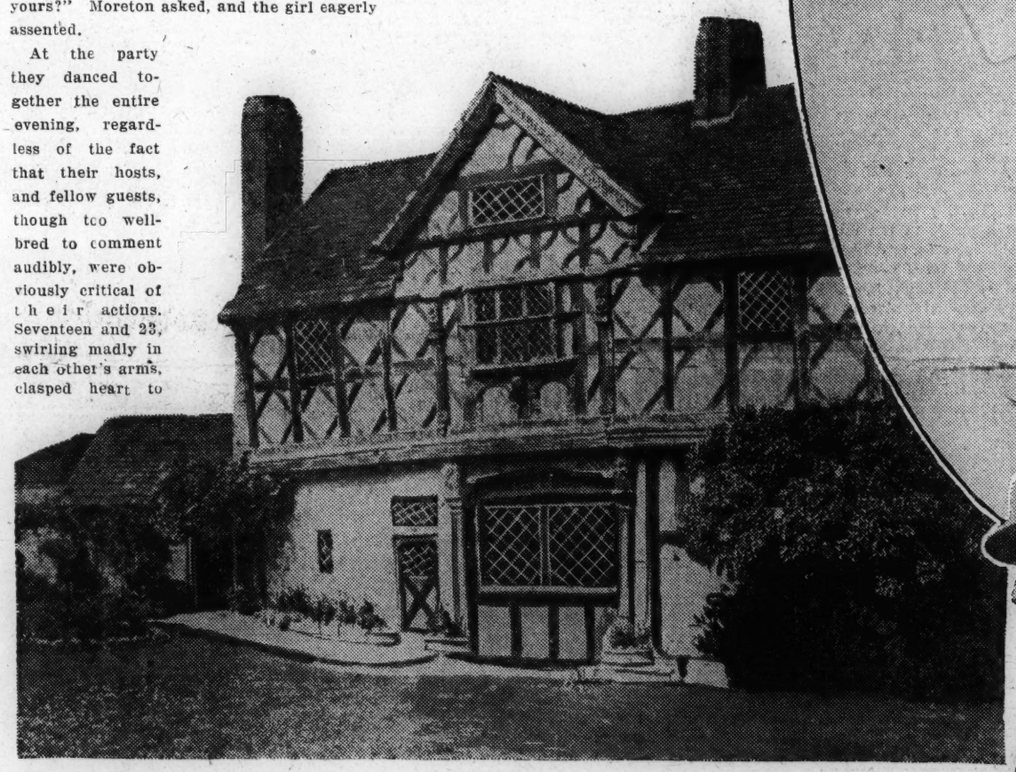

"Shall we do some speeding in my car, instead of letting the chauffeur drive us in yours?" Moreton asked, and the girl eagerly assented.

At the party they danced together the entire evening, regardless of the fact that their hosts, and fellow guests, though too well-bred to comment audibly, were obviously critical of their actions. Seventeen and 23, swirling madly in each other's arms, clasped heart to heart, their bodies swaying to the same intoxicating rhythm, the same song of love in their souls.

They started for home at about half past one in the morning. They had a two-hours' ride before them. The car broke down exactly four miles from anywhere, and 35 miles from home. It was a lovely moonlight night, and the country absolutely deserted. They decided to walk as far as the nearest inn. Four miles of moonlight, four miles of loneliness—four miles of love.

They reached the inn at last. Moreton, unable any longer to resist his longing for the lovely girl at his side, boldly registered "Mr. and Mrs. Gwinnett-Sharp."

Mr. Gwinnett-Sharp has been up all night, tortured by horrid visions of accidents, of his son maimed, his lovely wife dead. He had ordered his auto at dawn, and had ridden toward the house where the young people had dined the night before. He had found the deserted machine on the road. From there, he had easily traced Doreen and Moreton. Concealment was impossible. The truth had to be told.

The quaint old English inn where Loftus G. Gwinnett-Sharp found his girl wife and his son registered as a married couple.

"Did your wife confess?" demanded counsel, of the millionaire, in court.

"I said to her, 'Is my son your lover?' and she said, 'Yes, Mr. Gwinnett-Sharp'—just as she had said it, by Heaven, when I asked her to marry me!"

The scene must have been dreadful indeed. The betrayed man invoked curses on his son, and on his wife, and upon himself. But his rage was easier to bear than his grief.

"He said I had broken his heart," whispered Doreen, in court, "And I said, 'I don't understand. I always did everything you wanted. I've always been very fond of you—as fond of you as I am of daddy. I still am. I really love you, Mr. Gwinnett-Sharp. But not in the way I do Moreton.

"'It's different. But I don't see why you are angry with me.'"

"What occurred after that?" asked her husband's lawyer.

"I turned to Moreton and said, 'Mr. Gwinnett-Sharp always liked us to be together and to be friends. Why is he so cross because we love one another now?' Then my husband cried out, 'CROSS! Good God! I've a mind to murder both of you!' Then Moreton told me to leave the room, and I heard him say, 'You must blame me entirely, sir. Doreen didn't understand and she doesn't, even now.' I didn't then," she continued, "But I do today. And, oh, I am so sorry, so terribly grieved for my husband!"

If the millionaire's marriage to be a seventeen-year-old bride had startled society, it was nothing to the sensation created by the news that Mr. Gwinnett-Sharp was seeking a divorce, citing his own son as corespondent.

The boy and his stepmother did not contest the case. Doreen told her story, at the preliminary proceedings, but did not go into the witness-box to deny the accusations of her husband.

"I, too, am sorry for the petitioner," said Mr. Justice Swift, "and I am sorry for this unfortunate boy who was put into a position of great temptation. I am extremely sorry, also, for the respondent."

The young couple, according to law, may now marry. But, however intense their love, however overwhelming their passion, their lives must be haunted forever by the shadow of the elderly millionaire, father of one, and husband of the other, now disillusioned and alone, dragging out an embittered and sorrow-stricken old age.

DESTROYING FEAR

The recent child psychology experiments described by Dr. John B. Watson in the November McCall's, show that dangerous fears may be bred by sudden sharp noises such as slamming doors and yelling "don't" at children. He says:

"In my hands I have a steel bar about an inch in diameter and about four feet long, and a carpenter's hammer. The child is sitting up looking at the attendant. I hold the steel bar about a foot behind his head where he can't see me. I rap the steel bar sharply with the hammer. The picture changes immediately. First a whimper, a sudden catching of the breath, a stiffening of the whole body, a pulling of the hands to the side, then a cry, then tears. I bang it again. The reaction becomes still more pronounced. He cries out loud, rolls over to his side and begins to crawl away as rapidly as possible.

"Suppose I let him sit quietly on a blanket placed over his mattress. He may be very still, just dozing, or he may be playing eagerly with a toy. Suddenly I jerk the blanket, pull his support from under him. This sudden loss of support produces almost the same reaction as the loud sound. I haven't hurt him by pulling the blanket. He falls over from his sitting position 50 times a day and never whimpers. Your training has nothing to do with the fear he shows at loud sound and loss of support, nor will any training ever completely remove the potency of these things to call out fears.

"How do the parents build in fears? In the simplest kinds of ways. Just think of the noises in the home. Let me enumerate a few of them. Your child has shown a little unwillingness to go to bed. This has hampered your own movements a bit, and you slam the door when you go out. You want your child to live in a well-ventilated room; you open all the windows, on a breezy night. Before you get to the door, it slams. In the night when the child is sleeping soundly the shade falls down or the screen placed around its crib falls over. Doors slam all over, the house on windy nights, pots and pans are dropped.

"The parents' 'don't' is the most potent factor of all in producing both fear and negative responses. Have you, as a parent, ever stopped to consider how many times a day you use 'don't?' Do you know that when you use it you are using a mighty sledge hammer for molding fear and other negative reactions in your child?"

Killed BY THE Fate That Cheated HER OF Happiness

How Isadora Duncan, the Famous Classic Dancer, Went to an Unexpected and Horrible Death Just When She Seemed About to Find Peace and Contentment

A favorite photograph of Isadora Duncan as she appeared a few weeks before her tragic end in Paris.

ISADORA DUNCAN, world-famous exponent of the Greek dance, whose diaphanous draperies and bare, pink toes outraged Broadway twenty years ago, whose renown as a "red" in Russia was at one time as international as her terpsichorean abilities, lived a life that was never all music and gayety and joy.

The path she trod was one lined with more thorns than roses.. If she laughed merrily during the years that she was appearing on the best stages of the world, she wept tragically more often.

Poverty lived with her for a long time, and when financial success came at last, heartbreak in love followed in its wake. She was married only once to a young Russian poet who held a vodka bottle in his hand with a great deal more fervor than he held his poetical pen. Inevitably, a divorce cut Isadora's matrimonial bonds.

A few weeks ago—at the age of 43—no longer the slim, lithe, dance-loving Isadora—the woman who set the tongues of many nations wagging, reached out once more for happiness which had so many times eluded her.

Her engagement to Robert Winthrop Chanler, noted New York artist, former husband of Lina Cavalieri, grand opera star, and as colorful a figure in the art circles of two hemispheres as Isadora herself, was announced. Isadora was seeking once more for heart's ease and happiness.

But it was not to be. Fate had another cruel blow—the last one—for Isadora in her keeping.

"I am afraid that some quick accident might happen," Isadora said in Nice, Italy, the day after the announcement of her engagement.

Those were prophetic words. For Isadora Duncan is dead. She never reached the corner around which she thought happiness might be waiting after a lifetime of disappointment.

Her death was as tragic as most of her life had been. Less than 48 hours after the public was informed that she and "Bob" Chanler were to go to the altar together, the famous dancer died under the wheels of an automobile she was planning to purchase. And it was one of the immense iridescent silk scarfs which she was in the habit of wearing, that hurled her to her death.

The dancer had entered the automobile, and neither she nor the chauffeur noticed that one of the ends of the scarf fell outside over the edge of the car and was caught in one of the rear wheels. When the automobile was started Isadora was pulled from the car, and crashed on the street. One of the wheels passed over her body before the car could be stopped. Isadora Duncan was picked up dead, her neck and one arm broken, the scarf tight about her throat. The last cruel blow had been dealt.

Isadora and Serge Yessenin, the wayward young Russian poet she married in a vain attempt to find happiness.

Isadora's life was a bizarre and gaudy one. A searcher after beauty, she encountered many hardships on the journey. The public prints used thousands of columns to chronicle the doings of the light-footed dancer, who, when she first appeared in Manhattan, was hooted as an "upstart" because she preferred to whirl upon bare toes, and who later became "the thing." For several years, everybody who was anybody went to see Isadora dance.

Dancing was an obsession with her. She lived in Chicago when a child, and in her early girlhood attracted the attention of Augustin Daly, long foremost among the dramatic managerial figures in this country, who encouraged her to come to New York.

Those were lean days—those first months in Manhattan. So little money was there then in the Duncan purse that she walked to rehearsals and went without luncheons. Her mother and two brothers accompanied her here, and the burden of supporting the entire family rested on the slight shoulders of the little girl who was scheduled in later years to astound the world.

New York did not at once recognize that here was a dancer far more gifted than the others with whom she shared ensemble honors. But Isadora herself knew that she was more graceful, more rhythmic in her steppings than her sisters of the stage. She decided to go to Europe. It was after months of saving, that at last a ticket on a cattle boat was purchased and Isadora with her family said good-by to these shores and set sail for London.

The English metropolis acclaimed her. Paris, later, too, worshiped at her feet. And when Isadora finally returned to New York she was welcomed with open arms.

But New York gasped the first few times it saw Isadora walk down Broadway in unstockinged feet, wearing a pink gown of classical lines, a poke bonnet, tied under the chin with long ribbons, and sandals of Greek fashion. Crowds followed her everywhere.

When she appeared on the stage without tights, audiences were thunderstruck. But she was so radiant, so graceful, that they forgave her, after a while, though she was 20 years ahead of her time. New York did not know then that a few years afterward the little girls who dance in rhythmic rows behind the footlights would all be stockingless.

When Isadora returned to Europe again to gain new triumphs she opened schools of dancing in England, France, Italy. Even the late King Edward showed a deep interest in her work. She was constantly becoming more successful.

No one knew of the heart-break that was Isadora's at that time. No one even knew that she had been in love, until the death of her two children, Deidre, 5 years old, and Patrick, 4, was announced.

The children went to their deaths in the River Seine, in April, 1913, when a limousine driven by Isadora's chauffeur toppled over the bridge. The children and their governess were drowned like cats in a bag before aid could be given them.

The dancer would not tell who was the father of Deidre and Patrick. For a long time she devoted herself to the care of the sick and announced that she would no longer dance. But the call of the footlights was too strong, and trying to forget her tragedy, Isadora, more radiant than ever, reappeared on the stage in the dances which made her more famous than ever.

Then the dancer began to interest herself in Russia and the Soviet. She visited Lenine in Moscow, and was offered a palace in which to start a dancing school for the children of the commissars.

Her studio in the Russian city was famous for informal parties. To one of them came one night blond, boyish-looking Serge Yessenin, the "poet laureate of Soviet Russia," and protege of Lenine.

"Love has come to me at last," Isadora is quoted as saying at that time.

And so Isadora and the champagne-drinking, vodka-loving poet were married in May, 1922, when she was 37 and her husband, ten years her junior.

Serge graced her parties. He recited poetry for Isadora's guests and drank a great deal. More than was good for him, and more than was good for the comfort of the guests. Invariably, he started an old-fashioned barroom brawl, and soon, fewer and fewer of the dancer's admirers came to her lavishly furnished studio.

The dancing school in Moscow was not paying very well either. It was hard to get tuition fees from the commissars. So Isadora decided to come back to America, and garner a few good American dollars. In October, 1922, she and Serge arrived in New York.

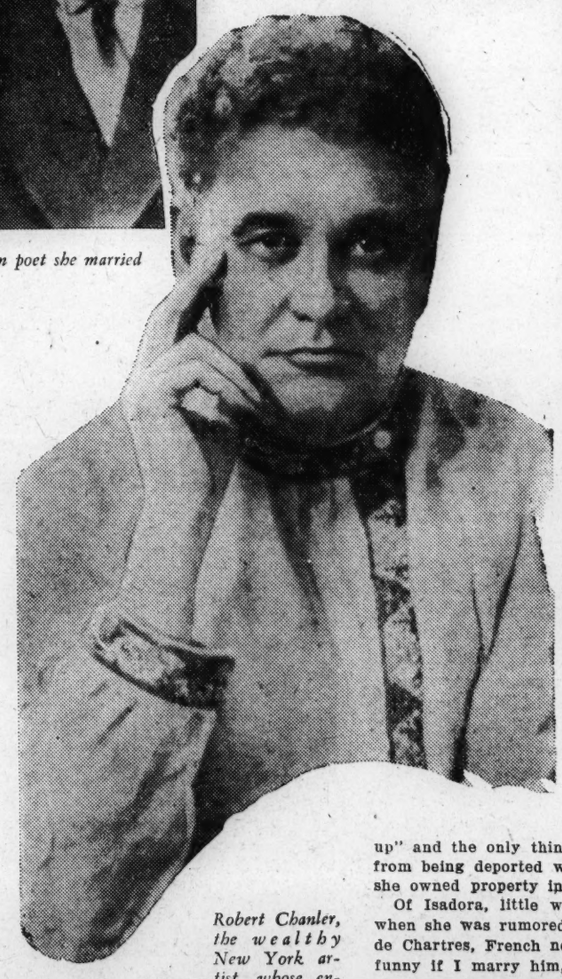

They were held up in port, for the "Russian ideas" of the dancer had become known here. Finally, the authorities permitted Isadora to enter the country—but her troubles had only begun.

In a New York hotel, Serge threw what Isadora called an "epileptic fit." He hurled empty gin bottles out of the window, smashed the furniture, and ran screaming down the corridors in the middle of the night. At a party in the Bronx, it is said, Serge got gloriously drunk and gave his dancing wife two black eyes.

When Isadora went to Boston, soon after her arrival, to fulfill an engagement, the mayor of that city barred the "Red" dancer from the stage. Misfortune dogged her steps. And Serge kept right on "raising Cain."

In Chicago, Isadora, empty of purse and heartbroken because of the treatment she had received in America, decided to go "home" again, vowing that never more would she set foot upon these shores. On borrowed money she purchased passage and took her Serge back to Russia.

Serge, after his divorce in February, 1924, married a granddaughter of Tolstoy, the great Russian writer, and finally committed suicide by cutting his wrists and hanging himself in Leningrad, in December, 1925. Previously he had been kicked out of France by the authorities for his "cutting-up" and the only thing that saved Isadora from being deported with him was because she owned property in France at the time.

Robert Chanler, the wealthy New York artist, whose engagement to Isadora Duncan was rumored only a few days before she was killed.

Of Isadora, little was heard until 1926, when she was rumored engaged to the Duc de Chartres, French nobleman. "It will be funny if I marry him," said Isadora. But she never took the "comical" step.

Isadora last appeared in the newspapers in January, when she was rescued from the sea at Nice by a young British army officer. Press dispatches stated she had tried to drown herself, because she was despondent over her poverty.

Last November, her beautiful home at Neuilly had been sold to pay her debts, although her friends tried to save it in order to establish an Isadora Duncan Memorial School of Dancing, to be continued after her death.

Up and down—up and down—thus rose and fell the fortunes of "The Duncan." And she never really found the happiness she sought up to the moment of her horrible death.

It seemed as if ill-luck had tired of haunting her that day when her engagement was announced. Friends of the dancer whose eyes always had a stricken look, said: "Now she will be happy at last."

A photograph of Isadora Duncan taken at the height of her world-wide fame as an exponent of the classic Greek dance.

For had she lived to marry "Bob" Chanler, Isadora's poor day would have been over. She might have come to America once more to be mistress of the artist's luxuriously furnished apartment in Gramercy Park section of New York. She might have traveled in the best circles of Manhattan society. She might have lived "happily ever after" with "Bob" Chanler.

SHOWMEN OF CHINA

PEKING showmen, unlike beggars and rickshaw coolies and sweet potato vendors, are not to be found on any street corner. They have to be sought out in favorite haunts at the back of bazaars, near the railway platform, or behind some ancient temple, wherever a Chinese crowd is apt to gather.

Favored spots for the outdoor entertainer are temple fairs, held at certain phases of the moon for the mutual getting together of buyer and seller from both city and country. Great walled courts of the temples are crowded with Chinese of all classes bent on buying anything from a woven grass well bucket to a singing lark. There are booths of calico prints, artificial flowers and pink lemondae, says the National Geographic Society. In the narrow lanes between rows of temporary shops portly gentlemen in silk robes, elbow flappers in purple pajamas and dirty-faced urchins in blue denim trousers with nothing above.

The visitor's progress is abruptly ended by a solid wall of indifferently passive human backs. Indignant pushes of knee and elbow merely produce abstracted but good-natured grunts. It is clear that attention of the owners of the backs is centered in complete absorption on some object beyond. With Yankee persistence one pushes a way to the fore.

A clear space occupies the middle of an encircling crowd. In this impromptu ring stands a sawhorse surmounted by an upturned teacup. Atop the teacup an agile urchin of eight or nine years is performing contortionist stunts that make the onlookers' bones creak in sympathy. Both feet go behind his ears while he stands on one hand, meantime convulsing his audience by a series of comic faces. This lad is a finished actor, as is also the aged vagabond who accompanies him and passes the hat.

Further on another entertainer has taken advantage of a projecting temple platform to rig up a rude stage. Before it is the largest audience of all, for here is the story teller, best loved of China's showman tribe, an old man whose ragged clothes do not belie the superior intelligence of a mobile face. Here and there he darts and gestures in dramatic interpretation of an endless tale he is unfolding in a high pitched singsong voice to spellbound hearers. Totally ignorant of the Chinese language, the visitor can almost follow the sequence of events by combined watching of the old monologuist's dramatics and responsive expressions on faces in the crowd. Such story tellers have amused Chinese listeners for over two thousand years.

Signboards That Stop Suicides

"WAIT a minute—if you are overcome with perplexities, come to your mother's home. Mme. Takeyo Takahama."

The above words, printed in black on a huge white sign erected by the Bank of Lake Suwa, Nagano, in Japan, have cheated the green waters of Suwa of scores of lovely victims—young girls desiring death.

The troubled eyes of many a Japanese working girl, who journeyed to the lake for the purpose of committing suicide, have read the words. A moment's indecision—and then, taking the sign's advice, a trip to the social worker, Mme. Takeyo Takahama, to pour forth her woes to that sympathetic listener. Another would-be suicide saved from a watery grave.

The sign is Japan's newest and most effective effort to stem the suicidal wave that has during the past few years swept through the silk factories near Nagano. Each year, despondent, unhappy in the hard work they had to do at the silk factories, some 40 girls jumped into Lake Suwa and eternity, before the sign was erected.

In the old Japanese town, with its shabby little thatch-roofed cottages, the old inhabitants say that the level of the lake actually has been raised by the number of working girls who went to their deaths there.

Latest Styles From Fashion Centers

Paris Describes Perfect Costume.

Paris.—(A.P.).—A model costume can not make a well-dressed woman, even if she is beautiful, Parisian style makers warn women over and over. It takes gowns, plus wraps, plus hats, shoes, stockings, gloves, handbags, and jewelry to make an ideally dressed woman today, they say.

To all those things, Paul Poiret adds "Plus personality" and Lucien Lelong tacks "and good make-up." M. Jacques Worth, head of the dressmakers association in Paris, makes one more condition. He adds, "and lots of time."

What the well-dressed woman adds to the costume she buys for the foundation of her clothes furnishes thousands of Parisian men and women with employment. Each season the entire fashion trade is affected by the general changes in line, color and idea.

This season, with a change to more feminine effects the small things which include handbags, jewelry, gloves, have all made corresponding changes. Colors are always influenced by the dressmaking schemes. Beige, blues, greens, dark reds and black predominate in the side-line trades.

Paris still has one general rule—things should be of the same color tone. The woman who follows that rule will be fairly safe.

Neckpieces Of Fox Autumn Favorites.

Paris.—(A.P.).—The great popularity of fox fur in all forms is one of the style points of autumn. Particularly with tailored suits is fox of importance, when it is worn as a detachable neckpiece of the one-animal type.

All forms of fox are in vogue, but cross fox, black fox and silver fox are most seen. White fox is having a small revival, although the majority of white fox is not white now, but dyed to beige, or pastel color.

Cut-Out Designs Combine Two Fabrics.

Paris.—(A.P.).—One of the favorite French methods of trimming dresses this winter is to cut out formal line designs, and apply a second fabric underneath.

Velvet and georgette, bright and shiny sides of crepe satin, and contrasting colors of crepe de chine are quite often combined in this manner. The patterns are seldom large. Often they simulate pleats, diagonal appliques and encrustations.

Slashing velvets to show contrasting colors underneath is also done frequently.

The bolero and overskirt of a dark blue satin dress designed by Drecoll are simulated by tucks. A bow knot on the shoulder and a fancy belt placed at a normal waist line are the only trimming on this model popular in Paris for afternoon wear.

Paul Poiret, of Paris, whose eccentricities of today may be the style conventions of tomorrow, designs this basque dress. The bodice is of velvet and the skirt is black chiffon over white. The wide sleeves are black chiffon with white cuffs. The fold at the neck of the corsage is white.

Light mauve with incrustations of darker mauve are used by Brandt for a flared coat model. The fur collar and cuffs are also mauve. There is a cloth dress to match the coat.

Pleated chiffon velvet with a small white pattern in it is the material Worth uses for a straight silhouetted afternoon dress with a three-tiered skirt. The belt, collar and cuffs are white. They cross in back with original effect.

Pendant Brooches Trim Evening Frocks.

Paris (A.P.)—Jewelry is encroaching noticeably upon flowers as the favorite accessory for evening. The ambitious pendant brooch is an established article of wear and more often graces the smartly simple frock of satin or chiffon than does the artificial flower. Rhinestones and colored stones set in silver which shows them off almost as effectively as platinum would, are usually used for the new brooches. Some of them are as long as six inches. The left shoulder is the favorite place to wear them.

Velveteen Jackets For Sport Wear.

Paris (A.P.).—The short jacket of velveteen, worn separately or combined with a skirt of velveteen and a knitted jumper is a new sport style. There are many versions of it in the shops.

Corduroy velvet is occasionally made up in this form, particularly in shades of beige and marron. Dark green and brown are favorite colors for the velveteen suits.

Vionnet Models Stress Drapery.

Paris (A.P.).—Some of the most important evening dresses shown by Vionnet are devoid of trimming. They depend upon long draped lines, fabric and delicate color for their beauty.

Crepe satin in pale tints is used extensively by Vionnet and she often hangs a slender drapery from the shoulder in such a way that it does not interfere with the slender silhouette of the dress.

Pale gray and pale pink bordering on mauve are featured in the collection.

Fall Accessories Include Novelties.

Paris (A.P.)—Although accessories take a minor place in the fashionable openings of the seasons, they do not lose their importance to women who know the value of "the added touch" in composing a smart costume.

Show handkerchiefs are an important item on the long list of accessories necessary for the fashionable toilette this fall. Some of the newest are surprisingly costly due to the use of real lace insets in handkerchiefs of sheer chiffon which must be made by hand.

Smart people wear these colored chiffon handkerchiefs around their wrist, tucked under the ribbon of their wrist watch or knotted around their upper arm. In the daytime they peep out of sleeves, or are tucked into a pocket. Pockets on some of the new circular skirt models give plenty of opportunity to display the new handkerchiefs.

Flowers for the buttonhole are more formal this fall than they have been for a long time. Only the stiffest, most conventional posies are seen and they are most often worked out in leather, felt or wired taffeta.

Taffeta flowers are probably the newest Paris has. Jeanne Lanvin is credited with introducing them to popularity, but many others have taken up the idea. A flower of wired taffeta of the same color as the suit, unless it be black, is a smart new style. For black suits a white taffeta blossom is pretty, or one in rose beige, pale blue or pink.

Cuffs which reach half way to the elbow and are from six to twelve inches wide at the top are shown by some of the exclusive Parisian glovemakers among their novelties.

Most of the big cuffed models are beige or gray with bright contrasting colors used for the lining of the cuff and the stitching. Laces of leather, with fringed or tasseled ends are another feature of the less conventional new gloves.

Snug Suede Belts For Sport Frocks

Paris (A.P.).—The suede belt is an important item of sports apparel this winter. It is usually worn at a low waistline, drawn snugly around to hold full of blouse or one-piece dress.

Contrasting colors are popular. Buckles are most often suede covered. Two to three inches is the accepted width for these girdles which young and old wear. Gloves, handbag and belt to match are good style.

Fox Heads Covered With Rhinestones

Paris (A.P.).—Brilliants and strass are even combined with fur by Paris style creators seeking new ways to interest the world in fashions.

The house of Worth is showing fox furs studded with strass for use on a day-time coat which has pelts of fur on it. The heads of the animals are outlined in brilliants. Another dressmaker puts strass embroidery on an evening cape of ermine. Strass spangled ermine is another form of jeweled fur.

Coats for Morning Have Raglan Sleeves.

Paris (A.P.)—Top coats, for morning and town wear are broadening across the shoulders by Parisian decree. Raglan sleeves are featured in the models of leading sport houses here and many coats have sleeves sewed on to a low shoulder in semi-raglan effect.

Beige, brown and green mixtures are favored for the top coat this season. Many linings of fur are used and beaver is by far the most popular form of collar and cuffs.

Afternoon Suits Again in Fashion.

Paris (A.P.).—Dressy afternoon suits, fur trimmed and far from the tailor-made idea, are back in Parisian favor after an absence of several years. They are not usually meant for street wear without a long covering coat, being made of such fabrics as velvet, crepe satins and the new metal cloths. An important dressmaker shows a bottle green crepe satin suit trimmed with fox bands at the bottom of the short coat, on the sleeves and collar. A blouse of beige goes with it.

How to Finish Curtain Poles in Polychrome.

Curtain poles may be polychromed by giving them two coats of flat wall paint, the second of which has been thickened with a little plaster of Paris, according to Popular Science Monthly. Before it has a chance to dry, tap it with a stencil brush or any other stiff brush to give the surface a rough texture. When this is dry, apply a coat of glazing color of some contrasting or harmonizing tint. This may be made from painters' tinting colors ground in oil or in japan and thinned with turpentine. Apply the glazing color irregularly and mottle it with a rag. The colors should harmonize with the draperies.

If a more antique looking polychrome effect is desired, apply powdered rottenstone mixed with turpentine and after a few minutes wipe off the greater part of the powder.

MEET THE MISSES!

Rich "Josh" Cosden's Surprising Social Exit

Sells His Estates at Long Island, Newport and Palm Beach and Goes Back Into the West After His Rapid Rise to the Top of the "400"

Joshua S. Cosden as he looked at the time he came out of Oklahoma to besiege the stronghold of Eastern society with his oil millions.

ABOUT five years ago an Oklahoma oil king came out of the West, with a beautiful bride by his side, and rode into the Grand Central Station in New York City, in the splendor of a private car.

He had, it was whispered, $50,000,000 and that out in Oklahoma well-behaved oil wells were spurting thousands of dollars more per hour on to his bank balance. The oil king had no financial worries then. He had come to conquer New York, and was prepared to "break into the 400 or bust."

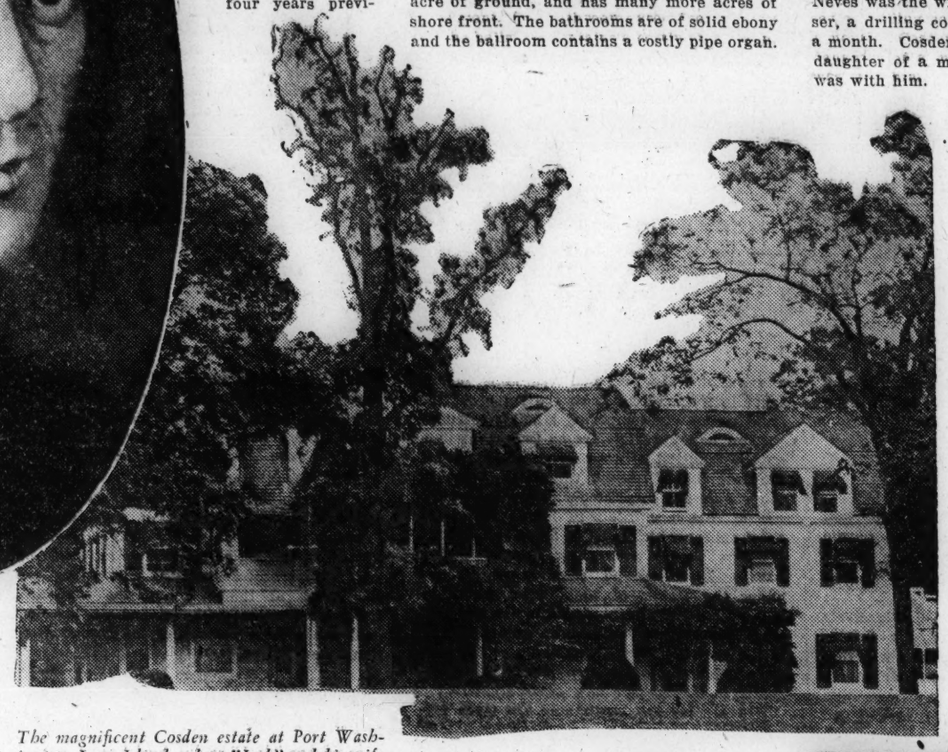

In July, 1923, Joshua S. Cosden and his wife, the former Mrs. Charles Franklin Roeser, and before that, Miss Eleanor Neves, "Belle of Oklahoma," made their debut in the "Social Register," that slim little volume which lists the names of the cream of Manhattan Society. Ten million of that fifty had been spent—for yachts, palatial mansions in Palm Beach, Newport, Long Island, and on Park avenue, and for racing stables, jewels and entertainment de luxe for the elite.

And before long every barrier had crumbled. Mrs. Cosden took her place beside such formidable figures as Mrs. Vincent Astor, Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt 2d, and others, as a leader in the social whirl.

On the highest rung of the social ladder, Mr. and Mrs. Cosden reigned supreme that red-letter week in September, 1924, when the Prince of Wales and Lord and Lady Mountbatten were house guests at their awe-inspiring country home in Port Washington, L. I.

A $150,000 jewel robbery, a few days after the Prince had left, and while his cousin, Lady Mountbatten, and her husband were still visiting the Cosdens, cast a shadow on what had been untroubled social waters. But it was only a small one and the jewel robbery served only to spread the fame of the wealth of the oil king and his wife to the front pages of the country's newspapers.

Last May, the first ripple of what stanch friends of the Cosdens called a "little financial trouble," was detected when "Guardiola," built by "Josh" Cosden at Palm Beach, four years previously, was sold to Mrs. Horace Dodge, widow of the millionaire automobile manufacturer, of Detroit.

The magnificent Cosden estate at Port Washington, Long Island, where "Josh" and his wife entertained the Prince of Wales.

Then the Cosdens gave up their magnificent Long Island estate—where the Prince had once danced and dined—and finally the home at Newport went into other hands.

A few weeks ago, the Joshua S. Cosdens went back into the West from which they had come. In Manhattan courts a judgment for $50,000 entered by Rudolph Peyton, who had sued to recover money advanced on notes, made public the implication that Joshua S. Cosden is quite through being a leader of New York's "400," which position he had spent millions to obtain, and that hereafter he and his beautiful wife will spend most of their time in the South.

And, it is doubtful, now that the Cosdens no longer have "Guardiola" in which to give sumptuous entertainments, that they will cut so conspicuous a figure as formerly at Palm Beach. The story of the Cosdens' "drive" to make society sit up and notice them is a fascinating one, in which such "props" as the famous Fletcher pearls, valued at $600,000, an eight-room suite at the fashionable Hotel Plaza, and the estates and racing stables, mentioned before, were used with surprising results. The Cosdens set their stage well, and society, after only a few and really negligible eye-brow liftings, welcomed them into the inner circle.

For a few weeks after their arrival from Tulsa, Okla., the Cosdens remained in New York. Then they went South, and it was at Palm Beach that the first of the "big ones" at that resort were caught.

At Guardiola, which cost $2,000,000 to build, the Cosdens gave their gorgeous entertainments. Money, an endless supply of it, it seemed, and great personal charm, brought the "bluebloods" flocking.

Guardiola, the Spanish mansion, covers an acre of ground, and has many more acres of shore front. The bathrooms are of solid ebony and the ballroom contains a costly pipe organ.

A photograph of H. R. H., the Prince of Wales, taken during his stay at the Cosdens' Long Island estate.

In the enormous dining room are eight panels depicting the adventures of Sindbad the Sailor, which were painted by the famous Spanish-French artist, Josè Maria Sert.

The estate on Long Island, which the Cosdens purchased, comprises 310 acres and was formerly the property of William B. Cochrane. As neighbors, the Oklahoma oil king and his wife had Vincent Astor, the Guggenheims, the Mackays, the Whitneys and the late Frank A. Munsey. At Newport, Josh bought the estate next to that of the late Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, with T. Suffern Tailer as a next-door neighbor.

The man, who as a boy of 20 is said to have piloted a street car over the rails in Baltimore, Md., and was later a drugstore clerk in that city, before going West with borrowed capital to invest in oil lands, was all set to win out in the social world, as he had done in the financial one.

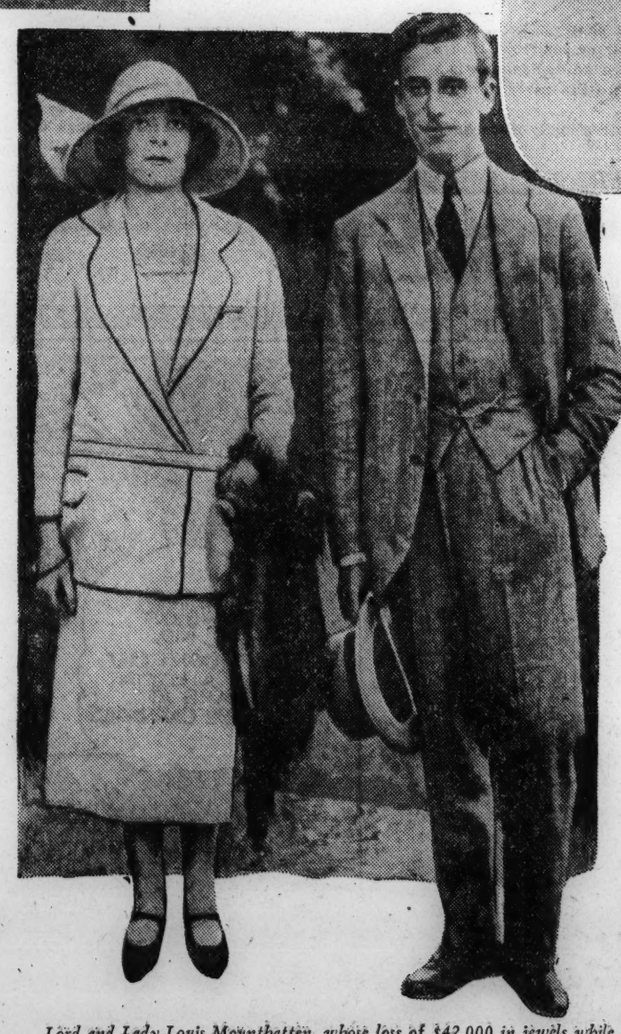

When Josh had first gone forth to make millions in Oklahoma, the former Eleanor Neves was the wife of Charles Franklin Roeser, a drilling contractor earning about $500 a month. Cosden's wife, Mrs. Ottilie Cosden, daughter of a mattress maker in Baltimore, was with him.

It wasn't long before Josh was living in a $100,000 residence across the street from the Roesers, and Mr. and Mrs. Roeser were proud to be taken up by the new millionaire.

Mrs. Roeser, who had studied French and Italian, and knew something about art, literature, history and events of the day, became a sort of tutoress for the former Baltimorean. In 1916, Mrs. Roeser went to California and obtained a divorce on the grounds of cruelty and incompatibility. Soon, likewise, there was a divorce in the Cosden family. Mrs. Cosden, the mother of Josh Cosden's three children, who had been with him in all their years of struggle preceding the Oklahoma oil boom, divorced Josh. She accused him of neglect and cruelty. She was given $1,500,000 in stock in Cosden's oil company and possession of the house in Tulsa. Later, she married Don Baxter, another oil prince of the Southwest.

The charming Mrs. Joshua S. Cosden, who shared her husband's meteoric rise to the social heights from which they are, apparently, about to descend.

Lord and Lady Louis Mountbatten, whose loss of $42,000 in jewels while visiting the Cosdens only served to boost the oil king and his wife up the social ladder.

About a year after Mrs. Cosden's divorce, "Josh" and "Nell" Roeser were wed. Then they burst into Manhattan, to do their social climbing act, which turned out so successfully and which now seems so suddenly ended.

A trip to Europe brought about acquaintance with the Prince of Wales, and what hundreds of the newly rich in America have attempted and failed to do, the Cosdens did with seeming ease.

Lord Louis Mountbatten and Lady Mountbatten, with the Hon. Mr. and Mrs. Richard Norton were guests of the Cosdens during their stay in the East, and twice the Prince of Wales attended dinner parties at their Long Island home.

The famous Cosden jewel robbery took place then. Mrs. Cosden lost $100,000 worth of rings, bracelets and a diamond bow-knot pin, and Mr. Cosden was relieved of a pearl shirt stud. Lady Mountbatten was robbed of three rings and a scarf pin valued at $42,000. Some of the jewels were gifts from the prince. Part of the jewelry was recovered a few months later.

"Josh" also made himself conspicuous as a sportsman. He became the owner of such turf winners as Franzus, Martingale, Dunlin and Blazes. He maintained a breeding stable at Charlottesville, Va., and his interest in the "sport of kings" was an important factor in his social life. For it was in the paddock that "Josh" met and became friends with Harry Payne Whitney and other notable turfmen.

As they became unquestionable leaders, democratic society went about saying that it is possible to achieve social prestige without family background. And then society proved it when "Josh" was an usher at the wedding of William Rhinelander Stewart, jr., and Laura Biddle, at Bryn Mawr, Pa. The Biddles and the Stewarts represent generations of wealth and tradition.

It was in 1924 that the oil structure upon which the Cosden's had built their social prestige began to totter. "Josh" announced that "Cosden & Co." would be changed to the Mid-Continent Oil Co., and that he was resigning as president. The reason given at the time was that he wished to devote his entire attention to oil interests in Venezuela. Then followed in quick succession the sale of his mansions.

In Wall street there are rumors that "Josh" speculated and had hard luck, but the source of these rumors can not be traced.

Although the retreat of the Cosdens from their high place in New York's "400" has been a quiet one, society itself is as much surprised as those "on the outside looking in."

"Josh" is simply going to make up what he has lost, say a few of the Cosdens' intimates. "He'll come back."

AN ORIENTAL CITY CHANGES

(Associated Press.)

Teheran, Persia, is no longer the isolated Oriental city that it was a few years ago. No railroads yet reach the capital, but motor cars, plying the old camel and donkey caravan routes through mountain passes and desert trails, have made the city more accessible. Now Bagdad is but a few days' trip and Resht, on the southern shore of the Caspian Sea, is within easy reach, although the National Geographical Society says one goes all around Robin Hood's barn to get there. Resht is but 70 miles north of Teheran, as the crow flies, but the road winds for three times that distance.

Teheran can be entered by any one of twelve beautiful gates whose gayly colored tiles glisten in the sunlight. The north part of the city is the modern quarter. Shrill automobile horns demand the right of way from lumbering camels and venerable cabs that are drawn by moth-eaten donkeys. Wide, well-graded, electric lighted streets, here and there shaded by huge elms and stately poplars, at whose feet clear water trickles, pass attractive government buildings, foreign legations, homes of foreign residents and palatial mansions of wealthy Persians.

Then there are the tramways, the field that has accommodated airplanes and football teams, and the business district, where are movies, hotels, European shops and restaurants. All are writing a new chapter in Teheran's history.

The capital centers around Maidan-e-Toop Khaneh, or Artillery Square, ornamented with antiquated cannon and inclosed by the facade of the Imperial Bank of Persia and arcaded military barracks. Through six huge arched gateways important avenues lead to all parts of the city.

Many foreign residences, legations and two hotels line Khiaban-e-Alaed Dowleh, and on the broad tree-arched Khiaban-e-Ilmasieh, sometimes known as the Avenue of Diamonds, leading from the southwest gateway, are the royal palace, treasury, foreign office and imperial archives buildings, with beautiful gardens between them.

No building attracts so many visitors as the Royal Museum, where the famous peacock throne reposes. The gorgeous chair is set with thousands of diamonds, rubies, emeralds and other precious stones. Emblazoned on the back is a large peacock, from which it takes its name. It was brought from India to Teheran in 1739, when Nadir Sah, Persia's shah from 1736 to 1747, sacked Delhi.

Only in the southern portion of Teheran can one see an undisturbed bit of Persia. High dingy mud walls inclose mud-brick houses, and filthy gutters border narrow, alleylike streets. Some of the busier streets of this quarter are teeming with life. On the sidelines, "hokey-pokey" men with bright-colored ice cream, and the curbstone restaurants, where squatting men serve such delicacies as hot potatoes and mutton cooked on charcoal braziers, do a thriving business. Nearby a crowd is watching an Oriental mystic performing mysterious tricks or listening to professional story tellers trying to talk above the noises of street hawkers, dirty urchins at play and the pleading of ragged urchins.

Here and there the streets are arched over to form bazaars. The big bazaar has more than 25 miles of streets, lined on both sides with shops that are so small that the purchasers have to stand in the street while bargaining with over-fat shopkeepers. It is the finest bazaar in Persia.

Movies Made More Natural.

Natural motion picture effects are claimed for a new camera whose movable back, connected to the lens by a flexible bellows, is shifted about by a system of cams and levers while the pictures are being taken, according to Popular Science Monthly. The photographs are said to appear more realistic than ordinary "movies;" they show relative movement between the near and far planes of the picture, such as you see when you move your head sideways, adding to the stereoscopic effect of depth.

Electric Baths for Noses.

A new way of treating colds by applying electric heat to the inflamed interior of the nose was recently advocated by Dr. H. Bordier, of Lyons, France, reports Popular Science Monthly. Metal plates are applied at each side of the nose and the electric current is sent between them so that the inner membranes of the nose, not the skin, receive most of the heat that is produced. Dr. Bordier reports numerous remarkable successes from a few minutes of such treatment.

FASHION QUEEN

ALFHILD LARSON

Pittsburgh (A.P.).—When judges at the National Fashion pageant in St. Louis picked the American "Queen of Fashion" for 1927 they chose a Pittsburgh department store sales girl, Miss Alfhild Larson.

The winner is, in the view of the judges, "the most nearly perfect garment model in the United States."

Factors in the contest are beauty of face and form, carriage, conformity to standard of measurements in the garment industry, style and personality.

The Married Life of Helen and Warren

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

Creator of the "Helen and Warren" Characters

Helen's Fifteen-Cent Purchase Solves a Bibliographical Mystery

"WHAT'RE you up to?" Warren glowered over his paper.

"Having a gorgeous time!" Helen curled up with a parchment lampshade, a Godey's fashion plate, scissors, and paste.

"Why don't you work at a table? Always parked on the floor."

"Oh, I love to sit on the floor. Look, won't that be attractive?" holding the parasoled and bustled ladies against the shade.

"Torn. You're always buyin' cripples. Couldn't you get a whole one?"

"These old fashion plates are awfully expensive. This one's hand-colored—only a dollar because the corner's off. But I can patch that!"

"Huh, that's old paper—never get any that color," he discouraged.

"I've already got it! Where'd I put that—— Oh, she's lying on it!"

Pussy Purr-Mew stretching protesting claws after the shabby book.

"I found this on a fifteen-cent stand," holding the age-yellow fly-leaf against the fashion plate. "Didn't I match that well? I can always——"

"Hand yourself bouquets," grumped Warren, returning to the financial news.

"No, not for you to play with," retrieving the paste brush from Pussy Purr-Mew's impish paws. "Now if you want to watch—you must be very still."

Her eyes, alert yellow slits, following every movement of Helen's deft hands.

First pasting the fashion plate on the shade. Then patching out the corner.

"There! You'd never know it's mended!" exultantly, bobbing it up. "Wasn't I lucky to find that old book? No modern paper would've matched."

* * * *

A MAP OF VIRGINIA with a Description of the Countrey
by Captaine John Smith
Oxford 1612

"Great guns!" Warren swooped down on it. "Where in blazes d'you get this?"

"Why, that poor old man around the corner. On the stand outside."

"You picked this up on the street?" incredulously.

"Yes, fifteen cents. Why? It's not worth anything? That shabby old book?"

"Not, eh? At least a thousand," keenly turning through it. "Maybe more."

"A thousand dollars!" jumping up.

"One of the earliest books on America. Only a few copies known. Baldwin's got one in his Maryland collection. That's why I'm wise to it. He paid two thousand. By George, this might be his!"

The next moment at the telephone. Calling a Butterfield number.

"Hello? That you, Baldwin? * * * This is Curtis. See if you've got your Smith's Virginia. * * *What's that? * * * Never mind, just you look."

A breathless wait. Warren scrawling impatient curlicues on the desk pad.

"You have? Good. * * * Why, Mrs. Curtis just picked one up on a street stand. * * * Yep, the real thing. Now don't hit the roof! What about the other copies? * * * Libraries—and Cranton's got one? That mean old cuss? Can't be his—no separatin' him from anything. * * * Yes, going right now. Call you later."

* * * * *

"DEAR, tell me?" thrilled Helen. "You really think it's——"

"Get your lid on," pocketing the book. "Something funny about this. We'll see what that old man knows."

"He won't know anything. He's almost blind—that's why he's selling out. Just think—a thousand dollars!" ecstatically. "We'll give him something——"

"Wait'll you get it. If it's been stolen—you'll have to hand it over."

"Stolen? Would it be on a fifteen-cent stand——"

"That's the queer part. Ready? Now for some real sleuthing."

Out in the soft breeze-stirred night. Warren stalked briskly ahead.

"Oh, I'm so excited!" fairly skipping beside him. "Like a detective story—a thousand dollars!"

"Now don't start spendin' it," jerking her back from a swerving taxi.

On the sidewalk stand a crude sign:

Selling Out—Choice 15c.

"Oh, you think there might be something else?" as Warren scanned the drab assortment of novels, poetry, text-books.

"Not there! You're a good picker, Kitten," starting down the steps. "No more Early Americans in that lot of plugs."

A musty, dimly-lit cavern. The old man in the rear with a prosperous looking customer.

"Well, here's my telephone number. Now remember, there's five dollars for you—if you get it back."

"I wish I could, sir." The old man taking off his thick spectacles, rubbed his inflamed lids. "I should've gone over them—but my eyes are getting so bad."

Helen listening tensely. Her book? A side glance at Warren. Apparently scanning the dusty shelves. But that alert look!

"You're selling out—why did you buy the books?" gruffed the man.

"The lady's sold me other books, sir. It was a cheap lot—only a couple of dollars. I wanted to accommodate her."

"Accommodate her!" reddening. "I'll see that she never——" Then, controlling himself, "Well, let me know if you hear anything."

* * * *

HELEN nudging Warren frantically. Trying to whisper to him.

"Now I'll handle this," he muttered. "You keep out of it. What's the trouble?" turning to the old shopkeeper. "Book stolen?"

"No, not stolen," replacing his glasses. "I bought a few novels from this gentleman's wife. A valuable book among them—by mistake."

"Now the less said the better," the man cut him short. "I'll be in tomorrow."

"Hold on!" brusqued Warren. "Are you George Cranton?"

"Yes," with hostile curtness. "I don't know you."

"Possibly not. That book you're looking for—you say it wasn't stolen?"

"No, but how does that concern you?" rudely.

"Was it John Smith's Virginia?"

"Oh, you got it!" his manner changed. "I'm sorry——"

"You'd have been more civil," grunted Warren. "Well, I happen to know its value."

"But you got it under false pretenses! You can't hold it."

"Can't, eh? You just admitted it wasn't stolen. Your wife sold it to this dealer. Anybody who bought it has a perfectly good title."

A threatening, insulting outburst.

"Hold on, Cranton—that won't get you anywhere. We own a copy of Smith's Virginia which you seem to want. Anything we get for it goes to this old man. Would you rather bid for it at an American Art sale—or do business now?"

"It's my book—I'll not stand for this hold-up! I laid it out to have a case made—and Mrs. Cranton gathered it up with some old novels. You'll not take advantage of that?" attempting conciliation.

* * * *

"YOU RE going to shell out for this old man. I heard your piking offer of five dollars—you can add ninety-five to it!"

"That's an outrage!" he spluttered. "The book's not worth it."

"Not, eh? Then Baldwin must've got stung. Paid two thousand for his."

"Oh, you know Baldwin?" with grudging respect. "Well, I'll give him fifty."

"Why, I—I don't expect anything, sir" the old man broke his dazed silence.

"Now you let me handle this." Then to Cranton, "Well, coming across with the hundred? Ought to be glad we're not holding you up for a thousand! But the value's gone down a bit. Mrs. Curtis tore out the fly-leaf—to patch an old print."

"Tore out the fly-leaf of my Smith's Virginia!" apoplectically.

"Yes, pretty bad. But the text is all there—nothing else touched."

"You mutilate my book!" glaring at Helen. "Then expect me to give a hundred dollars to get it back"

"Don't have to," grinned Warren. "I'll be glad to keep it. Give our friend here the hundred myself. And Mrs. Curtis will still have a good fifteen cents' worth."

"Where's the book? Got it with you? Let me see it."

"We'll decide first what we're going to do," shrugged Warren coolly.

"How do I know half a dozen pages aren't torn out?"

"Because I say so! Take it or leave it. Do I keep the book or do you cough up?"

"Oh, I'll be glad to take fifty, sir," protested the old man.

"Don't you worry—he can afford the hundred."

Enraged, but baffled. His face brick red. Mr. Cranton drew out his wallet. From a fat yellow roll, he stripped off five twenty-dollar bills.

"There!" throwing them on the table.

"Here's the book—look it over. Be sure it's O. K.—all but the fly-leaf."

A hasty collating and Mr. Cranton thrust the volume into his pocket. With a militant glare, he stalked from the shop.

"But the lady bought the book—it was hers," the old man staring at the money he had not touched. "I can't take all that."

"Why not? We've had our fifteen cents' worth—and a whole lot more. I know all about Cranton—the crooked deals he's pulled off. Glad to put one over on him. That's all right—needn't thank me."

Cutting short the old man's tremulous gratitude, Warren swept Helen up the steps into the now deserted street.

"Well, I settled that little mix-up," swaggering ahead. "Wait'll I tell Baldwin—he'll eat it up!"

"But, dear, you might at least have consulted me—it was really my book! If it was worth so much—he could've paid something——"

"We're not makin' money on mistakes—not even off that old vulture. Hurt him enough to cough up the hundred."

Helen's thoughts turmoiled. Not quite certain as to the ethics of such a situation. But they had helped that poor old man.

"What's the matter?" Warren tucked her arm through his. "Sulking because you didn't get a rake-off? Want me to be a skinflint like Cranton?"

"No, no—I'm glad you're just what you are!" hugging his arm. "Think how awful for his wife! To be dependent on a man like that!"

"Tough lines. Guess you don't have to peddle our old books for pin money. Jove, hate to be in her place tonight."

"And to think I bought it just to patch that old fashion plate——"

"Not such a bad buy, Kitten. We all got something out of it," he chuckled. "Your lampshade patched, a hundred bucks for the old man, and a chance to put one over on that shifty nickel-nurser! Pretty good value for your fifteen cents!"

CAN'T "JAZZ" THINKING

We can not "jazz" our thinking as we do our music, declares Rev. R. W. Sockman, D. D., pastor of the Madison Avenue Methodist Church, New York, according to Dr. Joseph Fort Newton in November McCall's.

Too many young people today are posing as sideline cynics sitting with the Sinclair Lewises and the Menckens, making snippy remarks about the game and its players, says Dr. Sockman, who discusses the present-day pace of living and says:

"First of all, we must set the brakes. The speed of life in a world on wheels and running at high gear is too fast for thought, and it makes us too restless for real achievement. We cannot go back to the slow gait of the past, but we can slacken the pace. It is an unnatural hot-house life. Young folk in their teens are trying to enjoy the experiences which normally come in the late twenties.

"Second, let us lighten the luggage. We are caught in the tyranny of things, and things do not make us happy. What we need is a wholesale revaluation of values to simplify life and set us right, and the elders need it as much as youth.

"Third, we must take sides. The modern young mind is critical rather than creative. A group of campus editors recently said that the present student generation is lacking in convictions; it knows every point of view except its own. Our education has made mere collectors of facts who do not know the art of identifying themselves with a faith or a cause.

"Let youth remember that self-knowledge and self-control must precede self-expression, in behalf of moral ideals and human service."

Tales of Real Dogs

ARNOLD VON WINKELRIED: Finder of the Lost

ONE day he was an obscure Dobermann Pinscher, highly trained and wise and strong, but known to only a handful of his master's neighbors. The next day his fame was blazed throughout the news columns of a hundred newspapers. He was Arnold von Winkelried, and he belonged to A. T. Sanderlin, a deputy sheriff, living near Seattle, Wash.

One day in June, 1927, Stanley David Kelsey, a boy scout, went on a fishing trip into the almost trackless forest north of Seattle. He trusted to his "scout lore" to guide him through a maze of woods that had caused more than one veteran lumberjack to lose his way. For once, scout lore proved an insufficient equipment.

Farther and farther the boy wandered, along the forest trout streams that twist and interlace through the vast stretch of territory. But when he tried to retrace his steps homeward, he found that one trout stream looks pretty much like another and that he could not recall which of the many he had followed in coming into the woods.

He was lost—hopelessly lost! True, he had caught a few rather small fish, and he was able to find a handful or two of edible berries. But, apart from that, he was without food, and he had not the remotest idea how to get out of the maze of trees.

Half-starved, at last he managed to knock over an unwary grouse. As he followed the wounded bird down a ravine he fell and wrenched his knee so badly he could scarcely drag himself along the ground. By good luck he was able to catch the grouse and to kindle a fire to cook it over.

But that was all he could do. No longer could he even walk, as before, on the chance of coming out of the woods. For five days in all, he wandered or crawled, on the verge of starvation, hourly growing weaker. His injured knee was steadily worse.

Meanwhile, at his home, back on the Bothell road, above Seattle, his family was organizing the whole neighborhood into one big search party. Among the volunteers was Deputy Sheriff Sanderlin. That is why young Kelsey is still alive.

Sanderlin had implicit faith in the cleverness of his black Dobermann Pinscher. He insisted on taking the dog along, and he begged the rest of the searchers to scatter in such way as not to confuse the trail. Then, alone with Arnold von Winkelried, the deputy sheriff set out to prove his faith in his dog and to make the neighborhood share that faith.

For three hours, the dog coursed the woods at the point where Kelsey was believed to have entered them. His master had made him understand what was wanted of him. I am going to quote Sanderlin's own words from an interview with him by Frederic Earp, in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer of June 30, 1927. Said Sanderlin:

"Occasionally Arnold would come back to me with an inquiring look. But I would motion him on, and without a sound he would leap ahead into the wilderness. Finally, the dog disappeared entirely. I sat down in a sheltered spot and waited.

"He suddenly dashed up to me, bearing a gray cloth cap in his mouth. As fast as I could travel through the thickets I followed the dog. At about 8 o'clock I came upon the lost boy huddled beside a big stump. He looked up at me in a dazed way, but he was too exhausted to speak.

I let him snatch my cap and take it with him.

"We were at a point about ten miles due east from Duvall and in a maze of woods that would confuse any one but an experienced woodsman. I built a fire and while Kelsey slept I dried out the boy's clothes. Kelsey could only walk with difficulty, and we were till middle afternoon reaching Duvall. There, after a hearty meal, we returned home in my car."

Kelsey supplemented Sanderlin's story with an account of the dog's finding him. As soon as he was able to see a reporter and to talk without too much fatigue he told of his wanderings, ending the recital thus:

The last day and night in the woods seem like a dream. I was awful cold last night. It rained and I was soaked to the skin. I ate berries till I never want to see another of them.

"I was lying beside a stump this morning. I forget what time it was. I was past caring, I guess. I heard a noise in the bushes and I saw something black moving toward me. I was scared. 'It's a bear!' I thought. 'How am I going to meet it?'

"The next thing I know old Arnold was licking my face and grabbing for my cap. I knew he must be Mr. Sanderlin's trailer. Mr. Sanderlin is a neighbor of ours, and I had seen his trained dogs before.

"I petted the dog, a minute. But he was anxious to go away, and I let him snatch my cap, and take it with him. For I knew help couldn't be very far off."

This finding of Stanley Kelsey was the thirteenth successful trailing of a lost person or animal, which Arnold von Winkefried had achieved. One of these finds was of a gruesome sort. A 70-year-old hunter, James Maxwell, wandered away last year from his cabin. Neighbors reported his absence and Sanderlin put Arnold on the track.

The Dobermann followed the trail in his own mysterious way, coursing in every direction through forest and undergrowth and across streams. At length, he discovered Maxwell's dead body lying in a thicket, three miles away from his cabin.

The dog is only about three years old. He was brought to Seattle as a six-months puppy. His parents are both champion show dogs, which proves once more that high show quality does not rob a dog of his natural brains and instinct. Wise and patient training on Sanderlin's part developed Arnold's natural trailing instincts to a point that is little short of miraculous.

By the way, the usually accepted tale of the origin of Dobermann Pinschers is interesting. It is said that Herr Dobermann, the poundmaster at Dusseldorf, Germany, once had in his pound a black-and-tan Manchester terrier. Using her as a basis, he developed carefully the famous breed which now bears his name.

Thus, the original source of the breed is really British and not German, as the Manchester is an English dog. I have seen Dobermanns do almost uncannily brilliant trailing, and many of them have the "homing instinct" developed even more keenly than have collies.

The Ear of a Bird.

It is a curious fact that we humans are inclined to give little heed to that which we do not see. I have heard people express surprise when they have overheard some reference to a bird's ears. There being no visible ears, people seem to jump to the conclusion that there are no ears.

Now, I know of no hearing more acute than the hearing of certain birds, notably the owls. I well remember my amazement the first time I saw the ear opening of an owl. This opening is protected by a movable flap of skin, which in turn is covered by the feathers. When this flap of skin is lifted one no longer wonders than an owl can hear sounds which the human ear can not detect. The curious fact is that in some owls one ear opening is larger than the other. They may even vary in shape. What we commonly call the ear in mankind and in mammals generally is, in reality, not the ear at all, but an external flap of skin, which probably aids in collecting sound waves. The ear proper is in the head. With birds the opening is so protected by feathers that it is not apparent. Yet these feathers are of a nature not to muffle the sound.

Spider Traps a Humming Bird.

Recently there was reported to me a tragedy due to an unfortunate choice of building material on the part of a cedar waxwing. The bird had started her nest in a maple tree and for part of her material had selected bits of cotton waste from a nearby garage. A leg became entangled in one of the threads and she was unable to extricate herself. She was discovered too late to save her.

The one who reported the above incident to me one time found a wood peewee's nest, from which the unfeathered body of one of the babies hung suspended by a horsehair. The horsehair had been used in lining the nest. Evidently one of the newly hatched young had in some way passed its head through a loop of this horsehair and in the ensuing struggle had strangled to death. The mother, discovering the tragedy, had thrust the little body from the nest, and, the other end of the horsehair still being fast to the nest, the body had hung there. It appears that birds know enough to remove from the nest the body of one that has died.

But even more unusual than the two above accidents is one which occurred in a Massachusetts town this last summer. A ruby-throated humming bird, that living feathered jewel, flew into the garage of the Congregational parsonage and there became entangled in the meshes of a spider's web. The strength of the silk of that web was such that the bird was soon rendered helpless and probably would have died there had not some one come to its aid. Accidents of this kind are far more numerous than most people imagine. Probably even in the days before the white man established himself in America similar tragedies occurred among the feathered folk. For even in those days hair was used, as well as slender roots, as material for nest building. But with the coming of the white man and the progress of civilization this particular peril to birds was vastly increased by the wealth of material, including threads, strings and yarn which he supplied.

Not a Breeding Place.

A correspondent writes as follows "I happened to be in a building the basement of which was surrounded by a light well, or moat. All the windows were screened and on a level with the bottom of this moat, which is a very sandy material, I discovered some of the screens literally covered with tiny toads. I looked farther and found the sand well contained many large toads. I thought they might have fallen in, so I picked many of them up and put them on the grass. But they all jumped back into the moat. Some of the tiny toads were only three-eighths of an inch to a half inch in size. Though I watched carefully, I saw no indication of mating on the part of larger toads. There was not a drop of water, save as nature provided through rain. How do toads breed?"

It appears to give many people a shock of surprise to learn that all our North American toads breed in the water. A toad is so definitely associated with a dooryard or garden that those knowing nothing of its life history do not dream of its having anything to do with water. But in the spring you will find all toads of breeding age seeking the nearest pond or pool or other stagnant water.

Toads at all times require moisture. They can not stand the hot sun. Hence they are abroad chiefly at night and during the heat of the day seek shelter where the rays of the sun can not reach them. The presence of all those toads in the sandy moat probably can be accounted for by the fact that it was the dampest place and the most sheltered place they could find in that immediate vicinity. Undoubtedly the sand retained some dampness from the rain.

Those tiny toads very evidently were recently from not far distant water. They had just graduated from the tadpole stage and were on their way to view the land and take possession thereof. It would be a matter of three or four years before those little toads would seek the water for breeding purposes.

The Bee Martin.

An anxious beekeeper recently wrote, stating that he has several hives of bees and four kingbirds have established themselves near by. They would fly from one tree to another in front of the hives, taking a bee every time they passed. He wanted to know if it was unusual for kingbirds to catch bees.

The kingbird belongs to the flycatcher family, and, after all, there is not so much difference between a bee and a fly. As a matter of fact, in some places the kingbird is known as the bee martin. I have a suspicion that if those four kingbirds actually were catching bees, those bees were chiefly drones. They may not have been catching bees at all, but robber flies. In such a case they would be friends of the bees, for the robber fly destroys honey bees. An examination by the biological survey of 634 stomachs of kingbirds showed only 61 bees in 22 stomachs. Of these 61 bees 51 were useless drones. It is necessary to get exact evidence before condemning bird or animal for seeming mischief from the human viewpoint. There has been, and still is, altogether too much out-of-hand condemnation. Greater knowledge of the feeding habits of our birds is needed.

A Caterpillar Delicacy.

We have become quite accustomed to considering caterpillars as legitimate food for birds, and in some instances for mammals. But as an article of the human bill of fare they are regarded by most white people as utterly impossible. The mere thought arouses disgust. This is merely another instance of what is one man's meat is another man's poison. There is a caterpillar in the West, particularly in the Klammath region of Oregon, highly prized as food by the Indians living there. This is the caterpillar of the Pandora moth, Coloradia pandora. It ranges from the eastern foothills of the Rocky Mountains to the Cascades, and from Montana to Mexico. The moth is of a rather large size and rather soberly colored. The caterpillar lives on pine trees and in places is found in great numbers. These caterpillars are only about one-third grown when winter comes. By the following autumn they are fully grown, are about two inches long and very fat. They are then gathered by the Indians and dried for winter use, and are considered very fine.

The Pandora moth is exceptionally long-lived. It lives for two years.

A Naturalist's Question Box.

Hazel Hamblen asks: "Why does a hummingbird dart like a butterfly, instead of flying straight, like most birds?"

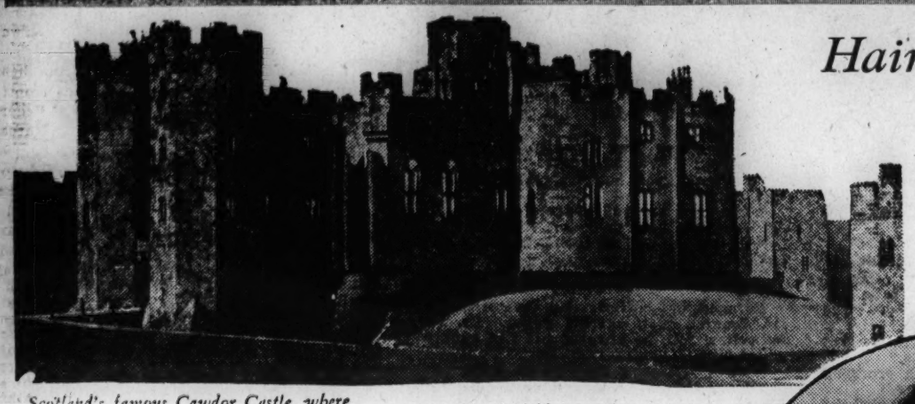

A butterfly does not dart, but flies in an irregular way. The hummingbird feeds on nectar and minute insects in flowers and darts from flower to flower because of the wonderful speed of its wings. But if you will watch one when it has finished feeding, or when it leaves for a distant flower bed, you will find that this little feathered jewel flies quite as straight as any other bird, but at great speed.

"Does a snake have a stinger?" asks Jamie Boyd.

No. The so-called stinger is merely the tongue. It is harmless.

Driven From Her Castle BY A Shrieking Ghost

Hair-Raising Experience of Pretty Peggy Ogilvie, the Little Illinois School Teacher Who Gladly Left the Scottish Manor of Her Dreams to Its Unearthly Tenants

Scotland's famous Cawdor Castle, where Peggy Ogilvie's grandmother acquired the love of castles Peggy inherited but lost after a gruesome session with a ghost.

IT was like a Cinderella romance—the marriage of pretty Peggy Ogilvie, 22-year-old kindergarten teacher, of Momence, Ill., and Andrew Waddington Day, middle-aged Chicago packing house millionaire, in June, 1925. Lovely in white satin and pearls, Peggy murmured her "I do's" and kissed her bridegroom.

"I want to give you the thing you want most in the world, darling—name it," said Peggy's rich husband. And Peggy, without a moment's hesitation lifted star-lit eyes and answered, "A castle in Scotland."

"Just exactly what you'd expect of Peggy," whispered her friends. For during her high school days, when other girls were shyly daydreaming of bungalows and pink gingham aprons, of shining kitchenettes and sun parlors, pretty Peggy dreamed of a rambling, romantic castle somewhere in Scotland.

But this was not surprising when one remembered Peggy's childhood companion, old Grandmother Ogilvie, who had been reared in a gatekeeper's lodge at the entrance of the ancient and famous Cawdor Castle in Scotland, and who, when she made her home with her son in America, told Peggy many a thrilling tale of ivy-covered turrets and moats and drawbridges.

So Andrew Waddington Day bought the promised castle in Scotland—beautiful Langdon Hall, half abbey, half baronial hall.

Little did the Illinois teacher know that in her beloved castle, some time later, she was to go through one of the most harrowing experiences ever suffered by an American woman living abroad.

The story of Peggy's romance with her millionaire husband in the home that had housed barons and noblemen for years, is strange and blood-curdling.

Suffice it to say that Peggy has been cured of her castle complex, and is satisfied now to make her home in an American mansion, with no worry about ghosts and uncanny doings.

Andy Day went shopping for Langdon Hall alone. He liked to see the sudden golden lights spring into Peggy's eyes when she was surprised. So, shortly after their honeymoon in Spain, on an excuse of business in New York, he hopped across to Scotland.

The bride was visiting her home folk in Momence when the news of the second chapter of her Cinderella romance burst upon the villagers. Mr. Day had purchased Peggy's longed-for castle! Momence looked upon Peggy with delight and, perhaps, a little envy.

It had been just one year before that Peggy, through an accident, had met Andy Day. She had been out with her kindergarten class gathering daisies for the school's spring festival, when a Rolls-Royce, speeding along the road to Chicago, suddenly skidded and sent Peggy down into a white crumpled heap. The distressed man who sprang out and lifted her in his arms insisted on taking her to a hospital in Chicago, about 30 miles away. Then came the bedside courtship, and the wedding soon after Peggy was well again.

Now has come another bit of thrilling news to the little Illinois town, from London—that Peggy is the proud mother of Andrew Waddington Day, jr. Also that she is slowly recovering from what the doctors term "dementia precoxia." It has been intimated that the accident which led to her fairy tale romance might be, in a measure, responsible for the mental malady with the long name and the sinister meaning.

Peggy's ghost story, which was told to a cousin of hers who has recently returned from London, might be accredited to a temporarily disordered brain, but there remain certain puzzling evidences to bear out the truth of her story.

"I am done with castles," declared Mrs. Day to her cousin. "You may pay out money to buy them from their flesh-and-blood owners, but there are those ghost owners that have a still more tenacious hold on these ancestral mansions, and they are not pleasant to live with."

Peggy Ogilvie Day, the American girl whose ambition to live in a Scottish castle ended so weirdly and abruptly.

Langdon Hall, which Peggy described to her cousin, stands on a lonely hill in Caithness overlooking the firths and moors of northern Scotland. It was the ancient seat of the Darnell family, descended from Lord Douglas Darnell I, but for 30 years prior to the purchase by Mr. Day it had been unoccupied.

In one of the upstairs rooms there was a great four-poster bed of sixteenth century design. This bedroom at one time had been reached by a secret staircase, which had long since been sealed.

Because the old bed was so redolent of bygone days of love and romance, Peggy chose this room as her own. It might be risky to move the ancient bed to one of the bedrooms in a less remote part of the hall. Because, too, she desired to recapture, if she could, some of that centuries-old romance, she refused to tear off the faded blue bed curtains, but had them carefully laundered and replaced. She says now that she is glad she did, for she has the curtains to uphold her amazing story. Anyhow, the experience of the new mistress of Langdon Hall precedes her knowledge of the ghastly legend connected with the place, and in all due justice to Peggy it should be told first.

Here is Peggy's story "It was a dark, rainy night in September. You know there is no rain so cold and so damp as the rain that comes off the Scottish heaths. Andy was in London, where many of his Chicago friends were attending the bar convention. I had just dismissed the old nurse, Lorrie, who had been my constant attendant the past summer. She had lingered at the door a minute, volubly reminding me that I was not to stay past this month at Langdon, but must be in London in full time for my impending ordeal. You never could tell about first babies, what time they might choose to come, &c.

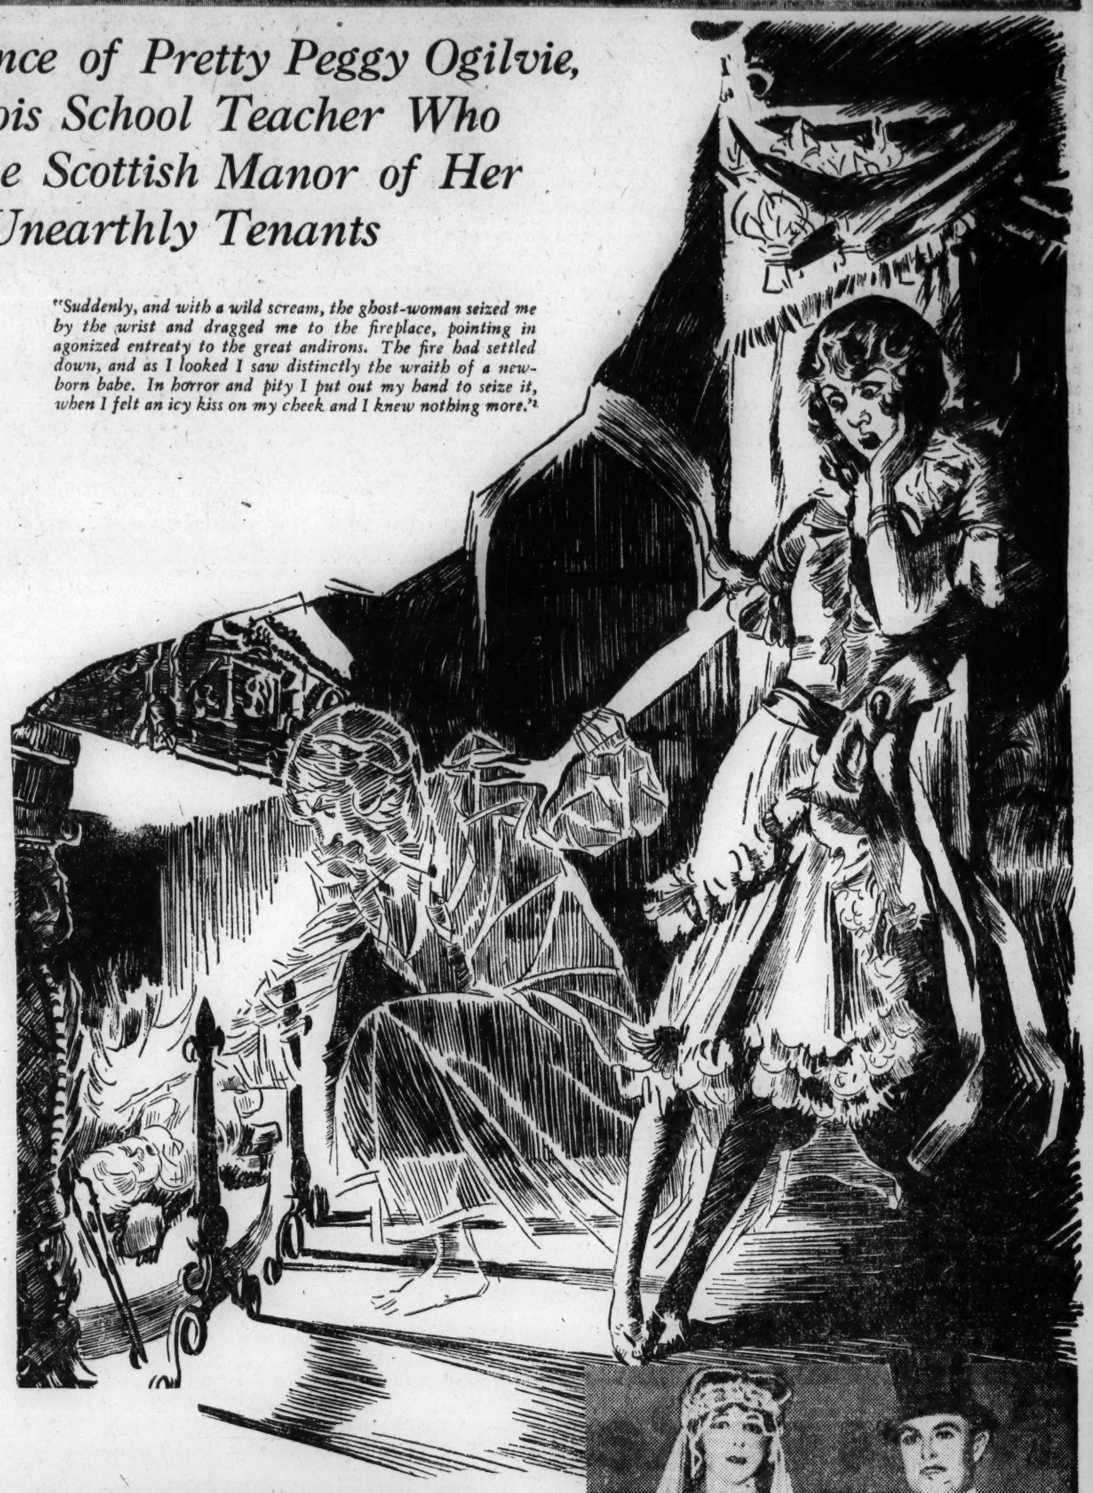

"She hinted darkly a number of times that I should not remain at the Hall, and in this bedroom, but I had not drawn her out, for, although I have been reared by Grandma Ogilvie on superstitious tales concerning old Scottish castles, I did not choose to have them repeated right at this time.

"When she finally left I drew my chair up to the lovely open fireplace and fell to admiring for the hundredth time the exquisite workmanship upon the mantel. The firelight leaped and flashed upon the curious figures on the pedestals and lingered on the old Darnell crest, with its inscription 'Fear the Lord.' As I leaned forward to trace the words with my finger, wondering how many fine ladies had so toasted their toes, and gazed upon this admonition, I was startled by the sound of low sobbing. It seemed to come from the door leading into the sealed stairway.

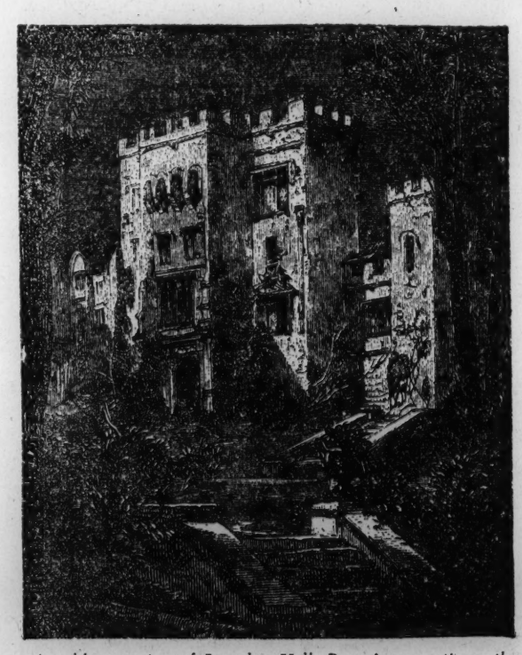

"I went to the door. The sobbing continued distinctly. I crossed over and put my finger on the bell to call Lorrie. As I did, there was a rattling of the door from which had come the noise. I was not especially frightened, then, but I was puzzled. Perhaps it was one of the maids in the corridor outside the far door, I thought. I started toward it and the lights went out.

"In the middle of the room something brushed against me nearly knocking me down, and in the firelight I saw the ghost figure of a woman leap from the bed and catching her foot in the curtains, tear a great hole. But she did not pause. With her hair streaming over a long white night-gown, and in bare feet, she came to me, weeping and holding out her hands in pleading. I stood there petrified, not believing my own eyes.

"Suddenly, with a wild scream, the ghost-woman seized me by the wrist and dragged me to the fireplace, pointing in agonized entreaty to the great andirons. The fire had settled down, and as I looked, I saw very distinctly the wraith or a naked new-born baby. In horror and pity I put out my hands to seize it, when I felt an icy kiss on my cheek and I knew nothing more."

An old engraving of Langdon Hall, Peggy's romantic castle in Scotland which is now vacant and for sale.

The doctors in Queen's Hospital in London to which Peggy Day was hastened several days later by a frantic husband, assured her that these hallucinations were not unusual for a woman in her condition. Nor did they allow Mr. Day to breathe a word to Peggy, when she was better, of the story which came to him from the lips of the old nurse Lorrie, when he went back to Scotland, several weeks later to close up the old mansion. It had to do with one of the early Darnell's, a young earl who loved not wisely but too well, and who conceived the idea of building a remote room to the hall where his mistress might have a secret chamber. When the child was born, the father is said to have entered the room and seizing it, cast it into the burning fireplace. Here, Peggy's story follows faithfully the tradition as laid down by old Lorrie and which has been repeated in the village at Caithness for full two centuries. The mother leaping from the bed, when she saw the designs of her lord, caught her foot in the bed curtains and perished with the child.

As a proof to her story, Lorrie offered the evidence of the great rent in the left side of the bed curtains. Mr. Day, himself, found the three-cornered tear, carefully mended, yellow and rotten with age. "It is another old wives' tale" say the doctors. But they can not explain the close similarity of Peggy's story and the legend, of which Mrs. Day was absolutely ignorant at the time, and which, it is doubtful, she will ever be told.

HORSE GUARDS OF LONDON

(Associated Press.)

The Horse Guards is a bit of old London whose pageantry adds color to lives of citizens and to thousands of American visitors. Turning at Charing Cross, the stranger looks down that picturesque avenue leading to Westminster Abbey and the Houses of Parliament, whose middle course bears the name of Whitehall.

On the right side of the street, just beyond the stately pile of the foreign office, stands a gray stone Georgian structure back from the street and surmounted by a great clock tower, the predominating feature of the building. This is the Horse Guards.

Mere walls of sooty stone, however representative of eighteenth century architecture, at first escape notice altogether. Attention is riveted on the two mounted sentries at the sides of the entrance gate. Only later does one become conscious of their background. For here are what the National Geographic Society calls the "soldiers of one's boyhood dreams," gorgeousness and romance and manly beauty combined.

Great 6-foot men they are, mounted on silken steeds, and resplendent in steel and scarlet and gold. Motionless as statues stand horse and rider, except when a smart salute greets some passing army officer. Such a salutation is accompanied by so much clatter of metal armor that dreamy officials not expecting this demonstration of respect have been brought back to earth with a most undignified jump.

Never a smile crosses the guard's face, and his horse seldom moves. It is an open question between London children and their nursemaids as to whether the statues are real or wax, like the figures at Madam Tussaud's Museum. They are the lead soldiers of boyhood grown big and come to life. There they stand day in and day out, summer and winter. Every hour the individual sentries change, but so much alike are they that the yearly visitor to London has the feeling that the same friendly silent horseman greets his eye that delighted his soul last year and the year before.

The old Georgian building, known as the Horse Guards, is used for military purposes, containing at present the office of the commander in chief of the home forces. It occupies the site of the tilt yard of Whitehall Palace, which Henry VIII took from Cardinal Wolsey upon the latter's downfall. In this palace Elizabeth held her court; in front of it Charles I was beheaded, and at Whitehall Charles II led his merry life under the motto of "Evil to him who evil thinks."

Shortly after the brief reign of James II the palace was burned, leaving only the banqueting-hall, which stands to the present day and which was perhaps the most beautiful part of the royal residence, having been planned by the famous architect, Inigo Jones.

The Horse Guards itself dates from the middle of the eighteenth century and is an excellent example of Georgian architecture. It served originally as barracks for royal guardsmen. An archway under the clock tower leads to a graveled open space facing St. James Park. Through this archway only the king and a few highly privileged persons may drive, and the space beyond is the scene of one of London's most gorgeous pageants, the annual "trooping of the colors" on the king's birthday, the third of June.

On this day the royal guards regiments pass in review before the king with their regimental colors flying. Picturesque uniforms of gorgeous hues, magnificent drilling and distinguished audiences combine to make one of the greatest of the "free shows" of old England.

Rust Causes Losses of Billions

New metal alloys, protective coatings of special metals of extraordinary purity are chemists' latest weapons against rust, says Popular Science Monthly.

Electroplated coatings of cadmium or zinc—or, where fine appearance is demanded, nickel or chromium—will protect metal cables and household silverware alike, according to R. M. Burns, of the American Bell Telephone Laboratories. Aluminum has been successfully tested by the U. S. Bureau of Standards to coat the duralumin alloy framework of airplanes. It is sprayed on by a new process.

If skyscrapers had gold skeletons and we ran gold locomotives on golden rails, we would have no rust problem—for that metal does not rust. Meanwhile, we spend more money for paint to keep things from rusting than is contributed to all institutions of scientific research and of higher learning combined.

"Mechanical Ears" Beat Man's.

So delicate are the "mechanical ears" perfected by scientists to detect sound waves in the air, that a gun fired on the east coast of England was "heard" at Birmingham University, more than 135 miles away, says Popular Science Monthly. The sound was not heard by human ears, but was detected by the recording instruments.

Handing It Back.

It is related that a certain man, who apparently didn't like Buddha, came up to him and called him a lot of very ugly names. Buddha listened quietly until his reviler had quite run out of epithets, and then said to him:

"If you offer something to a man, and he refuses it, to whom, then, does it belong?"

The man replied, "It belongs, I suppose, to the one who offered it."

Buddha said, "The abuse and vile names you offer me I refuse to accept."—From the Outlook.

The Desert Decision

By WILLIAM SLAVENS M'NUTT

LAFE KARGER was Buck Jenkins' keeper from the time they were boys attending grammar school in the little town of Olamette, Kans. Lafe was 10 years old, when he made his first characteristic sacrifice for his friend.

Young Jenkins, also 10, had broken into the school house at night. He had drawn certain pictures on the blackboard and walls. Under these pictures he had scribbled captions. The pictures and captions dealt rudely with the teacher.

There was, of course, an investigation. Lafe Karger believed rightly, that the investigations would, if persisted in, discover Buck. He believed, too, that if Buck were proven guilty he would be harshly dealt with. His reputation, even then, was considerable and bad. Lafe had heard Buck's name linked with talk of the reform school.

So, knowing a little and imagining more, Lafe Karger rose in class and confessed the vandalism of which Buck Jenkins was guilty. The results were about what he expected. He was punished, of course, but because of his excellent reputation the penalties inflicted were comparatively light.

When the affair was over young Lafe Karger went swimming with young Buck Jenkins. The swimming hole was some distance from town. When they arrived there young Lafe spoke his mind.

"You hadn't ought to done that, Buck," he said earnestly.

Buck dug in the mud with a bare toe. He was embarrassed. Embarrassed and puzzled. Lafe often affected him thus.

"Ah, shucks! What did you want to go an' own up to it for?" he demanded resentfully.

"I was scared they'd send you to the reform school if they caught you," Lafe explained.

"They wouldn't o' caught me," Buck persisted scornfully. "You make me sick!"

"Put up your fists," Lafe commanded without heat.

"What you goin' to do?" Buck asked.

"Fight," Lafe enlightened him laconically.

"All r'ght," Buck said wearily, without enthusiasm or anger.

He put up his fists and they fought there on the bank of the creek, fought furiously to a finish. Buck had the initial advantage. He was quicker, more naturally savage, the better instinctive fighter. Lafe took all the early punishment and fought on doggedly. He was still fighting strong when Buck began to weaken. The affair wound up with Buck helpless on the ground and Lafe astride him, bloody and bruised, but still strong.

"Give up?" Lafe inquired. There was no hint of rancor or fury in his voice.

Buck gasped an affirmative.

"Promise you won't do nothin' like that again?"

A grunt of ascent.

Lafe rose and helped Buck to his feet.

"You're a sight," he said sadly, gazing on the facial havoc he had wrought.

"Aw, y'aint so pretty yourself," Buck snarled in retort.

"Y'ought to be ashamed of yourself," Lafe insisted mildly.

"You make me sick!" Buck said sullenly. Then they stripped and went swimming.

Lafe Karger was 21 years old when he broke into major league company, pitching for an Eastern team which, for the double purpose of identification and concealment, we will call the Bears. He was a big, strong, calm young man with bullet speed and rifle control. His nervous system was, apparently, equivalent to that of a sleepy ox. No matter how critical the situation nor how demonstrative the crowd, he did his work methodically, unhurried, unworried, as cool and sure as a man puttering with a garden, alone in his own back yard.

The sport writers nicknamed him, the Big Truck. They wrote much of his blinding speed, his coolness in crises, his uncanny control, and more of his character and life off the diamond. He had brought a bride with him when he came up from the minors. She was a homey, old-fashioned girl from Olamette. She and her ball-playing husband lived simply in a small apartment after the manner of a steady-going young carpenter and his wife. Lafe was as good a husband as a ball player. Home every night the team played in town. In his hotel by or before 10 each night the team was on the road. Never drank. Smoked only an occasional cigar. Unspoiled by publicity. Just a steady, hard-working, home-loving young man whose business happened to be playing ball.

In midsummer of his second year with the Bears, John Fogarty, the manager, sounded him out on the subject of one Buck Jenkins, catching for a Coast League team.

"I worked with him from the time I broke into the minors until I came up here," Lafe told him.

"So I hear," said Fogarty. "He's burnin' up the Coast League. Got everything they tell me."

"He's a sweet ball player," Lafe assured him.

"He must be," Fogarty agreed. "But—wild, I hear."

Lafe said nothing.

"I'd sign him in a minute," Fogarty went on. "Only—— Well, I hear he's hard to handle. What do you know about him?"

"I can handle him," Lafe declared.

"Yeh?" said Fogarty. "All right, big fella. You'll get the chance."

Mrs. Karger was not pleased when Lafe told her Buck was joining the team. "I think it's a shame!" she declared indignantly. "You know perfectly well how he'll act and I suppose you'll go chasing around after him as you always did, getting him out of trouble and straightening him up."

"I can handle him," Lafe insisted. "I always could."

"I know you can," Mrs. Karger admitted irritably, "but why do you waste your time doing it?"

"He ain't really bad," Lafe argued. "Just wild."

"Wild," Mrs. Karger exclaimed scornfully. "He's just a troublesome no-good and he always was."

"Well, Mary, I'll tell you," Lafe began hesitantly. "I—I—well, —" the words stuck in his throat. A rich, red flooded his face. "I— like him," he blurted out at last.

Mrs. Karger looked at him curiously, started to speak and thought better of it. After a little time she nestled in his lap and kissed him.

"You're awful nice," she whispered fondly "Sometimes I could just shake you for being such an easy-going old silly, but if you were even a teenty-weenty bit different I'd die."

Buck Jenkins arrived drunk. Lafe met the train at a junction stop outside the city, lugged Buck off and drove him to a Turkish bath.

"Whyn't you lemme alone?" Buck raved at him maudlinly. "Always boozerin' me! Y'make me sick! Knew damn well you'd be at me soon's I got here, preachin' 'n' beefin'! Lemme 'lone!"

Lafe offered no argument in answer until Buck was boiled out and sobered up. Then he spoke.

"You're goin' to behave up here," he informed him sternly. "I'm goin' to see to it you do. I've given Fogarty my word to handle you and I will. Any time you go off the reservation while you're up here with us I'll lick you within an inch o' your life."

Buck stared at him, embarrassed, puzzled as of old.

"What's the big idea?" he demanded. "I'm just a big bum, Lafe. I always was an' I always will be. What do you bother with me for?"

Lafe flushed and shrugged. "I dunno," he mumbled.

Buck shook his head wonderingly. "Neither do I," he declared. They both lied. They both knew.

As a battery they were worth more, far more, than their combined offensive and defensive value to the team. They were drawing cards. They always gave a good show. It was entertainment to watch them work together, the nervous, hawk-faced, voluble Buck Jenkins squatting behind the plate, calling encouragement to the big pitcher, yelping derisive comment at the enemy batters, smacking the hollow of his big mitt smartly with his right fist, tense, talking, always talking; Lafe Karper on the mound, huge, cool, silent, slow, moving always lazily and easily until the instant of delivery and then suddenly exploding into a coordinated intensity of effort that whistled the ball over the plate with such speed that, at his best, the batters facing him thanked God he had control and swung blindly at a swishing sound rather than a seen object, and the umpires blinked and flinched and called many a ball a strike by guess.

Off the ball field Lafe rode hard on his fiery, wayward battery mate, as he had promised Fogarty he would. He kept him in fairly good shape during the playing season, but in the winter Buck escaped surveillance and had his way with himself. Each successive spring he showed up at the training camp in a more deplorable condition. Each year his job of getting back into playing shape was harder and Lafe's duty as a shepherd correspondingly more difficult.

In the winter after his seventh year in the big league Buck Jenkins tried vaudeville in company with a comedienne by the name of Rose O'Malley. After a month on the road together they were married. In the spring Buck announced he had given up the diamond for the stage and would not report for training. Fogarty sent Lafe Karger to persuade him to play for at least another year.

Lafe started on his errand convinced that the actress Buck had married was an evil influence and vowing that he would give her a piece of his mind.

He came back without Buck and curiously gentle in his comment on the woman who had married him.

"Buck's through," he told his wife the night he returned. "This winter's finished him. He'll never get himself into shape to play again."

"That woman!" Mrs. Karger exclaimed.

Lafe shook his head. "It's funny," he said thoughtfully. "She's tried her best to keep him straight. She—she loves him."

"Love!" Mrs. Karger sniffed.

Lafe nodded. "She does," he insisted. "But she can't handle him. Nobody but me ever could handle him. I don't know what'll become of him now."

Lafe was right. Rose O'Malley did love Buck Jenkins; loved him near to her own destruction. She clung to him for three hectic years, refusing booking that was offered if she would again do a single, playing small time, because that was all she could get as long as she insisted on carrying Buck, striving all the while to make a performer out of him, which couldn't be done; and struggling too, to reform him into a sober, decent man, which was, seemingly, equally impossible.

In the end he left her and she appealed to Lafe Karger to persuade him to return.

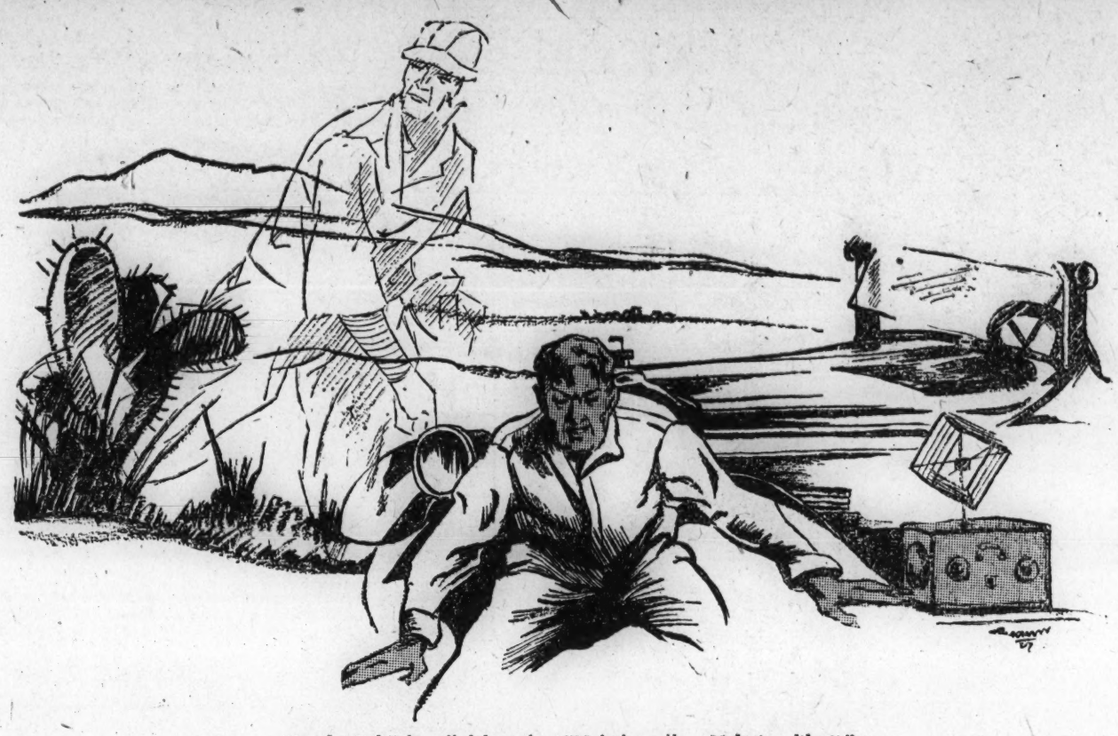

"Everybody thinks I'm a fool to want him back," she said, "I suppose I am. But——"

"I know," Lafe said, gently. "Buck's mighty wild an' hard to handle, but he must be some good or—or you and me wouldn't like him the way we do. I'll get him to come back. I always could handle him."

This once, though, he couldn't handle him. He found him, sick and shaky, in a hotel room, and began to argue and command as of old. Buck sat up in bed and cursed him, cursed him filthily, earnestly, far beyond the bounds of endurance. Lafe Karger's face went white as he listened and his eyes turned cold.

"I'm through," he said when Buck had finished. "I've took a lot off you, Buck, but I don't take that. I'm through, an' for her sake I hope your wife'll leave you go to hell alone in your own way."

He left the room and Buck Jenkins, cynical, hard-boiled Buck, buried his face in the pillow and cried like a baby. The unforgivable words he had said to Karger had been said deliberately, for the purpose of driving him away forever, but only Buck knew why. Karger alone could still hurt him. He had always been able to hurt. He could hurt because Buck loved him. And now that he had assured himself that he would never be hurt by Karger again, he was worse hurt than he ever had been before.

"Steady, Kid!" he called hoarsely. "Nobody walks. Make 'em like it."

An offer to act the part of a ball player took Buck to Hollywood, and there or thereabouts he stayed, playing a bit now and then, trading on his fading popularity, borrowing, mooching, going rapidly down year after year, while Lafe Karger pitched his way steadily through the seasons, passed the time when most ball players retire, and became the reigning active grand old man of the national game. But at last a year came when the news was written that Lafe Karger was playing his final season. In midsummer he confirmed the report. He was still taking his turn in the box, but the mighty right arm was failing. He might hang on for a year or two more if he cared to, but he had made and saved and cannily invested much money and could afford to spare himself the humiliation of staying in the spangles to hear the death chant: "Take him out!" from the throats of the crowds that had cheered him so long. And so he was quitting at the end of the season.

And that year the Bears won the league pennant, and for the first time since Lafe Karger, the Big Truck, had joined them, had their crack at a world series. And that year Buck Jenkins, in Hollywood, reached the botton of the pit of degradation into which he had been so long descending.

Through July, August and September of that summer the days were blurred intervals of light to him, intervals in which he moved about mechanically, performing the services for which he was paid, walking, talking, apparently normal and actually out on his feet. He was delivering bottle orders for a bootlegger. He had sunk to that. And he was taking most of his pay in cheap, raw gin, fiery stuff that just barely kept him together, kept him moving, talking, obeying orders, but practically mindless. He lost all track of time and events, and finally, in late September, he lost his job. Penniless, unable to mooch sufficient gin to keep himself drugged, Buck Jenkins grew frantic. Feeling returned horribly to his misused nerves. He scurried from acquaintance to acquaintance, begging abjectly and meeting refusal everywhere. The day of his fame was a dim memory. He was just a bum nearing the bottom of a long down grade and of all he knew he found only one to offer him help. Spider Monahan listened to his plea and, cautiously, out of the corner of his mouth, whispered a proposition.

"I ain't never done anything crooked," Buck protested feebly.

Spider shrugged and moved away.

"Hey," Buck called after him. "Wait a minute. I—I didn't say no, did I?"

And so it came about that on a bell-clear day in mid October the wreck of a once-great Buck Jenkins sat in the driver's seat of a stolen car far out on the Colorado Desert, driving slowly perforce for the road was a lightly traveled way and rough, heading for a fence in Arizona.

It was his first job. He had taken the car in Hollywood after midnight and driven steadily through the dark, the dawn, and on into the desert brilliance of full day. Behind him the snow-powdered peak of old San Gorgonio shone high above the lesser mountains of the range. At his right, far across the floor of the desert were the dry, wrinkled flanks of the San Jacinto mountains. At his immediate left the bare, baked San Bernadinos. All about him his raw desert. Nothing in sight but sand and chaparral.

His unfit body ached from the strain of the long drive. He stopped the car, crawled stiffly out and stretched his cramped limbs.

With the stopping of the motor silence assailed his ears, a silence so utter that it first startled and then awed him. He cleared his throat nervously and jumped at the sound he had made.

The car seemed, suddenly, a haven of refuge in that vast strange, silent waste, a friendly familiar bit of the world he knew. He crawled into the back seat intending to curl up there and doze for a bit. A black suitcase on the floor of the car attracted his attention. He opened it idly and grunted with satisfaction. What he had taken for a black suitcase was a portable radio set.

"Too damn still," he muttered as he placed it on the front seat and set up the folded loop. "Give a guy the willies. Gotta somethin' goin'. Some music or somethin'."

He turned the dials and developed a hoarse whistle. A little further manipulation and a voice, clear, distinct, broke the desert silence.

"Seventh and deciding game of the world series. Mason is pitching for New York. For the Bears, the big truck, Lafe Karger. Although Karger was batted out of the box in his first start and defeated in his second attempt, Manager Forgarty is depending on his old star in this last and deciding game of the series. There is much sentimental interest in today's contest for good old Lafe Karger is quitting the game he has honored for so long and this will be his final appearance on the mound."

A little interval of silence then. Buck Jenkins stood bent over the back of the front seat, stunned, a blurred ribbon of scenes from the past unwinding before his mental vision.

"The Bears have taken the field," the voice spoke again from the box. "Karger pitching. Bender at bat. Strike one, called. Ball one. Low, outside. Ball two. High. Strike two. Foul. Bender grounded out, short to first. Case at bat."

Crouched in the car there on the desert Buck Jenkins spoke.

"Atta boy!" he said hoarsely.

The knuckles of his fingers, clutching the seat back were white from pressure. His eyes were fixed in a hypnotic stare on the box from which the voice spoke, relaying the news of the game being played on that green, crowd-ringed diamond three thousand miles away.

As one hypnotized, Buck Jenkins remained thus, bent over, hands grasping the seat back, eyes fixed on the radio seat, while the voice of the announcer droned forth the tale of scoreless inning after scoreless inning. When the announcement came in the third inning that Karger was in a hole with men on first and second, none out, and the head of the batting list up, Buck Jenkins' frame shook violently. When word came that Karger had struck out Bender he grasped. Then: "Case hit into a double play, Frazier to Timmons to O'Donnell. Two hits, no runs, no errors."

Buck Jenkins cried then. The tears came from his reddened eyes and streamed down over his bloated cheeks. He wept intermittently, heedlessly, from then on until the last half of the eighth, when big Lafe Karger caught one on the nose and lifted it into the stands in left field for a home run. Buck Jenkins moved then. He leaped from the car and did a crazy dance on the desert sand whooping hysterically, arms flailing.

The voice of the announcer stopped him.

"First of the ninth," it droned. "Score one to nothing in favor of the Bears. Slagel at bat for New York. Ball one. Low, outside. Ball two. Low, inside. Strike one, called. Ball three. Low, outside."

A painful chill of fear rippled along Buck Jenkins' spine. Standing there on the hot desert sand, surrounded by cactus and greasewood, he squatted slightly and thumped the cupped palm of his left hand with his clenched right fist.

"Slagel walks. One on. None out. Caldwell at bat."

Then and there the desert vanished from Buck Jenkins' consciousness. Instead of sand and chaparral and mountains he saw around him a sloping bank of people and in front a green diamond. And on the pitching mound of that diamond, Lafe Karger, Lafe in trouble, Lafe at face with a situation that age and strain had robbed him of the reserve power to master. And then and there Buck Jenkins took charge. Calling encouragement to his old friend and battery mate and hurling shrill jeers of derision at the enemy batters he began to nurse old Lafe along, carry him through this final crisis as he had helped him through many a previous one.

Actually he squatted alone on the desert sand shouting and pantomiming action as the voice of the announcer gave him his cue. Lizards scurried about, disturbed by his voice and a side winder in the shade of a nearby cactus rattled angry warning. But of all this actuality he was as unaware as though he were in fact and flesh 3,000 miles away behind the plate at the final game of the world series. He saw old Lafe there in front of him, tired, reaching down into the depths of his being to draw therefrom enough of the old power to last him through. Just this once! Just three more men to pitch to and then he was done. A mere flash of the old speed. That was all he needed. Two, three, five minutes of the youth that was gone and he could step down from the throne gracefully, with a clean memory of final triumph to treasure through the quiet years to come. Buck Jenkins knew what the old boy was thinking. How well he knew!

"Caldwell hit a sharp grounder to Frazier," the announcer said. "Frazier booted it. Caldwell safe at first. Slagel at second. Two on. None out. Mason at bat."

The New York pitcher at bat. And then the head of the list. It was a tight spot! And Lafe walked Mason. Walked the pitcher who couldn't hit the size of his hat! Three on, none out, and the stands roaring.

"Capt. Banning came in and talked to Karger," the announcer went on. It looks as though he was going to take the old fellow out. No. He's leaving him in. Bender at the bat. Three on, none out and the head of the list up. It looks black for the Bears.

Banning! Buck cursed him for a fresh-faced young upstart. A good enough kid, but what could he know about nursing along an old prince like Karger? He walked out and spoke to Karger himself while the roar of the stands beat on his ears, walked out onto the diamond and laid his arm about old Lafe's shoulders and talked to him as a jockey talks to his horse through a driving finish down the stretch. He talked on, crooningly, until old Lafe lifted his head and looked into his eyes and smiled and nodded and then Buck Jenkins went back to his place behind the plate with his heart athrill. Old Lafe had a grip on himself again. He knew. He squatted in his place, yelped an insult at Bender and waited for the ball.

"Hi-yi-yip!" Buck Jenkins shrilled, dancing for a moment on the desert and making a flipping motion with his right hand. Then he squatted again.

"Strike two, called," the voice spoke.

"Atta baby!" Buck screeched. "They can't hit what they can't see, old timer. 'At's burnin' 'em through!"

"Strike three," the voice in the desert intoned. "Karger seems to have recovered both his speed and control. Those three strikes came over with as much smoke as Karger ever put on the ball in his prime. One out. Three on. Case at bat."

A moment of waiting and then: "Strike one. Case missed it a foot. Strike two, called. Strike three, called. The stands are in a delirium. No such demonstration has ever been seen on a ball field. Even the New York fans are rooting for the grand old man of the game to pull out and win his final battle. Three on, two out, Bowers at bat."

"One more to grab, old timer," Buck called cheerily. "Come on, now. Let's fry this young rooster an' wash up for the day."

He saw old Lafe wind up, saw him as clearly as he ever had through the years of their service together on the diamond, saw him lunge forward and saw his big right arm flash out and down in delivery. He saw all this and waited for the ball. A sick shock went through him. Something was wrong. The ball had not spanked into his mitt. A fog was in front of his eyes. He could see nothing but a dark grayness. Panic seized him. Had he fainted? Been hit and knocked out? What was wrong?

The voice of the announcer spoke again.

"The Bears win the world series." It was a triumphant shout. "Bowers hit the first ball pitched, a line fly deep to left field. It looked like a homer into the stands, but Franklin leaped into the air after a desperate run and made a circus catch. The crowd is pouring onto the field. They have caught old Lafe Karger and lifted him onto their shoulders. They are——"

The gray blankness faded from in front of Buck Jenkins' eyes. He became again aware of the desert about him, the mountains, the car standing in the road. He was squatted on the sand, shaking, sweating; a sick, weak wreck of a man, alone and raving. The whole thing had been a madness, a delirium. But no! The voice of the announcer was still describing the details of the demonstration. Jenkins walked to the car and laid his hand on the radio. That was real. Solid. Old Lafe had won his game. There had been no mockery about that. Old Lafe had won, God bless him!

He shut off the radio, shifted it to the back seat, climbed in behind the wheel and started the engine. For a long time he let it idle with the gears in neutral while he sat, staring out at the desert mountains, thinking. At last he spoke.

"My God!" he said prayerfully.

He put his gears in reverse then, backed the stolen car around and drove away in the direction from which he had come.

"Mr. Warhop is busy," the office boy said.

"Tell him I've got his car." Buck Jenkins instructed.

After a moment the boy returned.

"This way," he said.

Buck shambled into Warhop's office.

"I stole your car," he said abruptly. "I've brought it back."

Warhop was a youngish man who had made much money in Hollywood real estate.

"Stole it and brought it back!" he exclaimed. "What's the idea?"

"Aw, what's the use!" Buck said wearily. "It's a long story. I stole it. Call the cops. I'll do my jolt."

"Are you the Buck Jenkins who used to catch for the Bears?" young Warhop asked.

Buck nodded. Warhop indicated a chair.

"Sit down," he said. "Many's the time I've watched you play when I was a kid. Let's have that story."

* * * * * * *

The following spring Lafe Karger was touring southern California. He stopped at a filling station on a highway near Hollywood.

"Ten o' gas," he said briefly to the man in overalls who approached to serve him.

"Hello, Lafe," the man said timidly.

Lafe looked and recognized Buck Jenkins. For a moment only the memory of their last meeting held him back. Then he leaped from the car and grabbed his old friend in a bear hug.

"You're lookin' fine, Buck," he declared happily when the first incoherencies of greeting were over.

"Feelin' that way," Buck assured him. He raised his voice. "Hey, Rose! Here a minute."

A plump middle-aged woman came from around the corner of the little bungalow near the filling station and gave a glad cry at sight of Lafe. She was the woman who had been Rose O'Malley, the vaudeville actress. That night the two old friends sat late on the vine-screened porch of the Jenkins bungalow and Buck told a little of his story.

"I got kind o' straightened around last fall," he explained. "Cut out boozin' an' hellin' around. A fella named Warhop set me up with this little place. Some fruit on it an' the house an' fillin' station an' garage. I got track o' Rose an' she was—was willin' to try makin' a go of it. She fusses around the place an' once in a while does a character bit in a picture to help out. We're—we're doin' pretty well, Lafe."

"I'll say!" said Lafe earnestly. "You just had a wild streak in you, Buck, an' it took just so long to work it out. When it come time for you to straighten up, you done it all by yourself. Funny! I always had the hunch that somehow I could take the kinks out o' you, Buck, but, by glory! when the time came for you to do it you did it all—what's the matter? What are you laughin' at?"

But Buck never told him.

After the glamor of glory
After the fortune is won,
Home is the end of the story,
The reason for all that is done.

All that we gather of treasure
Wherever we battle or roam,
The profits of labor or pleasure
Are brought to the threshold of home.

For the sake of a child who may snuggle
With infinite love 'gainst his cheek
Man laughs at the heat of the struggle
And ventures new triumphs to seek.

And at last when his labors are ended,
And he leaves for man's ultimate goal,
The home he has guarded and 'tended
Reflects his career as a whole.

SCIENTISTS HOPE TO COUNT STARS

Astronomers of the Lick Observatory on Mount Hamilton, Calif., have just completed new measurements of the universe of stars in which we live. Through huge telescopes they have reached to scattered outposts on the borderlands of the Milky Way. There they have caught the faint glimmer of lonely little lamps that are, in reality, great fiery suns, at incredible distances, hurtling through space at speeds that defy imagination. And from the nature of that light they have calculated the distance across the vast swarm of stars in which our sun, with its planets, is an insignificant mote.

Such an appalling figure, of sixteen ciphers, is beyond the grasp of most of us, writes Edgar C. Wheeler in the November Popular Science Monthly. Imagine an airplane, speeding 200 miles an hour, attempting to cross this star-flecked ocean. It would take about 200 billion years—forty times the age of the earth! Or imagine it were possible to travel with the speed of light—186,000 miles a second. To have completed, at the present moment, the journey across the universe, we must have started 600 centuries ago, before the first primitive man appeared in Europe!

That man, a mere atom in the majestic pageant of creation, thus should span the universe with yardsticks of science is one of the wonders of modern astronomy. In the last few decades, surveyors of the night skies have steadily advanced their mile-posts into the infinite void, aglow with millions upon millions of suns. They have charted long unfathomed mysteries that lie all about our little world. And they have found that what once seemed bewildering chaos, really runs with matchless system and order.

The number of stars which our unaided eyes can see is about seven thousand. Great telescopes reveal many millions. These stars, astronomers find, are not sprinkled at random in space, but grouped in countless separate universes. Our universe, the Milky Way, is one of them, and our sun, a huge ball a million miles in diameter, is just one of a million stars in the swarm.

The latest measurements, the work of Allan Douglas Maxwell and associates at Mount Hamilton, have been achieved through observations of the frontiers of the Milky Way, where the stars thin out in number and scatter into nothingness. Dr. Maxwell measured the distances of 2,000 of these faintest suns, and from them calculated the distance to the outermost borders of the swarm.

But astronomers, not satisfied with merely knowing the size of our universe, seek now to map its exact form, surveying the exact positions of the million suns that compose it. They have long believed that the shape of our Milky Way cluster is a great disk, like a watch, bulging at the center. They have thought, too, that our sun, with its planets, lies somewhere near the center of the disk. But they have never known.

To find out for certain, the Astronomical Observatory of Harvard College has just undertaken the colossal task of surveying all the stars, one by one, and fixing their exact positions in space. In two or three years, says Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of the observatory, they expect to complete the vast family picture.

A Great Governor

By WILL ROGERS

TWO years ago I blew into a State capital to play one of my little concert engagements. Got in town in the morning early and one of the newspaper editors asked me if I would like to go up to the capitol and see the Governor; that he was a very pleasant and splendid man. Well, of course, I was tickled to death at the honor and we went up. There was several in his private office as the editor took me right in. I had also noticed several country looking folks sitting outside the office. Well we met him and he was mighty sociable and nice.

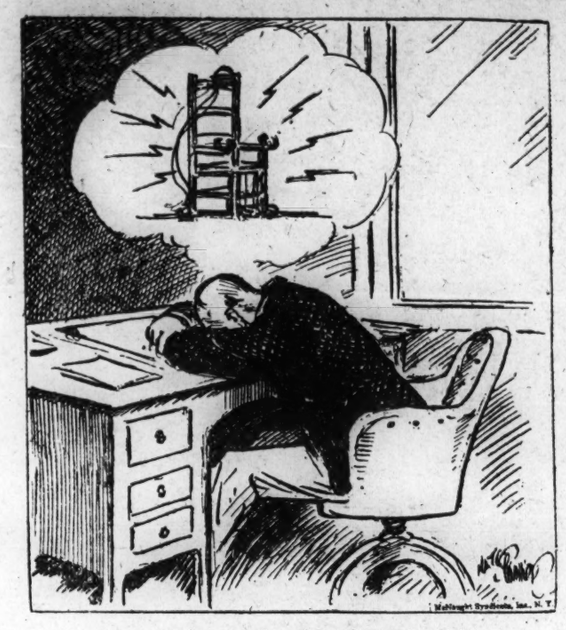

We exchanged a lot of the usual Democratic hard luck stories; of what a great party is was but just wasn't understood. He asked me if I had ever been out to see the home of a famous President who was buried there. I told him I had never been there. 'Course I knew what a great man he had been, but at the same time I had heard enough to know that an "Injun" didn't exactly rate high with him. And being a direct and proud descendant of the Cherokees, I knew he had quite a lot to do with running them out, and making them go West. But on the other hand I knew that he had unconsciously favored us in the long run, so I forgave him. Well, the Governor said he wanted to take me out there himself, and show me the place. I told him I didn't want him to do a thing like that; that I knew he was busy and had no time to tour me around. But he insisted and phoned for his car.

* * * *

WHILE we was waiting they took me up to the Historical Library and there I started in an acquaintance with John Trotwood Moore, the best historical writer on our Southern heroes. Don't miss his books.

Well, the Governor drove us out there, through a beautiful country and right in the most wonderful part is the old home of this unique President. It was late and the place was closed for tourists, and as there is no gas or electric lights in the house it looked like we wouldn't get to see the inside. But the Governor dug up the caretaker and when he saw the Governor, why he got a candle and we went through the place by candle light. I won't dwell on what we saw for instead of prowling off to Europe to see some old junk that means nothing to our lives, why go and see this old place.

On the way back to town I was thanking the Governor for my good fortune in having him show me the place personally and wasting all that valuable time on me, when he told me the following story: He was on his second term as Governor of this State, and at daybreak in the morning he was faced with the first execution of a prisoner he had ever had. "He is a young boy, oh 24 or 25, married and has a family. He is a true mountaineer from the mountains in the Western part of the State. He killed an old man who was a storekeeper, supposedly for his money. He was tried, convicted. The boy claimed the killing was accidental. His pleas for life imprisonment has been refused by our higher court and all that stands between that boy's life and death is me. I have been to see the boy myself several times. He is not the sullen, slouchy type of mountaineer boy at all. You could dress him up and you would mistake him for one of our college boys. He had a very good record, but the evidence showed that he had committed the crime in some way. I don't believe in capital punishment, I don't believe God gave us the right to willfully take anybody's life. But I swore to uphold the Constitution of the State when I took office. I have gone over every phase of the case. I have talked with his people; I have talked with the witnesses; I have tried every means within my power to find some reason to keep from taking that boy's life.

* * * *

"AND do you know what is one of the main reasons that makes me hesitate in giving him life imprisonment is the very qualities of the boy himself. He is not afraid of man, beast or Devil. He is absolutely fearless, and if he went to the scaffold before we see the light of another day, he will walk there more steadily than we will get out of this very car. Now if I commute his sentence I know that he is the type of boy that could not stand life imprisonment. As sure as we are here, he would at some time with that absolute fearlessness attack and kill some guards and perhaps take more life in escaping. Fear of being shot would mean nothing to him.

"I am not a rich man, but I would give all that I possess, and start life again without a penny, if this thing hadn't come up. It shouldn't be that these things should rest absolutely in one man's hands. It's asking too much of a human being. A Governor has enough to do without taking life. I truly wish at this moment that I had been defeated for office.

"And now, Will, for that's what I am going to call you, that's all we know you by, I want to thank you instead of you thanking me for this trip. With your jokes and your incessant chatter you have kinder helped me to forget this afternoon. You could not have come along on a more opportune day. I would have been beseiged every moment with people with pleas and petitions. I want you to come by my house a few minutes and cheer my wife up a bit. This thing is as hard for her as me. I can't go to your lecture tonight. I had intended to, but these people will be coming to my house all evening and through the night. I want to give you one of Bob Taylor's books, with his wonderful speeches and lectures in them. I want to autograph it for you. You would have loved Taylor, he was a great man. He was Governor, he could appreciate my feelings tonight. Oh, if I just had some grounds to do something."

Well, as I left his house and hurried to the hall to annoy the audience, I felt "Well, maybe a comedian is some good for something anyhow." I left the town after the show, rode all night to another city, but the minute I arrived there I bought a morning paper. It was in the same State. I nervously looked to see if there was headlines of an execution. There was. I knew then that duty to a sworn pledge had outweighed conscience.

He had explained the case with so much feeling that I had gone through a bad night myself. I felt, however, that I had met a man with a real heart. I couldn't ever say that a politician didn't have any real feeling. When I played there last year he had been elected to his third term as Governor, a case unparalleled in that State. We had another and more cheerful visit, and he was in my front row that night. He won't be there when I go back next time, for the Great Governor of All didn't reprieve his sentence.

I'll bet he will look for that old mountaineer boy up there, and I wouldn't be surprised he don't find him. For if he did do the crime, I bet Great Governor will find some extenuating circumstances that he will keep him there with him. This man was Governor Peay of the great State of Tennessee, who in some historic records will go down as signing the Anti-Evolution Bill; but in the hearts of everybody that ever met him and knew him, he will go down as a real man with a soul and love for his fellow man.

The Dentist Calls

By FRANK SULLIVAN

The season of entertaining is now well under way. In the months to come social careers will be made or unmade, depending on the success or failure of ambitious hostesses. As an aid to hostesses, a series of papers will be presented from time to time in this space giving hints and instructions which, it is trusted, will make the road of the harassed hostess easier. Today we shall consider how a hostess may successfully entertain her dentist.

In receiving the dentist the hostess should remember that he is, after all, only human and that the cardinal principle in entertaining him is no different than in entertaining one's newspaper dealer, one's delicatessen merchant or one's doctor. Make them all feel at home.

This does not mean necessarily that you should ask your dentist to take off his shoes and put on a pair of felt slippers as soon as he enters your drawing room.

You should first obtain a working knowledge of the human tooth, so that you may meet your dentist on common ground and be able to converse intelligently with him. Five minutes with any reputable book on teeth will enable you to familiarize yourself sufficiently with your subject.

That done, the next important thing is to procure a dentist's chair in fairly good condition. Rig this chair up in the drawing room, near a window and have one of the maids dressed as a nurse. Then, when the bell rings, you hide and send the maid to the door. She will have had her instructions and, if she remembers her lines, will say to the gentleman politely: "Won't you come in? Did you have an appointment with Mrs. Dooladdy?" He will say, "Yes. I had an appointment for dinner this evening." The maid's reply to this will be: "Oh, I'm so sorry, but Mrs. Dooladdy was called out of town today. She could see you tomorrow night for dinner or Wednesday morning for breakfast."

By this time he has entered into the spirit of the thing and is delighted.

"I can't come for breakfast Wednesday. I can come Friday for dinner," he declares.

The maid then shouts to you: "This dentist with the funny ears is here and says he can't come for dinner until Friday. Is that all right?"

You reply that it is, whereupon the dentist makes his exit with many chuckles and can scarcely wait until Friday rolls around. When it does he returns and is again ushered in by the maid-nurse, who hands him a copy of Puck for May, 1910, and tells him you will be able to see him presently. (An anteroom should be rigged up where he can wait.) After an hour you come out briskly, dressed in a white uniform, and welcome him with some appropriate remark about teeth.

"Come in," you say, and usher him into the drawing room.

"Won't you sit down?" you ask, motioning him politely to the dentist's chair.

He is delighted at this original touch and sinks back in the chair with a feeling of relief.

"How are the teeth?" you ask, by way of beginning the conversation.

A smile lights up his countenance. For years in his shop and away from it the poor fellow has had to listen to tales about other people's teeth, although, since he is only human, the chances are ten to one that he has had a burning desire to tell the world about his own teeth.

You, by being a clever hostess, have suddenly released the floodgates. Placed completely at ease by the dentist's chair he pours forth to you the trouble he has with his teeth. If he is a shy dentist, and even in spite of the chair can not bring himself to talk readily of his teeth, the appearance of the maid with a tray of potent cocktails will invariably remedy this situation, and after he has downed one or two glasses he will shed his inhibitions and you will be the recipient of amazing dental confidences.

If you are a particularly tactful and clever hostess you may even get away with a cursory examination of his teeth, recommending that he have that one out or this one X-rayed.

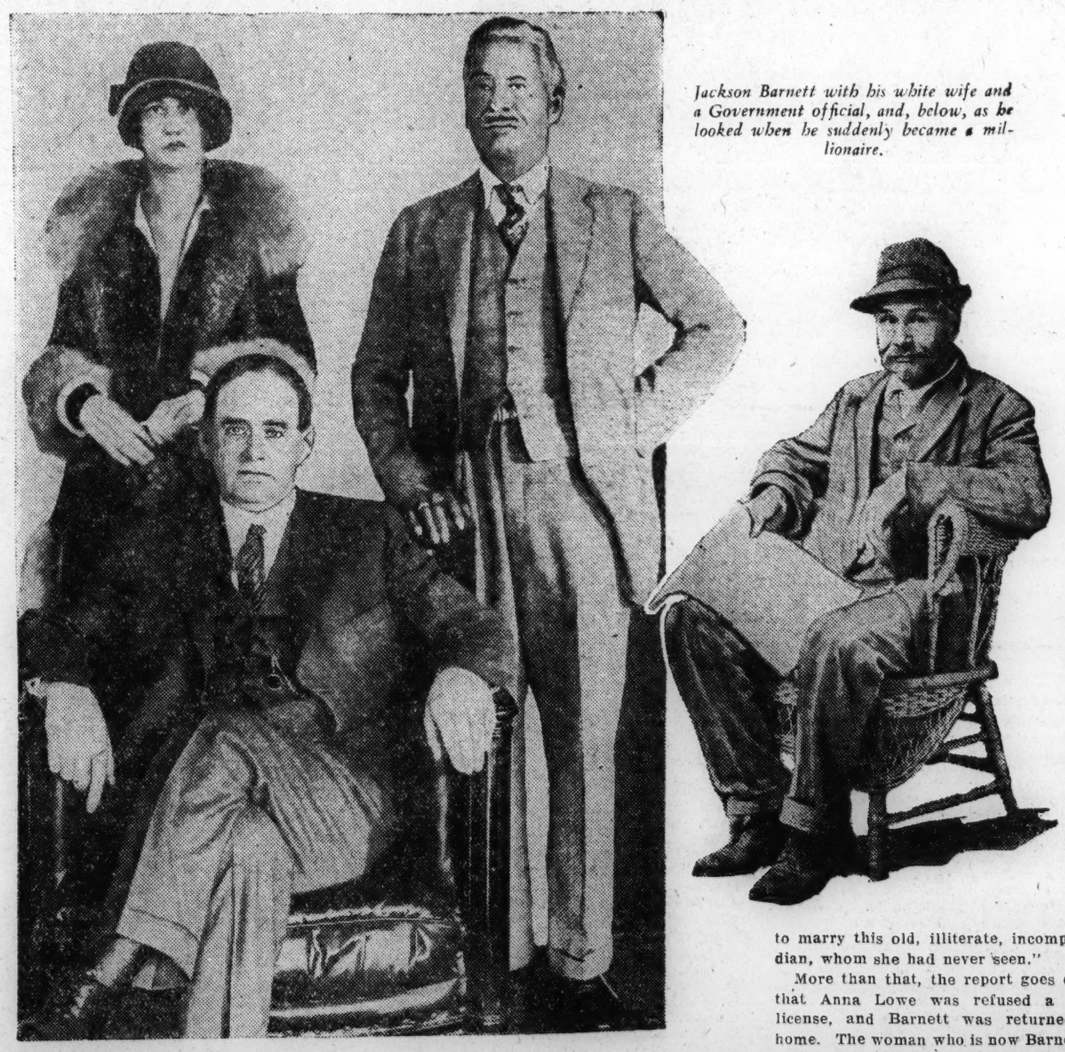

He will be made to feel even more at home if you can rig up some sort of drill and jab him with it occasionally, with the comment, "Does that hurt?" If he says "Yes," and jumps, give him another jab with the drill.

You will be surprised to find how quickly an hour can be passed discussing teeth.

Thus treated, the dentist will leave a satisfied and delighted guest. He will tell other dentists of the splendid time he had at your house, and in no time at all dentists by the score will be telephoning you, hinting for invitations to tea.

This sort of thing will probably get to be a great deal of a nuisance and you will probably live to regret the day you ever started it.

UNCLE SAM ENDS RICHEST INDIAN'S MONEY TROUBLES

Jackson Barnett with his white wife and a Government official, and, below, as he looked when he suddenly became a millionaire.

JACKSON BARNETT, America's wealthiest Indian, whose "thumbprint" has given away millions, is back again—financially—under the protecting wing of the United States Government.

The fortune that gushed itself via the oil-well route into the purse of the aged, illiterate Indian will now be in the keeping of Uncle Sam, and no more will Barnett give away thousands of dollars to whoever might knock upon his door and tell a tale of woe or greed.

Revoking reputed gifts of $550,000 to Bacone University, in Oklahoma, Justice John C. Knox, of the United States District Court of New York, in a recent decision, has ordered that the fortune fallen to the old Indian be placed in the care of the Secretary of the Interior for administration.

The story of Barnett's sudden rise to wealth is a strange one. In 1918 Jackson, then nearly 70 years of age, was living a few miles out of Henryetta, in the southern part of Okmulgee County, Okla. He could not read or write and he signed his name by thumbprint. Thirty years previously he had been enrolled as a "ward" of the United States Government and had been given some land, then thought to be of little value, in what is today Creek County, Okla.

Then came the discovery of oil in that God-forsaken corner of the world. Oil derricks "mushroomed" over the lands of Jackson Barnett. They gushed and poured and streamed. And Barnett, who had all his lifetime made bows and arrows in his hours of leisure, or pipes from sassafras roots, or played with his dogs, suddenly found himself rich—the richest Indian in the world.

And then his troubles began. The story of his sudden wealth spread over the country. First came a guardian, then a white wife, and then an endless stream of "solicitors," "beggars," "agents"—all desiring the thumbprints of Barnett. And the old Indian gave his wealth away indiscriminately. The holders of the thumbprints hied themselves to the courts to gain the support of the law for their claims, and before long many lawsuits were in State and Federal courts.

The employes of Uncle Sam looked with amazement on the stream of Barnett's "thumbprints" that were fast eating his fortune away. They took the old Indian's affairs in hand.

One of the first suits the Government fought for Barnett saved him $550,000. The Indian had given the amount named as a gift to the American Baptist Home Missionary Society. The Federal Court of New York prevented the Equitable Trust Co., of that city, from turning the money over to the society's officers. Another suit recently brought up is one compelling Mrs. Barnett to account for more than $1,300,000 of her husband's money. In this suit it is alleged that Barnett was kidnaped and married against his will, and that his fortune was taken away by conspiracy. A Government report says that "in January, 1920, Anna Laura Lowe, having previously read of Barnett's great wealth and never having previously seen him, but intent upon possessing herself of his money, went to Henryetta, hired a taxi-driver, went out to Barnett's home, where he was in charge of some caretakers, and induced him to enter a taxicab. Immediately proceeded to Okemah, the county seat of the adjoining county, and made an effort to secure a marriage license in order to marry this old, illiterate, incompetent Indian, whom she had never seen."

More than that, the report goes on to say that Anna Lowe was refused a marriage license, and Barnett was returned to his home. The woman who is now Barnett's wife, and about whom much of the litigation surges, went away and then returned after three weeks, "in a high-powered automobile, accompanied by a man and wife from Tulsa, Okla., and induced this aged, incompetent Indian to get into the car, which was hastily driven through the night a distance of about 150 miles to Coffeyville, Kans. The marriage took place on February 23, 1920."

In answer to the claim of the Government that Barnett is "incompetent" to take care of himself or his fortune, is the statement that "Uncle Billy" McCombs, minister of the spiritual needs of Indians in the eastern part of Oklahoma.

"Uncle Billy" says: "Jackson's mother died before the end of the Civil War, and the boy was left alone. But Jack managed to get something to eat from the soldiers and friends at Fort Gibson, until his aunt, Jennie Jefferies, learned of his whereabouts. Old man Jefferies sent for the boy and they kept him for several years. Jefferies came to the home of my father-in-law one day in 1867 and told him that he couldn't keep Jack any more. Jenny and her husband couldn't feed and clothe him properly so we took him in. He lived with us for nearly six years. Jack wasn't a fool then, and he isn't a fool now. If he wants to give his wife her third of his fortune, that's his own business."

But Uncle Sam doesn't think so. The arm of the law has reached into the great tangled legal thicket enmeshing the helpless old Indian and extracted him from the thorns there. All the "thumbprints" have been declared void; all the gifts rescinded and the wealth that was once the dream of those with persuasive tongues has gone glimmering down the long, long trail of "Nowhere."

BEAUTY AND YOU

BEAUTY IN DOLLARS AND SENSE.

By Viola Paris

HOW much does it cost to be beautiful?

It is difficult to obtain accurate figures on what the women of this country spend for cosmetics, but it is said that about five millions of dollars are passed over the toilet goods counters every day. Millions of packages of cream, rouge and powder are used each year.

It is possible, of course, for a woman to spend very considerable amounts of money on her beauty upkeep. A social leader who does not have to count the cost is lavish in her use of expensive cosmetics, and she has her hands, her face and her scalp treated often and regularly. But not all women can be extravagant. She who treads the middle path may visit her hairdresser every week or ten days; her manicure once a week; the pedicure occasionally. She may have a facial treatment and a body massage twice a month. Perhaps she takes a physical culture course at a gymnasium. And she buys the best powders, rouges, lotions, perfumes, &c., that she can afford.

The question, "What price beauty?" can be answered economically as well as extravagantly. For the solution, read today's article.

But what of the person who has to count almost every dime, who really must budget her expenditures economically? Perhaps she is a girl who earns a small salary, most of which must naturally go for lodging, food and raiment. Or perhaps she is married and has to make the finances of the family stretch as far as possible. How inexpensively can she achieve here beauty program?

First of all, let her remember that the most valuable of beauty attainments cost absolutely nothing. Nothing, this is, except energy, common sense and perseverance. With daily exercise, proper posture, a sensible diet and a serene disposition, a perfect foundation is achieved. The little external aids to nature need to be added as the final touches, but they need a fine healthy body if they are to make a good showing.

We will assume that you are willing to spend a reasonable amount on beauty aids—for they are important to good grooming and the consciousness of personal fastidiousness. If necessary, economics can be practised elsewhere to some extent. Let's see how the budget would read, over a year's time. It won't hold good for every individual case, of course, but here is one that we may regard as typical:

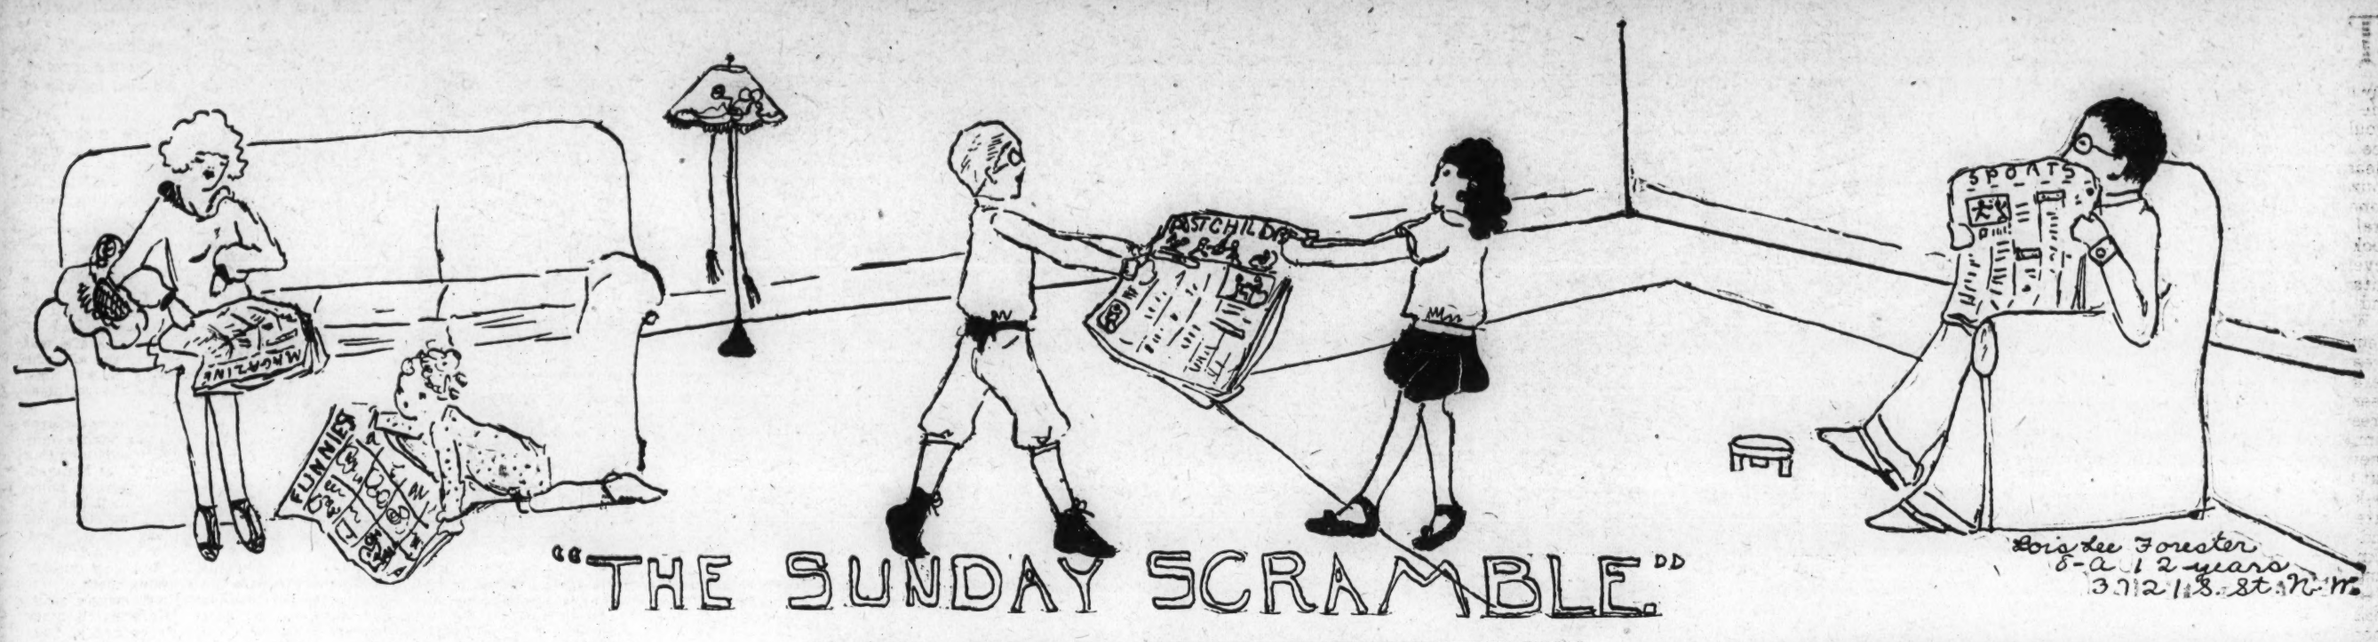

6 jars of cleansing cream at $1	$6.00
3 packages of cleansing tissues at 50c	1.50
4 cakes of facial soap at 25c	1.00
1 bottle of tincture of benzoin	.25
1 tube of lanolin	.50
1 package of zinc oxide	.50
2 bottles of astringent at $1.50	3.00
1 bottle of hydrogen peroxide	.50
1 jar of facial cream	1.50
2 bottles of non-perspirant liquid at 50c	1.00
2 cans of deodorant powder at 25c	.50
1 package of dusting powder	.50
4 boxes of powder at $1	4.00
1 rouge	1.00
2 lipsticks or boxes of lip rouge at 50c	1.00
1 vanity case	1.50
3 refills at 50c	1.50
1 bottle of perfume	4.50
2 bottles of toilet water at $1.50	3.00
1 jar of cuticle cream	.35
2 packages of nail polish at $1	2.00
1 package of nail white	.35
1 jar of hand cream	1.00
1 bottle of hair tonic	2.00
1 bottle of brilliantine	1.00
1 jar of scalp pomade	1.00
17 hair trims at $1	17.00
4 Turkish baths at $2	8.00
Incidentals	4.05
Total	$70.00

On this budget a woman would have to do her own shampoos and manicure and not be dependent upon waves for her hair. I have assumed the bob, because it is so prevalent. Very likely the yearly expenditure would in the end approximate $100, since you might decide to have a permanent wave or occasionally go to a beauty salon. I would like to see the regular manicure added, too, if that is at all possible. I have not counted supplies of bath soaps, dentifrices, tooth brushes, and so on, since those are family staples, not vain luxuries.

We have been rather stingy with astringent, but very often cool water with a few drops of tincture of benzoin may be used instead. The zinc oxide is to anoint the forbidden though occasional blemish, and also to rub into the skin in small quantities when a special bleach is needed. Other bleaches can be supplied from the pantry—buttermilk or a cut lemon or cucumber. In some localities the haircut may be less expensive—but some heads may need it more frequently.

"THE SUNDAY SCRAMBLE."

FRANK DARBY

(Awarded $1 Prize)

Frank Darby was humming a song to himself, just outside the gates of the railroad company, where he worked. He was in the highest of spirits that cool November morning, for he had been promoted the day before to the position of assistant engineer.

Five minutes after he had entered the first car, the train started to move. There were 716 people on that excursion train, and the destination of all of them was the new zoo in the mountains, where a collection of the rarest animals in the world had been brought. Darby kept his mind on his work, but he could not help hearing snatches of the song which he himself had sung that morning, and straightway began humming the song again. Suddenly, he stopped, for the train signals had changed quite quickly and the signals they now saw alarmed the engineer and his assistant.

It meant that 25 miles away the tracks were broken, and that three cars were running wild in their direction. However, the engineer proposed to go on for about 15 more miles anyhow, and then stop the train if necessary for, as he argued, the train running wild would by that time have switched the track and stopped, if the engineer on the other train had kept his head.

Darby was a little opposed to his superior, but thinking that the engineer had more experience than he, the young man went to his duties as he had been directed, expecting to wait until they approached the climax at Mining City, 15 miles away.

They had gone but 10 miles, when the engineer gave a little subdued scream. The train which had been running wild was coming right to Darby's train at a terrific rate of speed, and it looked as if there was going to be a collision.

The engineer was so nervous that he left control of the train, while Darby, seeing the danger of the position, quick as thought pushed his superior aside and, switching the train over to some intersecting tracks with a jerk that every passenger on the train felt, completed the action just in the nick of time, for the wild train would have collided just at that moment.

While he did this, the wild train also stopped, for Darby had broken the track in the way of the other and with a swing had caused the wild train to come to a dead stop.

In this way, he had saved the lives of the people of his train and also saved from horrible death the lives of 225 more people of the wild train.

For this double action of inestimable value, he was promoted to the rank of engineer and given a goodly sum of money besides.

Today you can see that hero, Frank Darby, outside the gates of the railroad company, humming that same song which spelled the safety of nearly a thousand lives that memorable November morning.

Dear Post Boys and Girls:

The pride of self-respect is a very good thing to have but remember that one of the greatest detriments of character development is false pride.

One of the most distinguished women in this country who happens also to be very wealthy is fond of quoting the old adage, "Who wields a broom as by God's law makes both that and the action fine."

This woman, and many men and women like her, who serve in the great cause of humanity, enjoys doing humble tasks if they are necessary and in that way gets many willing workers to follow their examples.

Watch the boys and girls about you. Those who do their duty in the small as well as the great things of their school and daily life are very apt to be the men and women leaders of the future.

If you have set a goal for yourself based on ambition and attainment, remember that you will have to perform many tasks, humble perhaps and uninteresting, before you can reach it. In fact, it is the boys and girls who have to work and strive for their success who are the finest men and women as a rule and the most successful in after life.

Boys, if you have wood to cut or work at the corner grocery on Saturday to help with your livelihood; or girls, if you must sweep and wash dishes and do other household tasks, do them well. Saw each piece of wood as it should be done and pile it up as neatly as you can and make the man you work for think you are a bright and lively boy and earn a cheery smile from the customers. And you girls, make every glass you wipe shine and leave not a speck of dust on the floor. So when you talk to your playmates about what you have been doing all day, you can tell with pride of your achievements and perhaps make them secretly envious of your accomplishments.

Queen Victoria of England and the late Empress of Germany and many other crown heads insisted that their children and grandchildren should all learn something useful by which they could earn their bread and butter with their hands if necessary.

Princess Ileana, of Roumania, who came to this country with her mother, the Queen of Roumania, grandmother of the new boy King Mihai of that country, last year, has a house which she keeps in order herself. She lives in the palace but loves to slip away from the rigors of court life to sweep and dust and clean windows, make curtains and wash dishes, and takes great pride in her little house. She does not hide her mop or dust clothes when she has visitors, but throws wide the door and bids her visitors enter and displays with pride her handiwork to them.

Junior artists we need your services in providing the headings and other pictures for this page. Do not be discouraged if your pictures are not printed at once, sometimes we have to hold them on account of space or suitability for some time. In that connection may I say of the fine pictures recently printed done by Beatrice D. Thorne, of Riverdale, Md., that she was somewhat younger when she submitted her work. By mistake her added years were not accredited to her when they appeared. Beatrice is now seventeen years of age and a senior in high school, but still we hope like other seventeen-year-old boys and girls and seniors in high school interested in The Post Boys and Girls Page.

Send all drawings as well as essays and stories to the Editor, Post Boys and Girls Page. Remember, the rules about writing in ink (black ink for drawings) on one side of the page only and sign your entries with your full name, age, address and school.

"HIDDEN TREASURE"

(Awarded $1 Prize.)

"Well, I don't care. I just don't believe there is anything to it," declared Keith Mais to the other two boys who stood around him.

"But just look here. Read this again and see if you can't get the real meaning of these words," insisted Jack Hicks as he handed Keith a small, dirty piece of paper. Keith took it and read these words out loud very slowly: "Go down to the old 'Smith's Bottom' at 9:30 tonight and follow to the right of the spring for one hundred yards. There you will find an old stump. Dig it up and you will find the 'Hidden Treasure.'"

It was not signed and the hand writing was very unsteady.

As Keith finished he shouted with twinkling eyes: "Say, fellows, don't you reckon there's about a million dollars under that old stump?"

"Now, Keith, don't be so sarcastic," commanded Phil Moore, the third boy of the little group. "There is some chance of its being a fake, but if Jack will go with me I am going down to the bottom tonight with an ax, pick and shovel," Phil finished with a questioning look at Jack.

"Of course I am going, just for curiosity's sake," replied Jack.

"Well, if both of you are going, I'll go to," Keith added hastily, "but I expect we're going to get fooled."

With this agreement each boy went to his own home.

Jack Hicks, the son of a wealthy merchant, had found the dirty piece of paper pinned to one of the curtains in his room as he dressed the morning of this story. He was very excited, and though he thought it strange, he did not show it to any one until he had found his chums and let them read it and give their opinion on the subject.

At about 9:30 that night there could be seen three ghost-like figures walking silently down the hill which led to the spring in "Smith's Bottom." Each figure carried an instrument for digging and a lantern.

Jack went in front, marking off the yards. Suddenly he whispered loudly to the boys following him, "There's the stump like the note said, fellows, on the right side of the spring."

Even Keith became duly excited and the three boys rushed headlong to the stump, all former caution thrown to the wind. They immediately began cutting away the stump, and when they got it up they looked under it expectantly. Imagine their surprise to find nothing! Digging down into the earth, they found only dirt.

Keith put on the "I told you so" look, but before he could speak Phil had grabbed the ax and started cutting away another stump.

If any one had chanced to look in at "Smith's Bottom" that night, they would have seen more stumps than one torn up by its roots and the boys with rather dejected looks on their faces. Keith was urging them to go home.

"Well," Jack said slowly, "we've cut up every stump in this bottom but one, and I don't want that one to be lonesome," and with that he went to the last stump in the bottom and began cutting it away.

They had just cut the stump up and were turning away when Phil cried, "Hold on. Here's something!"

All excitement again the other two dropped to their knees and began searching. At once their hands struck something and they lifted up a medium-sized box. It was locked, and finding nothing with which to open it, the three boys started back home with the box between them.

At last they had gotten the heavy box upon Jack's porch and Jack had returned from his workshop with tools to open it when they heard a giggle, and Shirley, Jack's twin sister, burst out of the door laughing, "you all stayed long enough to find some real treasure!"

"But how did you know about the treasure? Shirley Hicks, did you pin that note to my curtain?" demanded Jack with startled and suspicious eyes.

"Yes, I did! I surely fooled you that time," exclaimed the delighted Shirley, who was always playing tricks on her brother and his chums. And then Shirley explained how she had crept into Jack's room the night before and had pinned the mysterious note to the curtain.

The boys laughed, and in their merriment almost forgot the box they had found until Keith reminded them that they might have found some treasure sure enough. So at once they opened the box and found—lots of old canceled checks!

Why the old checks had been put there the boys never found out, and though it is not said out loud, Jack and Phil whisper that Shirley did not play her trick alone, but that Keith was in on the secret.

A Cat's Bravery.

(Honorable Mention.)

The Brown family owned a cat. Not an extraordinary one, but a plain, every-day cat. They kept this cat because their son fairly worshiped it. Often Mrs. Brown would say that the cat put her paw in the pudding or upset the milk and because of this the cat would have to be given away. One night after every one had gone to bed the son called for water. As his mother was asleep he went down stairs to get it.

In the kitchen he spied a box of matches within reach.

Five minutes later found him striking matches, one after the other. Then he started a blaze.

Being satisfied with what he had accomplished, he went to bed. About 3 o'clock in the morning Mr. Brown felt something tugging at his pajamas. He scarcely opened his eyes when he beheld a huge flame. And tugging at him was their cat. Quick as a flash he jumped out of bed. Fortunately a neighbor called some fire engines. After the fire was out Mr. Brown asked his son if he had anything to do with the fire. His son cried and said it was he who started the fire. It was decided upon that the cat wasn't to be given away and in addition to that the cat was given a collar on which was written, "I saved the life of a family."

How Jane-Louise Gained Her Happiness.

(Honorable Mention.)

Jane-Louise Martin was as rich as anybody could wish to be. She was very unhappy. She lived with her nurse, Nana, and her guardian, Miss Sidney, in a large stone house with many acres of land around it. Yet she was unhappy. Miss Sidney noticed that she did not enjoy her lessons any more and found her often sitting alone, on the verge of tears, so she worried about her and wondered what was the matter.

One day she found out. She was looking over one of Jane-Louise's books and she saw something drop out. She picked it up to look at it and she saw it was Jane's diary. This is what she read:

"October 8th.—It is getting to be very lonely here, because I have no one to play with. All the land around here does no good to any one, while the government is looking for a place to build a playground on, for the poor children. They don't seem to be able to find a place, and it would be terrible if the poor children don't get a place to play in. I wish Nana or Miss Sidney would give them some of our land. Then, maybe, I could watch them play."

After she had finished reading this Miss Sidney decided that she would help the lonely little girl. She put on her coat and hat and went out.

The next morning she tiptoed into Jane-Louise's room and woke her up.

"What do you think! I have the best surprise and you can't guess what it is." Miss Sidney, as she said this, was as excited as Jane herself.

Jane admitted that she could not guess, and waited impatiently for her to answer.

Miss Sidney smiled all over. "Well, I have sold the tip end of this property in your name to the government to build a playground for the poor children. I hope that you will be very happy now." Then Miss Sidney left the room and Jane-Louise happily prepared to get dressed.

Two months later the playground was finished and Jane-Louise went to visit it. There were many children there, and they were very nice to her, because they knew that she had given them the land to build it.

Now she goes every day to the playground and plays with the children. She never is unhappy now, and just by being a little generous yourself now and then, you might also win good friends and be very happy.

Day.

(Honorable Mention.)

O, lovely day, thou sunny queen,
Who rules the realms of light,
Thy throne is on the snowy clouds,
Thy crown's of sunbeams bright.

Thy robes are almost always blue,
But sometimes they are gray,
And trimmed with rainbow colors too,
That shed light o'er thy way.

Thy tears are like to opals pale,
Thy face is bright and fair,
It cheers the people thru and thru,
The smile you always wear.

O lovely day, I sing to thee,
I wish you'd always stay.
I write this ode to thee alone,
A lovely autumn day.

The Captain.

The waters rose and tumbled
Against the good ship Chide;
The mad wind howled and grumbled
And turned her on her side.

"Quick! to the life boats, hurry!"
The faithful captain cried.
Obediently the scurry
Of footsteps rang and died.

The goodly captain thought then
Of his dear home and heaven;
Of his wife and baby boy,
And daughter of eleven.

* * * * * * *

His last hours found him kneeling,
In silent reverent prayer;
He heard Jehovah calling
Through the tumult of the air.

He calmly gave last orders,
And then to watery grave
A brave, true soul departed
As he sank beneath the wave.

Love in the West.

(Honorable Mention.)

Long ago in the West, where few people lived, an Indian maiden lived with her father and his tribe. She was the cook and did all of the work except getting in the food.

Her father loved wars, but she feared them. Each time he went to fight Chief Black Bear and his tribe she would worry about him and her sweetheart.

Her name was Red Wing and her sweetheart's name was Silver Moon. Silver Moon loved the maiden, but Red Wing's father objected to the young man and would not let them marry.

Secretly, at night, Red Wing and Silver Moon would meet at the river's bank and talk beneath the moon and stars.

One night, as they were talking about their plight, Silver Moon spied something coming toward them. They kept quiet and soon saw Chief Black Bear and his tribe sneaking toward the wigwam of Red Wing's father. They were trying to capture him.

Silver Moon lost no time. He ran with Red Wing to her wigwam, and then went to her father's wigwam and was not seen by the enemy.

Thus he warned the chief in time and, together with Silver Moon's tribe, they defeated Chief Black Bear.

For this deed Silver Moon was given Red Wing's hand in marriage and they lived happily ever after.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

YEAST MAY PAVE WAY TO HEALTHIER BABIES.

IT may be that feeding brewer's yeast, or extracts of it, and whole wheat cereal, or extracts of it, will supply the means of making babies healthier in America than the New Zealanders ever hoped for.

The suggestion comes from Prof. Sure, of the University of Arkansas. He accepts the common opinion that the American diet is being too much refined. We are taking off too much of the wheat berry before we make flour of it. We are trimming our meat too nicely and not eating enough of the organs. Our vegetables and fruits are overprepared and our sugar is overrefined. The result is that our diet is too poor in that vitamin which protects against beriberi.

While plainly marked beriberi is not known in our country, various vague symptoms may be due to a lack of this vitamin. Normal, grown people may not suffer from a lack of it, but mothers who are nursing young babies are more likely to. The babies themselves show the maximum effects of this vitamin lack—a sort of masked beriberi.

Sure says. "It is quite possible that though beriberi is seldom encountered, a large proportion of the infant mortality through gastro intestinal disturbance is due to a lack of this vitamin."

In his experimental work Sure put nursing rats on a diet that was deficient in vitamin B. The baby rats continued to gain in weight for ten to twelve days, but in that time the mother rat lost from 20 to 30 per cent of her weight. Plainly, the young were exhausting the stored up supply of the mother. At about that point the young stopped growing.

If the diet was not changed the young died, as did the mother sometimes. But if either the mother or the babies, or both, were given a sufficient allowance of extract of yeast or wheat berry, growth was resumed and the mother got her weight back. The babies could be fed the extract indirectly through the mother, or directly. However, the dose required when the extract was fed the mother and reached the baby only indirectly through the mother's milk was much larger.

Applying these observations to human beings, the following may prove to be true. Nursing mothers should weigh themselves systematically. If they find they are losing weight unduly the probability is the nursing baby is exhausting her supply of vitamin B. She had better take some brewer's yeast, or its extract, or some whole wheat cereal, or extract. She should weigh her baby regularly. If the gain in weight is arrested for no known cause, either the baby should be given some brewer's yeast, or its extract, or else the mother should take it. Or if the baby develops a bowel trouble, and yeast extract or bran cereal is not contra indicated, it should be given to either the baby or the nursing mother. Now that respiratory troubles menace babies as much as bowel troubles do, the same extract can be used to protect against them.

CORRECT WEIGHT FOR BABY.

Mrs. V. C. write:

1. Is 14 pounds the right weight for a 5½-month-old child who weighed 9 pounds at birth? She is bottle fed.

2. Have you a book on when to start feeding the baby that I could send for?

REPLY.

1. Your baby should gain weight a little faster than she is, but do not try to speed her up until after mid-September.

2. Write to the U. S. Children's Bureau, Department of Labor, Washington, D. C., and to your State and city health departments for booklets on babies.

If this does not fill your 5-foot shelf, write to me for one, sending a stamped self-addressed envelope.

HOME BEST PLACE FOR BABY.

F. B. writes: Is it safe to take a three-week-old nursing baby on a farm?

REPLY.

Home is the best place for a baby. However, if the mother must get away, a properly sanitated farm is a moderately good place to take her baby. It is better to go to one place and stay there rather than to be on the move.

If the move is made, the mother must protect her own health as well as that of her baby. The milk should be heated. Likewise, the water. Flies must be guarded against. If the farm house becomes hot at midday, she should keep her baby under the trees.

LADY ALICE BREAD

And they're right. It's not only one of the most appetizing breads that has ever tempted kiddies; it is nourishing, wholesome, and a real body builder.

J. L. Ward, with the Piggly Wiggly organization five years and manager of the store at 3313 Connecticut avenue, says that the mothers who trade at his store are very free in their praise of Lady Alice Bread. "There is one factor," says Mr. Ward, which has made a hit with everyone, "and that is its delivery FRESH twice a day to all Piggly Wiggly stores direct from the new Piggly Wiggly bakeries."

Just try it; that's all. A loaf for everyone:

Pinaud Announces after Fifteen years of Research

A NEW CREAM

HERE in one exquisite jar is the exciting secret of a beautiful skin.

Break the seal—lift off its sea-green cover—breathe its faint fragrance. Then—test with your finger-tips its velvet texture . . .

The most famous dermatologists of America, the greatest scientists of Europe, are eloquent in its praise—this wonderful new cream.

It is actually revolutionizing the care of the skin—this wonderful new cream!

It cleanses your skin more effectively than any cold cream known.

A dash of cool water—and you wash it completely away!

It leaves your skin with a new petal-smooth loveliness.

Because the pores are cleansed so gently and yet so thoroughly—with no residue of dirt left hidden below—they contract naturally. Astringents become superfluous.

In three minutes—in one application—Pinaud's Cream cleanses. "tones," protects your skin as no combination of creams and tonics has ever been able to do!

FIRST STEP

Apply Pinaud's Cream with the finger-tips, exactly as you would any ordinary cream. Massage your face as usual, always stroking upward and outward. You can actually feel the cool rich creaminess sinking deep into the tissues to cleanse and "tone" them . . . Now comes the unique part of the treatment: Instead of simply wiping off the surplus cream and dirt, you are going to wash every trace away!

SECOND STEP

Take a pad of cotton wet in cool water (or an ordinary washcloth, if you prefer—thoroughly wet) and pat your face gently all over. The cream dissolves instantly—washes instantly away! And with it goes every trace of grime, dirt, oily shine—with it go all the clogging accumulations that enlarge the pores and age the skin—and your skin is left softer, fresher, more delicately brilliant than you ever saw it in your life!

THIRD STEP

Now dry your face with a soft towel. Powder it. So exquisitely soft and clear and fresh is the skin that you need no additional "powder base." The effects of this beautifully simple treatment are little short of magical. Pores enlarged by accumulations of dirt deep below the surface now tend to contract to normal size again. The skin, truly cleansed and exquisitely softened and protected, blooms into new beauty.

Get a free trial tube tomorrow—

and make this simple test:

Standing before the mirror in the bathroom, apply a dash of Pinaud's Cream to one cheek with one hand; then a dash of any other cream to the other cheek with the other hand. Massage them both into the skin. Now, with cool water, try to wash off the two. Pinaud's Cream "lets go" instantly, sweeping away with it all the dirt from your skin; the other cream remains sticky, greasy, unpleasant. Even after you have wiped off as much of it as you can, the two sides of your face will feel different; for the side cleansed with Pinaud's Cream will be softer, fresher, cleaner!

This simple test will bring home to you unforgettably the amazing difference between Pinaud's Cream and any other cream known to science.

THE difference between Pinaud's Cream and other creams is just this: Other creams—as every skin specialist will tell you—though they soften the skin, can not be completely removed.

The moment you apply them to the skin, you automatically push and press into the millions of tiny pores a certain amount of insoluble fat or wax which stays in and can not come out.

You wipe off only the surface cream and dirt. The rest is left clogging the pores. And this simple fact explains why so many women suffer from blackheads—enlarged pores—prematurely aged skin.

Then, perhaps, you apply an astringent, but that only closes the top of each tiny pore and seals up the deeplying dirt within. It can be of no permanent help.

All dermatologists know this. That is why they have been searching for years for a cream that would first penetrate gently into the pores—loosen every trace of dirt and grime—and then dissolve completely away.

It has taken nearly twenty years to find it—but that is exactly what Pinaud's Cream does. Because it is completely soluble in water, this remarkable cream leaves the skin really clean—with the pores unclogged and able to breathe. And Pinaud's Cream has this wonderful additional power: it supples and invigorates the skin tissues to delightful softness and freshness.

We know of no other cream that permits the skin to breathe. And unless it can breathe—unless the tiny pores can function unchecked—premature aging is the inevitable result.

There has never been a cream like this before. For now, with this one lovely jar on your toilet table, you can cleanse—invigorate—protect your skin better than the most elaborate combination treatments can do.

Pinaud's Cream has been tested by the world's greatest dermatologists in this country and abroad. Offered to the public only a short time ago—already in New York, at Newport, at Southampton, at Bar Harbor, America's loveliest women are turning to it eagerly. For experts agree that here is the greatest step forward ever taken in the scientific care of the skin.

Part of its success, of course, is due to the remarkable quality of its ingredients—which are pure, extremely costly, and of an excellence not found in ordinary commercial products.

Never have you had such an aid to skin loveliness as this. Take advantage of it this very day!

Free Offer—for this week only:

Pinaud's Cream is now on sale at the leading drug and department stores of Washington. Present the coupon below to any of these stores before Saturday and you will receive a generous free trial tube. (To make sure of getting your tube before the supply is exhausted, it would be well to present the coupon as early in the week as possible.)

LOOK AT THIS HAT THAT KID LEFT OUT IN THE RAIN — I PAID FOUR DOLLARS FOR IT LAST WEEK —

WHERE IS THAT KID? THERE'S THE COAT TO HIS NEW SUIT ON THE FLOOR — HE'S USING IT FOR A CARPET — A RUG TO WIPE HIS FEET ON —

HE HAS NO IDEA OF ANYTHING — THE MOST DESTRUCTIVE KID IN THE WORLD —

AND HERE'S HIS BANK — HE'S BROKEN INTO — I PAID FIVE DOLLARS FOR IT — AND PUT A DOLLAR INTO IT TO TEACH HIM THE SAVINGS HABIT —

WAIT TILL I GET HOLD OF HIM — JUST LET HIM COME HERE A MINUTE — I'LL TALK TO THAT BOY — HEY! CHESTER!

DON'T YOU EVER LET ME CATCH YOU LEAVING YOUR CLOTHES ON THE FLOOR AGAIN — DO YOU HEAR! YOU LEFT YOUR BEST HAT OUT IN THE RAIN ALL NIGHT — IT'S RUINED — WAIT TILL YOU HAVE TO PAY FOR THOSE THINGS YOURSELF —

AND DON'T LET ME EVER CATCH YOU BREAKING ANY MORE BANKS THAT I BUY FOR YOU TO GET THE SAVINGS THAT I PUT IN —

WHEN I BUY THESE THINGS THEY'RE GIVEN TO YOU TO KEEP — NOT TO DESTROY — AND KEEP AWAY FROM MY AUTOMOBILE TOO — SOMEBODY'S BEEN SCRATCHING IT ALL UP WITH MATCHES AND RUINED THE NEW PAINT JOB —

AND I DON'T WANT YOU TO EVER DRAW IN YOUR SCHOOL BOOKS AGAIN — EVERY BOOK IS MARKED UP — THAT MEANS MORE BOOKS — MORE MONEY FOR YOUR FATHER TO SPEND — DON'T YOU EVER LET THAT HAPPEN AGAIN!

YOU HEAR ME NOW

GEORGE IS ALWAYS IN GOOD HEALTH.

HERMAN IS VERY STRONG TOO.

I INHERIT MY STRENGTH. MY GRANDPAPY OFTEN KNOCKED DOWN A MULE WITH HIS NAKED FIST. I PERSONALLY COULD LIFT A TON. EASY.

HERMAN I CAN PUT TWO FINGERS ON YOUR SKULL IN A CERTAIN PLACE AND MAKE YOU AS WEAK AS A CAT.

YOU SIMPLY PUT YOUR TWO HANDS UNDER MY ARMS. THAT'S RIGHT. NOW WHEN I PRESS ON YOUR HEAD LIKE..... LET ME THINK.....? OH YES, I GOT IT.....NOW TRY TO LIFT ME. TRY!

READY.

UP!

YOU SAID I COULDN'T LIFT YOU. WELL NOW YOU KNOW DIFFERENT. I COULD LIFT FOUR LIKE YOU WITH THIS ONE ARM. HERE, FEEL IT! MY WHOLE CHEST AND BACK IS PRACTICALLY POULTICED WITH MUSCLES. HERE, FEEL THIS ARM, GEORGE.

LISTEN! DON'T CROW SO SOON. I MADE A MISTAKE. LET'S TAKE OFF OUR COATS AND TRY THAT AGAIN RIGHT HERMAN.

LET ME THINK.....I WANT TO MAKE SURE.....NOW I'VE GOT IT. ALL RIGHT, NOW LET'S SEE WHERE YOUR MILLION DOLLARS WORTH OF STRENGTH GETS YOU. ANYTIME—

READY? LET'S GO!

MY WORD! MY FINGER SLIPPED! WAIT! WAIT, YOU DUMBBELL UNTIL I GET—

HEY! LET GO OF MY HAIR. HEY TAKE YOUR FINGER OUT OF MY EYE!

ARE YOU TRYING TO BLIND ME!

WHEN YOU STUCK YOUR FINGER IN MY EYE MY FOOT SLIPPED. ANYHOW I GUESS YOU'RE SATISFIED THAT YOUR TRICK IS A PHONY. THAT'S DONE WITH ONE FINGER. I'VE KNOWN IT FOR YEARS.

ALL RIGHT! IF YOU'RE SO WISE SHOW ME. THIS TIME I'LL LIFT YOU.

ONE MINUTE..... I'VE GOT IT.... AND WITH ONE HAND AS YOU NOTICE.... ALL RIGHT.....DO YOUR STUFF!

READY? LET'S GO!

THERE YOU ARE! LET ME LIFT YOU HIGHER.....DON'T WRAP YOUR LEGS AROUND ME. GIVE ME A CHANCE TO....

I'M WISE. I KNOW WHY YOU WANT TO GET ME OVER YOUR HEAD.

OOF! UGH!

10-16-27

I HEARD YOU PUT GEORGE BUNGLE IN THE HOSPITAL FOR SIX MONTHS.

YES, HE NEEDED IT. HE HAD IT COMING TO HIM FOR YEARS.

SAVE ME, GEORGE!

OH, IS IT YOU? WELL WAIT THERE UNTIL I GET THIS CIGAR GOING GOOD.

WHY YOU MEN HAVEN'T SPOKEN TO EACH OTHER FOR AN HOUR.

YES EVER SINCE YOU WERE SCUFFLING IN THE NEXT ROOM.
